

way, with the troops of camels blinking sheepishly in the rear. They were not in condition, and their humps were flabby. To the ignorant Indians and Mexicans they were supernatural and regarded with awe. The beasts were put in a corral outside of town.

"For days nothing was discussed but camels. To the man in Yuma the freak of Hi Jolly came as a welcome diversion, and created half the sensation the Arabian beasts of burden did. Jolly believed they would solve the transportation question in the arid deserts, and there were many who shared the opinion. But the camels were not a success.

They were utilized at times, experimented with, but their use was never put on a paying basis. "It was found that a camel required more food than a horse. I don't know how the camel does in Arabia, but in Arizona he was a rank failure. The clumsy animals were hunted, captured alive, and many were sold in after years to circuses and shows, and it is true that many of the far famed Arabian camels of the three ring shows of

"I came to know Hi Jolly and found him one of the most eccentric characters I have ever met. He was unique. No other man would have conceived the idea of importing camels to Arizona. After I left Yuma, Hi one day, in disgust, opened his corral and drove the camels out to shift for themselves.

"As soon as they were common property the animals were hunted, captured alive, and many were sold in after years to circuses and shows, and it is true that many of the far famed Arabian camels of the three ring shows of the last 20 years were born and bred in Arizona.

"From time to time in recent years reports have been made by prospectors and Indians of the discovery of camels, but little faith was put in the stories, as it was believed the animals had all perished. About three years ago, however, while prospecting in the southwestern part of Arizona, I came across unmistakable tracks of camels. I saw the footprints of camels in the sand, which could not have been there for very long."—New York Herald.

"RISK ONE EYE."

Washington.—A certain Chicago woman, in the judgment of the postoffice authorities, has been using the mails for improper purposes. After the case had been duly investigated and a report against the woman had been rendered, the postmaster general issued a fraud order barring her letters from the mails. When the fair Chicagoan heard of this she was much moved. She wrote a most pathetic letter to the postmaster general, asking for a personal and prirate hearing, at which she could lay her side of the case before him.

"I feel sure," she wrote, "that if I could get a chance to look you straight in your beautiful brown eyes you would hear my story."

Mr. Payne was filled with mingled emotions when he read this epistle. He thought it over a few moments and then endorsed the letter. "Respectfully referred to the secretary of war for advice," and sent it to the war department. It went through the regular channels, and in due course came back with the following endorsement: "Risk one eye. Billie Root."—New York Times.
