

THE SEMI-WEEKLY NEWS

Issued Mondays and Thursdays and Contains All the Cream of the Daily and Saturday News.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

William Calkins Injured.—President William Calkins of the Nevada Legion association fell from a ladder yesterday afternoon, breaking a collar bone. The regular meeting of the association last night was shortened on account of his absence.

Sent Body East.—The body of W. D. Peoff, who committed suicide at the Wilson Hotel Tuesday by taking carbolic acid, was shipped yesterday to the relatives at St. Louis. The authorities are still trying to locate relatives of Harry Krueger, or Enrich, who committed suicide the same day and at the same hotel by taking morphine, but so far have been unable to find them.

Hilgard Wins on a Toss.—The annual contest for the Knights of Columbus gold medal was held last evening at All Hallows college, before a large attendance. The youthful contestants acquitted themselves with credit, with the competition so close that the judges could not decide between Arthur Schuchman and Julius Hilgard for the first prize. So the two "tossed up," Hilgard winning. The efforts of Robert Young and Alfie Isom were deserving of special mention. Rev. Dean Harris awarded the medal at the close of the evening.

HOODOR PURSUES PERSISTENT MAN

E. E. Eldridge Sees Every Star of Hope Flicker and Then Wane.

TELLS TROUBLES TO JUDGE.

Out of $10 Per Month, He Must Pay $25 as Alimony—Other Ties of Marital Misdeeds.

In all his co-partnerships, E. E. Eldridge, a second-hand dealer, has been foreboded by the irony of fate. His marriage compels is the last to become shattered and with it came more trouble when he was ordered yesterday by Judge Morse in divorce court to pay his wife, Mrs. Edna Eldridge, $25 a month, pending the settlement of her suit for separate maintenance. With a salary of only $40 a month, Eldridge promised the court he would pay the amount and take a whirl in "high finance" to make ends meet.

Although his wife declared that he owned a lucrative second-hand business which brought him in an average of $175 a month, he gave no accounting of his financial affairs. As he stood before Judge Morse, he declared himself a financial wreck, having started in his business enterprise with a capital of $10, which he borrowed.

Before he was married six years ago, he formed a co-partnership with a "lady" in the second-hand business. She withdrew suddenly, taking her share of the proceeds and $50 which he belonged to him.

After this experience he went to work for a physician at $20 a month. Saving up a small amount he married. Then he landed a position with a clothing company and worked there for some time. With a little capital he went into partnership with a locksmith on west Second South street. This enterprise failed in about six months, and he was employed as a clerk in the clothing store again.

WHEN LAST TROUBLE BEGAN.
His marital troubles began at this time when his wife left him and declared that she could make a better living for herself than he could. They lived apart for several months. During this period while Eldridge was working in the clothing house, he borrowed $100 from a friend to start a business on south West Temple street, and at night he donned a carpenter's apron and built a shack 6 feet by 14 feet, and 9 feet in height. In front of this place he hung out his shingle and engaged in the second-hand business. He was unable to make enough to live on, so he formed a partnership with J. E. Hanson, a barber, who furnished some cash. Hanson was to receive one-fourth of the profits and Eldridge was to receive the lion's share and conduct the business.

When this began to pay, Mrs. Eldridge returned to her husband. Unable to stand prosperity, Eldridge moved to a house at 56 east First South street, and furnished it for his wife. Just as their prospects looked bright, the slump came a year and a half ago. His business in this 6x14-foot store was cut in two. He was unable to pay his bills. His creditors threatened to have a receiver appointed for his business. Father than disrupt the firm, Eldridge sold his interest in the business to his brother for $100 and saved his furniture.

He secured a position as manager of this business, however, and is now in charge of the business at a salary of $40 a month.

Mrs. Eldridge denies that he is in financial difficulty. He transferred his interest, she declared, to prevent her from obtaining an allowance from Judge Morse. She said that she had Eldridge's view of the matter when he made the order allowing her support.

