

Moreton - Judd Clerkship Controversy is Aired With Much Feeling.

CHARGES AND COUNTER CHARGES

They Are Made Both Against Mr. Moreton and Mr. Judd-Yellow Interviews and Investigation.

There was a fireworks display in the board of education last night. Two tones of contention manifested themselves and were promptly masticated. The first was the Moreton-Judd clerkship controversy in its second chapter, and then an interview with W. A. Nelden printed in a small evening sheet, in which the member, after strongly condemning the method of Moreton's removal, was quoted as saying he "thanked God that this was the last year his boys would be in the public schools." Results: L. P. Judd is clerk of the board and took possession of his of-fre at noon today. Member Nelden's interview will be investigated by a committee of two-members Glauque and Henderson-and the statements contained therein will either be accepted or refuted.

TOO PRESUMPTUOUS.

There was no indication of a heated session until the clerk read a letter from F. L. Palmquist, the stenographer in the clerk's office, resigning as "steographer and assistant clerk," to take effect when Mr. Moreton stepped out. Giauque suggested that Palmquist was assuming too much in resigning as "as-sistant clerk." an office which does not exist, and Newman said the letter was a slight to the president and members of the board, as it was addressed to the chairman of the finance committee. Nelden then inquired if it was not true that the employes of the clerk's office were under the direction of the finance committee. The stenographer came to the rescue by changing the form of his letter, and his resignation was then ac-

QUESTIONS NEW CLERK.

The new clerk's bond was then presented for approval and Clerk Moresented for approval and Clerk More-ton was about to begin reading it when Nelden arose quietly with the statement that before the bond was approved, he desired to ask Judd, who was present, several questions. The member held a sheet of paper in his hand, apparently covered with ques-tions. He turned to Judd and began: "Tou say you have lived here three 'You say you have lived here three regard as a remarkable circumstance, your words are too harsh, Mr. Moyle. The statement you make is unwarranted. MOYLE WITHDRAWS.

"That may be," answered Moyle. "Til withdraw the statement, but I have given you my reasons for making it." Moyle continued that it had been brought to his ears that the board was afraid to let Moreton go, as he knew things about certain members, and they At this point, Geoghegan, thoroughly disgusted and making no effort to con-ceal the fact, put on his coat and left the meeting.

NELDEN'S OBJECTIONS.

Nelden's reply to Moyle was sharp. Mr. Moyle failed to speak of that other caucus, that secret caucus," he said, "where the six of you got together and fixed this thing up. That was no way to remove him. Why didn't some way to remove him. Why didn't some of you come and talk with me and other members. You would have found us ready listeners. Why get off by your-selves and fix this thing up, then call us in to help you do it. It isn't the removal of Moreton that I object to; it is the method of his removal.

"And this is a strange time to bring charges against Moreton. On the floor Tuesday night I challenged any member to bring a charge against the clerk, and none did. I am sick of these twelfth hour arraignments and sickening innuendos. "Why, I walked home with Mr. Movie the other night and he said to me and another gentleman who was with us that he had nothing against Moreton that he liked him, and that if he had not given his word to Prof. Cummings, he would have voted for Moreton. Now, think of that." Nelden gave as his reasons for wanting to question Judd the fact that the board knew nothing about the man. A SERIOUS CHARGE.

"I know that Judd ran a cigar store here in this city with a card room in the rear, where men played cards for cigars. Now, Mr. Moyle says that he has enough charges against Moreton to fill a book. If so, he has not fulfilled his eath of office in not bringing them out long ago. "So far as that interview is concerned, I made that statement. I said that if the methods which removed Moreton are to exist, I thanked God that this was the last year of my boys in school. And I mean it. I would rather have a yellow dog for a friend than a man who would yote against me without giving me a reason.

THOSE SAFFRON INTERVIEWS.

Glauque talked for some time on the small evening sheet story, as well as an interview in the morning edition of the same paper. He had thought that Mr. Nelden was manly enough to take defeat gracefully and in his contains the statements of Nalden in opinion the statements of Neiden in the papers would do the schools more harm than anything that has occurred in years. Think of a member saying our schools are not as good as they were a few years ago," he exclaimed. "I suppose Mr. Nelden means that since he ceased to be president of the board, the schools have fallen from their standard. I should think that any member who would make such a statement ought to resign."

