Disinherited Taxpayers Enter Vigorous Protest Against

CLUTE'S EXCESSIVE TAXATION.

Two More Nights Will End the Time for Hearing Complaints.

The crowd of exonerated taxed property holders at the Board of Equalization last night was as large as ever. Mayor Scott presided. The following complainants were in attendance: Spafford, Karrick, Pollard, Hyde, Harby, Anderson, Lyon and Heath.

The following complaints were heard: Benjamin W. Hale who has been an invalid for two years asked a remission of his taxes.

Albert Hoff stated that his property was assessed $2,500 in advance of last year's assessment and his income had been $1,000; besides it was more than the property was worth.

James S. Brown said that the city assessment on his real estate was $25,000, while the county assessment on the same property was $14,000. Clute had also assessed his personal property at $5,000 while he was only worth $1,000. In addition to this he was assessed for six acres of property he did not own.

The Salt Lake City Street Railroad company represented that Mr. Clute's assessment of his property was $125,000 in excess of the county assessment, which was heavy.

Mrs. A. H. Hender complained of excessive valuation.

Mrs. Ann A. Robinson objected to paying taxes on property she did not own.

J. W. Carrigan's property that was assessed at $10,000 last year was this year assessed at $15,000.

Mrs. A. H. Hender represented that he was assessed for $4,000 worth of property when he had none.

Mrs. J. P. Ringstrom complained that her property was assessed too high.

John McDonald made a protest, in which he stated that his property was assessed for $2,000 more than it was worth.

Frederick Benner sent in a communication from Lowell, Mass., in which he graphically pictured Clute's assessment of an old man who had no value other than that of a relic. It would probably bring $100,000.

George A. Newell, a widow with no income, asked a reduction on account of excessive valuation.

Matthew Callen represented that Clute had assessed his property at $10,000. The county assessment was $5,000.
