

Burrows gave himself up to the officers and was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $800.

Rathbone Lodge No. 9 K. of P. was organized at Scofield last night with forty members. Grand Chancellor J. P. Meskin was here, also members of the grand lodge from Salt Lake, Ogden and Provo, as well as quite a number of the Castle Gate lodge. A good time was had.

We are having beautiful weather, and the people who come here from the lower valleys enjoy very much the fresh mountain air and the cold clear water from the sparkling brooks.

MORMON BOY.

"Stay with them until you get them," was the order issued by Sheriff Hardy Monday to Deputies Gibbs and Smith, in response to a telegram sent by them from Evanston, Wyoming, Monday morning, saying they were six hours behind Fred George and Pat Cochran, the alleged horse thieves from this city who tried to kill Sheriff Harrington and his deputy, Earl Williamson, of Summit county, on Saturday. The Utah officers have been joined by Wyoming officers in the pursuit.

Sheriff Hardy instituted the attempt to arrest the two desperadoes, whom he had reason to believe have committed many thefts heretofore. George is 20 years of age and Cochran 24, but their actions the past few days show them to be sadly in need of prison reform.

In starting out from Salt Lake on Friday, the thieves were accompanied by a young man who claims not to know their character or errand, and therefore his name is withheld. About fifteen miles up Emigration canyon this young man refused to go further. He claimed they were thieves, and refused to accompany them to Wyoming. Thereupon they robbed him of $12, shot his horse and left him to return here on foot. Sheriff Hardy learned of this, and sent Deputies Gibbs and Smith out. At the same time he notified the Summit county officers.

Sheriff Harrington and Earl Williamson started after the thieves, trailing them a considerable distance. Following up Crandall creek they came upon them, Cochran opening fire. The bullet struck the sheriff's saddle, and a piece cut the sheriff's face. Harrington returned the fire, but his gun, an old Winchester he had borrowed in haste, got out of repair, and he was powerless. George opened fire from the brush, and Sheriff Harrington and Mr. Williamson had to retire, as they were taken at a disadvantage. From that point the desperadoes got over into Wyoming, where Deputies Gibbs and Smith have closed in upon them as stated. Further information is expected hourly regarding the chase in the Wyoming mountains.

After a long and tedious search Sheriff John McKellar of Tooele county has succeeded in unearthing evidence which will no doubt open up some of the mysteries that have long remained unsolved in regard to wholesale stealing which has been going on in his and surrounding counties.

About a week ago Mr. C. S. Wilkes, part owner of cottages in the vicinity of Garfield Beach, discovered that three or four cottage doors had been wrenched from their hinges and carted off to parts unknown. He accordingly reported his loss to the officers and they immediately started in pursuit. In the meantime a hold-up was reported at the Richville grist mill, in which night miller Herbert Vowles had a rather rough experience. It appears that just as Mr. Vowles was preparing to shut down the mill, two men drove up in a light rig, and one of them stepped into the mill and ordered four hundred of flour. After getting the flour they proceeded to drive off without paying for it, when Mr. Vowles told them that if they didn't pay the $7 due for the flour, he would bring his Winchester into play.

The men, seeing that Vowles intended to put his threat into execution, rushed at him, knocking him down and choking him so that he could not summon assistance by his cries. Then they secured a rope and bound him hand and foot, and, after beating him unmercifully, fled.

Mr. Vowles was in this position for about three hours, when the day miller appeared and severed the cords with which he was bound.

After telling his story to the day miller, word was sent to Tooele and the deputy and his sheriff were soon on the track. They at once came to the conclusion that the doors and the flour had been stolen by the same parties and therefore were on the lookout for both.

From the description given of the men, and the direction traveled, it was thought they might find what they wanted at Fenstermaker's ranch, and accordingly they set out in that direction, reaching the place very early in the morning. On knocking at the door, Amos appeared and recognizing the sheriff, asked him what he wanted at that very early hour. The sheriff read the warrant to him, after which Amos invited him and his deputy inside giving them perfect liberty to ransack the house and at the same time assuring that there was no flour there.

After a thorough search of the house, the officers turned their attention to the yard, and looking into a wagon box, the stolen doors were found nailed together and imbedded in hay.

When asked where they came from the old man Fenstermaker said that his son Perry had bought them from a stranger in Salt Lake. Perry was looked for but could not be found and it is supposed that he smelled a rat and skipped.

The officers think that Perry has gone to his ranch in Grouse creek and that in all probability the flour will be found there. Further developments will be awaited with interest.

FUNERAL OF M. A. ARROWSMITH.

The funeral services over the remains of Sister M. E. Arrowsmith were held at the tabernacle, Payson, Friday last at 4 p. m. The Second ward choir was in attendance, and after singing the opening prayer was offered by Elder James E. Hulseb. Elder Charles Brewerton was the first speaker, and great stress was laid in his remarks upon the existence of a Divine Being and the glories of a resurrection. He was followed in a like strain by Elder H. W.

Barnett, who also made feeling reference to the husband of the deceased, now filling a mission in England, and who, the speaker suggested, might be at that instant in the discharge of his duties singing hymns and speaking praises of God and the glories of His everlasting Gospel.

Bishop John E. Hulseb was the next speaker and after consoling remarks to friends of the deceased and the little daughter who was thus left without a living relative in Utah, he considered it necessary and proper to refute some charges which had been made, tending to lay the blame for the sad event upon those who managed the excursion to Castilla on the 24th, and also in relation to other events which took place on that occasion. Had the affair been conducted on the Sabbath day, Brother Hulseb remarked, there might have been cause for complaint, but the excursion was arranged for on a day when people desire and should have a time of enjoyment and pleasure. It was well conducted in every respect. He had been in attendance himself and while he strongly urged upon parents the necessity of accompanying their children on such occasions, he had seen nothing immoral or out of the way at the time and place in question, beyond some intoxication on the part of boys. This was strongly censured and as before stated, parents urged to look closer after their children on any such occasion. The physicians in attendance upon Sister Arrowsmith had stated that the lady was affected with lung trouble or a stage of consumption and that in accordance with the natural laws governing the human body would not have long existed. Every attention was shown the lady during her short illness by the brethren and sisters in attendance.

Bishop John E. Page closed with a few comforting remarks and suggested that the prayers of the assembly go up in behalf of Bro. Arrowsmith that the Spirit of God might comfort him when he received the sad news of his bereavement.

Another hymn was sung by the choir and the benediction offered by Elder J. J. McClellan.

The casket was opened in the vestibule of the tabernacle and the immense throng of people present passed slowly out taking their last farewell of the sister who had so suddenly passed from life's cares and troubles to a glorious life beyond.

The casket, a lovely one trimmed with white brocaded silk velvet was covered with beautiful floral offerings. The cortege, consisting of some thirty vehicles, proceeded to the cemetery where, after a dedicatory prayer by Elder David Fawne, the remains were consigned to their last resting place.

The family having no relatives in Payson, the funeral arrangements were taken in hand by Brother Joseph B. Douglas, who spared no pains or expense in the matter. Brother Douglas has also provided a home for little Annie, the ten-year-old daughter of the deceased, in his family, and Brother Arrowsmith may rest assured that her every want will be attended to by kind and loving friends and that the sympathy and prayers of the Saints are with him in the hours of his sad bereavement.
