Celorado Roads to Substitute Steel for Wooden Bridges.

(Special to the "News.") (Special to the "News.")

Pueblo, Colo., May 22.—The disastrous wreck on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad at Eden, Colo., last summer, when 115 lives were sacrificed to a merciless mountain torrent, is bearing fruit. The wreck was caused by the washing away of a wooden bridge over a usually dry creek bed. Every railroad in Colorado has now arranged to supplant its wooden bridges, everywhere in the meuntains, by stone structures which will withstand any amount of water that may be dashed against them. Work on these bridges has already been begun by the Denver & Cure and keeps the promise.