HER LETTERS RETURNED.
Mrs. Grace L. Bondurant was granted a divorce and the custody of her daughter, Helen, 3 years old, from Lee L. Bondurant, who is now ticket agent for the Spokane and Portland route in Spokane, Wash. When he left her with her mother on July 7, 1907, he promised to send for her as soon as he was able financially. He did not write to her, she wrote letters to him which he received and returned unopened. Mrs. Bondurant secured witnesses, who saw him in Spokane and unable to pay the ransom for her, she was arrested and returned to her mother. They were married March 29, 1908.

Mrs. Christine Lang, a domestic, was granted a divorce from Albert P. Lang on the charge of failure to provide. During their married life, Lang contributed $75 to her support. He borrowed this money from her, she said. Lang is a cook and is now in Nevada where he has been for several months. They were married here July 5, 1907.

On the charge of desertion, Mrs. Clara S. Stevens Petty secured a divorce from Albert C. Petty, a carpenter. Before the suit was filed, Petty agreed to allow the case to go by default and stated that he would pay $12.50 a month for the support of their child, Lottie, 3 years old. They were married June 4, 1905, in Salt Lake City. Mr. Petty has not been heard from since.

Nora Rogers, a dressmaker, was given a decree of divorce from Laban Rogers, a miner, on the charge of desertion. They were married Oct. 21, 1900, in Boulder, Colorado, and have a child nine years old. Mrs. Rogers was granted custody of the child. Mrs. Rogers Bingley, who brought suit for divorce against William Bingley, deputy county game warden, dismissed her case. Their differences have been settled and they are now living together.

SENTENCED FOR CONTEMPT.
Dr. Gustava A. Gamble, an osteopath, was sentenced to four days' imprisonment in the county jail yesterday by Judge Morse for contempt of court when he refused to pay $25 alimony to his former wife, Mrs. Mary A. Gamble, on an order of Judge Morse by the decree. This is the third time in the last six months that Dr. Gamble has been cited to appear.

After Mrs. Gamble showed from her books that her former husband was at large about two weeks behind with the alimony, and that he had paid her nothing this month, Dr. Gamble was called to the stand. He testified that his collections came in slowly, that he carried again and had an aged mother to care for.

Judge Morse said that he believed that Dr. Gamble had intentionally disobeyed the court and pronounced sentence upon him. He had been in contempt in the witness chair dumbfounded.

"That is all for the present time, doctor," Judge Morse said pleasantly, and the prisoner was escorted to jail and locked up. Before he had been imprisoned two hours he arranged to have the alimony paid by 10 o'clock this morning as soon as the banks open. On account of his business Dr. Gamble will make an effort to have the remainder of his sentence suspended.

Dr. Gamble was divorced about a year ago, his wife alleging cruelty. They were doing business as the firm of Gamble & Gamble. When they separated, Dr. Gamble carried on the business and assumed the debts. He declared that he has been unable to pay the alimony on account of attempting to clear up debts incurred by his wife.

HAD A HANG-DOG LOOK.
With a ratty, hang-dog look in his face, Martin Grimm, Jr., son of a contractor, who betrayed, then married and deserted Mrs. Mary G. Grimm, a young and pretty girl, was cited yesterday before Judge Morse why he should not pay temporary alimony pending the settlement of her suit for divorce. Although he attempted to show that he had not been able to do so, Judge Morse ordered him to pay $40 a month toward the support of his wife and 20-month-old child, Ruby.

After marrying her Grimm refused to live with her. About six months ago she was influenced to sign an agreement in which he was to pay her $300 alimony for herself and child and release him. When she discovered that he had been carrying on a business with her money, she repudiated the agreement and sued for a divorce. When their baby was born, she testified as she held the sleeping dimpled child in her arms, that she refused to pay the doctor bills. Since they were married, Grimm has only contributed $20 to her support. She has been living with her mother, who takes in washing for a living. Her mother is now quarantined with a family she has been working for and Mrs. Grimm has been unable to provide for herself or child on account of ill health. Grimm was ordered to pay the $40 on the first day of every month.