NELDEN MISQUOTED.

"Well, I made the statement and I maintain it and can prove it," said Nelden. "But the entire latter half of that interview is not true and I have asked the Tribune to retract it. They asked the Tribune to retract it. They misquoted me in some material things."

This matter was no sooner disposed of than President Moyle, calling Young to the chair, took the floor to speak to a question of personal priva lege. He began with the statement that inaccurate statements had appeared in the press concerning the Moreton-Judd affair. "We did not consider it necessary to ublish to the world the criticisms we against Mr. Moreton," he said. and I don't deem it necessary to enter into an arraignment of him here. At a caucus to which every member was invited and which all attended, except Mr. Young, I think Mr. Goeghe-Em moved that the action of the caucas be maintained in open session, so as to avoid all discussion and controthere why a change was deemed advisable in the clerk's office. They were good reasons. Every member expressed himself. Why should we be harangued for not parading our rea-sons before the public? Mr. Moreton has not been perfect, as you would think from some of the talk of those who did not stand by the decision of the caucus. He has been out of harnony-yes, has had trouble with every superintendent, with principals and charge. I don't regret it. I would do it again. Mr. Moreton is honest, as far as I know, but it would take up all night to attempt to tell the reasons of this change. A year ago we had to reprimand him by a unanimous vote. I tell you there were reasons and good Now we are critcized for bringing in a new man, one whom we do not know, while Prof. Cummings is criticized because he does know him."

A "YELLOW" INTERVIEW.

President Moyle continued by producing a copy of the paper containing the censational interview with Mr. Neiden. He expressed the hope that he had been misquoted.

"I said it: I said it all," declared Mr. Nelden, "and I mean it." "Then I am grievously disappointed. "Then I am grievously disappointed. Think of it. A member of this board saying, or intimating, that the schools are going to rack and ruin! Its the first time you ever thought that, Mr. Neiden."

"Its the first time I ever had occasion to think it," retorted Nelden. "The schools are decaying, are they, ecause your friend Moreton is re-loved? That's it, is it? Well, I want the joy of feeling perfectly well? moved? reton's removal was because things go right when you are free from could find out anything about it. "I insist upon Mr. Moyle withdrawing that statement or taking his scat,'

"It has been said," continued Giau-que, "that if the 'Mormons' ever got in control of the board, the schools in control of the board, the schools would deteriorate. I use the term 'Mor-mon' because it is evident what is meant by a certain religious element." "That is the first time the word was ever used on this floor," said Nelden. Glauque went on in a peaceful strain, refuting the idea that any attempt was being made to place the "Mormon element" in control of the board. He said he could not help resenting the statements made by Neiden and he therefore offered a resolution providing for a committee of two to investigate the effect of Neiden's statements, and the effect of Nelden's statements, and their truth or falsity.

"If these statements are true, we ought to know it. If they are false we ought to state it to the world." WILL INVESTIGATE IT.

"Well, go ahead and state it," put in Nelden, "you don't need a committee. Cummings spoke briefly in defense of himself. Young made a caim talk in opposition to the resolution. He urged that it was unnecessary; that the soon-er the subject was dropped, the sooner it would be forgotten; that men in the heat of temper often say things they would not otherwise say. "And why should we get into a flurry and appoint committees, and all that sort of thing, because certain statements appeared in some lurid publica-tions. They will not leave any effect." On rollcall, the resolution was passed, Young and Cheesman voting against it, Henderson and Geoghegan being ab-sent. Nelden voted, "Aye."

CLOSE TO TWO MILLION MARK.

Building Inspector Ulmer's Report for 1903 Makes a Splendid Showing for Salt Lake-Vast Additional Sum for Buildings That Were Begun in 1902.

In his annual report filed with Mayor Morris, yesterday afternoon, City Building Inspector F. M. Ulmer stated that there were 641 building-permits issued during the year 1903, representing a valuation of $1.645,035. On account of parties under-estimating the value of their buildings, it is safe to add 20 per cent to the above amount to obtain a fair value of the buildings constructed during the year. This would make their value $1,974,042. In addition to this there was a vast sum expended for buildings commenced in 1902, Nine buildings were condemned by the inspector during the year, and also one chimney and two foundations. Three notices of illegal construction were served. The report follows in full:
