principally devoted to the promut-gation of the Gospel abroad. The Latter-day Saints occupy a peculiar position in the world, compared with the people of the United States this people were a handful, and yet they created more excitement than any other people upon the face of the earth. The tendency of the gospel was to make mankind better than they had been, and where such was not the case, it was because they didinot practice the principles they professed. Then why should the world feel so much opposed to the Saints? In his own experience he had realized that there was more power sitending the preaching of the gospel than any of the other sects or parties, and he was satisfied that this power affect-cd all who heard, and while it caused a feeling of joy in the hearts of those who embraced the
