

"BILL ARP" IS DEAD

Death Was Result of Operation For Gall Stones.

Cartersville, Ga., Aug. 24.—Major Charles H. Smith, widely known as "Bill Arp," died at his home, "The Shadows," tonight after an illness of many months and 17 years. Following an operation for the removal of gall stones several days ago, he became gradually weaker, most of the time unconscious, until death.

Bill Arp was the father of nine children, five sons and four daughters. His fame as a humorist dates back to ante-bellum days, when he kept the entire south and much of the north in a continuous roar of laughter. Those were the days when he wrote over the name of Sam McCrackin in the Rome, Ga., Courier, in which city he then lived. McCrackin was a famous character in his balladry. A well-digger by trade, a not by profession and a droll Irish story-teller by occupation. One day while McCrackin was digging a well a pile of rock and earth caved in on him, and when poor Sam was excavated, he was dead. With respect to his military career, the title and the fact that of Bill Arp, after another odd, curious character in Rome, Arp, or Earp, as the original spelled his name, was a native of Rome, and fairly shared honors with McCrackin as the drollest, oddest character in the village.

Bill Arp, prior to the war, wrote mostly on political matters, satirizing local, state and national politicians, and his letters were copied in all the leading papers of the country. He has also made a specialty of his "Advice to Farmers," in which he would discuss matters economic, domestic and otherwise. They were much after the same order as R. K. Munkittrick has been writing for Harper's Weekly recently. Arp was a graduate of Franklin college, the state university of Georgia, at Athens. In 1850 he married a daughter of Judge Nathan L. Hutchins. He soon afterward took up the study of law, not so much for the purpose of practicing it as that he might use it in his writing, combining law with humor.

Arp's father was a Massachusetts man and his mother a South Carolina. He himself espoused the southern cause in the war. He was a strong Presbyterian and worked for his church. Of his large family of children, three sons and three daughters are married. One is a physician, two civil engineers and one an editor.

STRIKERS ATTACK A BOSS.

Seven Men Severely Kicked and Beat One Man.

McKeesport, Pa., Aug. 24.—Rioting in the vicinity of the Port Vue Theatrical company's plant continues. Tonight a gang of seven strikers attacked Benjamin Hodgson, a boss at the mill, and severely beat and kicked him.

When attacked, Hodgson was just in front of his home, and his wife went to her husband's aid, and hurled a brick at John Grundis, hitting him between the eyes and knocking him unconscious.

By this time the strikers were reinforced, and Mrs. Hodgson testified before an alderman that William Fletcher kicked her in the abdomen. A squad of police arrived on the scene and arrested seven of the strikers. Vice President Gibson of the Amalgamated association gave bail in the sum of $400 for the release of the men.

KIDNAPPED GIRL ESCAPES.

Returns to Her Parents Who Thought Her Dead.

Urbana, Ill., Aug. 24.—Madie Demlow, who nearly 10 years ago was kidnapped from her home in this city, succeeded in effecting her escape and returned to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Demlow, today. The parents had long believed their daughter dead, and while a captive of the gypsies the girl had been told that her parents had both died. She was 16 years old when abducted and had been compelled to travel over the entire country, impersonating the part of a blind girl, selling trinkets. Several years ago some one had taken pity on the supposedly sightless girl and given her a calf.

This she attached to the gypsy train and sold last week in Alabama. With the proceeds from this sale she bought a ticket to this city.

The motion to have the default set aside, which had been pending several months and has been argued at two hearings before Judges Harrison and Simpson, has been denied.

The affidavits of County Atty. F. H. Boardman and Frank Mubachek were read to the court today to show that Ames did not have permission to stay away from Minneapolis, and that he was a fugitive from the time he left Louisville for New Hampshire, resisting extradition to the best of his ability.

She caught her companion and together they were precipitated down the steep side of the glacier, 300 feet upon the rocks below.

Miss Mills' left leg was broken and both were terribly bruised. They were seen by campers, who took them to a nearby hotel and called a physician.

ABOLITIONIST BLAZER DEAD

Was Leader of the Underground Railway Movement in Illinois.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—John Blazer, known in slavery times as one of the foremost abolitionists in Illinois and a leader in the underground railway movement, is dead here.

Mr. Blazer was born in Washington county, Pa., on May 12, 1814. He knew both Lincoln and Douglas, and was a staunch Lincoln man. Between 1830 and 1850 he helped over 200 slaves to gain their freedom. On one occasion Mr. Blazer was caught in the act of helping a slave escape. So great was the feeling at that time that people from miles around offered to pay his fine and support his family in case he was convicted. The case was dropped, however.

LOST HIS FAMILY.

Gustave E. Aften Asks Police to Help Him Find Them.

New York, Aug. 25.—Gustave E. Aften, who claims to be a representative of the New South Wales government recently arrived from France, has asked the police to aid in searching this city for his wife and two little children who got lost Saturday night and have disappeared so completely that he can find no trace of them.

Aften says he is studying building construction for his government. When they came here three weeks ago they took rooms in Greenwich avenue. It was from there that the mother, the boy four and a half years, and the girl three and a half years, started out to a corner grocery. That was the last seen of them. The woman could not speak English and had no knowledge of the city streets.

TURKEY RAISING FOR PROFIT.

Before a recent Wisconsin farmers' institute Mrs. Graber read an interesting paper on the care and management of turkeys for profit, from which the following paragraphs are taken:

Hoping to aid those interested, I will give my ideas and methods of turkey raising. I have the pure-bred White Holland turkeys, and keep four hens and a gobbler.

