THE BANDED SAILOR.

No hat is more becoming to the youthful face than the plain ribbon-banded sailor of medium-height crown and wide brim, and nothing is less attractive on a woman who has passed her first youth. It is the severity of its shaping which is trying to all but youth. This year it is best in the white and light-colored straws, coarse effects and fine milans, with bandings of gaily hued silk ribbon, or the colored elastic bands, which can be changed frequently.

At the K. of P. hall. A large number of friends were in attendance. Music intermingled with cards made a very pleasant evening. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. S. H. Jones and Miss Tillie Foster, both formerly of Saint George, entertained Saturday evening at the home of the latter, the students from Saint George, who are in attendance at the B. Y. Progressive games, music and refreshments were the order of the evening and the wifely hour of mid-night had passed when the last guest said good-night.

Last Sunday a quiet reunion of the Paxman family was held at the home of W. R. H. Paxman. The presence in this city of Mrs. Ann R. Paxman and all of her sons and daughters—most of whom were in attendance on the Sunday school convention—suggested the affair. In addition to the immediate family there were many grandchildren and other relatives present. Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Busath of Salt Lake were present with three of the great-grandchildren of the venerable guest of honor. Dinner was served to 53 persons in all. Mrs. E. M. Paxman, Mrs. Isaac Gadd and Mrs. A. C. Busath assisting in serving. Mrs. Paxman is the widow of William Paxman, late president of the Utah stake, and is nearly 80 years of age. The opportunity of meeting with her in a family reunion and discussing family reminiscences was greatly appreciated.

THE "DORIS," WITH FLOWER TRIMMINGS.

Extremes in straw hats appear to have at last reached their limits, and the tendency is now toward those of rather moderate dimensions. Fine straw and leghorns have rather high square or rounded crowns and irregularly shaped brims, while others are set squarely upon the head and minus a bandeau or under-brim decoration. Most of the trimming, whether of flowers, feathers, velvet ribbons or all three combined, as is frequently the case, is piled upon the crown, and usually a broad effect is sought. Forget-me-nots and red roses with blue ribbon trim this novel shape styled the "Doris."

Tuesday and Wednesday, from Salt Lake. He expects to join his family at Ocean Park, California, the early part of next week.