I got 117 eggs. When two hens were ready to sit I set them and put the rest of the eggs under chicken hens, so as to have the young turkeys as early and nearly the same age as possible. The two turkey hens not set laid again. When hatched, I put the turkey hens and chicken hens in separate coops, but quite close together. These coops were all put into a pen 12 feet square, made of fine mesh woven wire two feet high. The pen cost me $2.35 for wire and $1 for lumber for top and bottom rails and braces to strengthen the corners. The rails were 2x3 inch pieces 12 feet long. This pen was movable and was chained to a fence in a grassy place once a week, and kept the pouls from straying away from the mothers.

I kept them in this pen for two weeks, then removed it, but kept the mothers in coops one week longer, then let them roam at will. But White Holland turkeys do not wander so far away as the other breeds. They are more like cornmeal, cracked wheat, boiled potatoes, or anything that contains no salt. Do not feed too much whole wheat or oats to turkeys, for it is not good for them, but a little is good for a change. One of the best foods is sour milk curd, and it can be mixed with dry cornmeal and is excellent. I sometimes pour boiling water on the meal and feed warm; it is greatly relished by either turkeys or chicks.

Be sure to always keep fresh, clean water and grit before them all the time. Now, this sounds like doing a great deal, but in reality it is not very much, as you need not feed more than one kind of feed at a meal. Just give a variety at different times.

I have 50 very nice young turks now and most of them are large enough to fly upon the fence to roost. And if you could see my nice flock of pure white turkeys running over the green grass you would say it is a pretty sight. They are very tame and peaceable and most prolific layers. Hens will lay three or four times if not allowed to sit.

I never shut my turkeys in the coop, for they love liberty (they are true Americans, you know), and if shut in they will require a man and boy to keep them from running all over the country.

Any one having raised this variety of turkeys would not go back to other kinds which require a man and boy to keep them from running all over the country.

In this package you get both liquid and powder. This is the Large Size.

"THE GREAT SALT LAKE Present and Past,"

—BY— JAMES E. TALMACE,

Ph. D. F. R. S. E., F. G. S., Professor of Geology, University of Utah.

A Book of 110 Pages, beautifully illustrated. The first complete and authentic work on the renowned saline sea.

Price 25 Cents.

Postage prepaid. For sale by the Deseret News and all news dealers.

After the first week you can feed cornbread with onion tops, chopped fine, chickens and lay right in the chicken nests, and one need not spend days and days watching them to find the nests.

When sitting you can set them any place you please, where they cannot be annoyed by other turkeys and chickens. When sitting them is the time to rid them of lice, for if a young turkey has lice you can count it lost. Get two and one-half pounds of sulphur and one-half drachm of liquid carbolic acid, costing 25 cents. Mix well together and shake three times plentifully through the feathers of each turkey and chicken when you set them. This powder will kill every louse in 24 hours. Never put it on the little turkeys or chickens, although it will not hurt them to get it off of the old turkey. If you do not see a single louse, put it on them anyhow, for there will surely be some before the eggs hatch. If the old turkeys have no lice and are kept in a clean place, you need have no fear for the little pouls.

The reason I put the coops close together is that then the chickens and chickens become good friends and will always keep near together when turned into a pasture. You see, the turkeys will coax the little ones out to the fields, and the chickens will lead them back for their meals, and together they fight off hawk or crow.

My neighbors remark about seeing the chicken flocks following the turkeys around the fields, and then marching home for their food.

New about feeding young turkeys: When put into the coop, always put in some coarse sand and let this be their first feed.

Never feed turkeys until at least 35 hours old; then give sand and dry bread crumbs. If bread is too hard to crumble, dip it in water or sweet skim-milk. Squeeze dry and do not feed oftener than three times a day. Never feed more than they will eat clean.

After two days, fine oatmeal and a little millet seed may be given, but continue to feed crumbs for a week or more. If the weather is damp or rainy, I boil one-half cupful of cheap rice in water until rice is soft; also boil an egg hard, chop fine and mix with the rice. Now add dry bread crumbs enough for a meal and mix all together and feed warm. This will prevent bowel trouble and should be fed once a week for four weeks; then, unless they have like, they will be immune from bowel trouble.

After the first week you can feed cornbread with onion tops, chopped fine,

SSS THE BEST TONIC

In S. S. S. Nature has provided a tonic suited to every requirement of the system when in a debilitated, run down condition. It contains no strong minerals or drugs, but is a pleasant vegetable preparation. You can find no better remedy for toning up the nerves and bringing refreshing, restful sleep when in a low state of health, or sick and worn out with work or worry.

S. S. S. improves the appetite, aids the digestion and reinforces the system, and its good effects are seen almost from the first dose. It acts promptly in cases of chronic dyspepsia, indigestion and all stomach troubles, and does away with the uncomfortable fullness, nausea, shortness of breath, drowsiness and dizziness that so often come after eating.

S. S. S. is not only the best tonic but possesses alternative or purifying properties, and if there is any taint, humor or poison in the blood it searches it out, and removes it. Many times a low state of health is due to a bad condition of the blood and can only be remedied by a blood purifier and tonic combined, or such a remedy as S. S. S.

If you suffer from debility, insomnia, nervousness, loss of appetite, bad digestion, or any of the symptoms of a disordered blood, nothing will so soon put your blood in good condition, invigorate and tone up the system as S. S. S.
