Memphis women have discovered what women's clubs can do, Co-opcia-tion is the new watchword with wom-en's organizations throughout the country. At a gathering of the women's clubs held at Memphis under the guidance of The Delineator, more than 2000 people were present. Many were turned away from the Lyceum Theater, where the mass meeting was held. Mrs. Virgina Frazer Boyle, the writer, presided over

G NEWS SATURDAT "The interest and activity of both not cease with the Revolution. As long as they lived they were keen crit-ies and valued counselors. Mrs. War-ren's History of the Revolution' is an important work for the student, if its labored and pedantic styles makes it an impossible one for the general reader; while the letters Mrs. Adams continued to write from Paris and from London when Mr. Adams was repre-senting the country there, and from the White House when she was its mistress, stand among the very best published letters of women. It is in-teresting to note how these letters of Mrs. Adams have stood the test of time and are circulating today, while Mrs. Warren's dramas and histories, so useful in their hour, have long ago-been retired to the back shelf of spe-cial libraries."

The November American Magazine contains a little three-page article which contains as much genuine human interest as could be crowded into so small a space. It is a document on drunkenness, and is nothing more than the plain story of what the wife of a drunkard suffers. It is called "Where the Blow Strikes." Here is the poor woman's conclusion:

the plain story of what the wife of a drunkard suffers. It is called "Where the Blow Strikes." Here is the poor woman's conclusion: "I have sometimes felt sad that I had no children, but I thank God for it now. That is one thing I have been spared. Alcohol has robbed me of love, all hap-piness, and all hope of a comfortable home, but God in his mercy has spared who might have been idiots or epilep-tics. "I know numbers of people engaged in the whisky business, having lived at one time in a section of the country where it was made. They are all pros-percus, have beautiful homes, live ele-gantly, and seem happy. They live In uvary because of the weakness of the wretches who cannot resist the temp-tiving on the money that should have gone to make comfortable homes for women such as I, while I, at any mo-ment, may have to start into the world to battle for the actual necessities of life. There have been times when I have rushed in from the street with only one thought in my bread. I rushed to the bathmed. It such al screamed. It seemed the only way to relieve the pain in my head. I rushed to to drown the sound, and screamed until exhausted. "I am and informed upon the subject: that I am not competent to judge what is best for the country. Perhaps not, ut causes than I?" THACKERAY'S MARRIAGE THOUGHTS.

THACKHATTS MARKHAGE THOUGHTS. Of course every dutiful man tells everything to every dutiful wife. True love is better than glory, and a tranquil fireside with the woman of your heart seated by it, the greatest good the gods san send to us. Indeed, what con be more provoking, after a dispute with your wife, than to find it is you, and not she, who has been in the wrong? They live together, and they dine to-gether, and they say. 'My dear' and. 'My love'' as heretafore; but the man is himself and the woman herself; that dream of love is over. In the name of my wife I write the completion of hope and the summit of happiness; and to think of her is to praise God.—From Mrs. Charles Mason Fairbanks's "Sense and Sentiment of Thackeray."

"I doubt if there were two men among the patriots who had a clearer view of the situation from the start than Mercy Otis Warren and Abigail Smith Adams, wife of President John Adams, or whether today, with all our higher education and enlarged oppor-tunities, we are able to produce a bet-ter type than these two women-pro-ducts of the best traditions of their day. the meeting. Fifty-three organiza-tions were represented. As Bishop Thomas F. This served as the key-note of the meeting. stepped upon the platform he said, "The thical ideals of a mation will never be higher than the ethical ideals of its women." This served as the key-note of the meeting. The Memphis Housekeepers' club is typical of the organizations of that city. It gave the city its first play-grounds, seven in number. It instituted the annual cleaning day, and intro-duced domestic science into the public schools. It so stirred up the city fath-ers that a Civic Progress league was organized. Through its efforts shade trees are being planted over the city, and $300 has been raised for a ther-culosis hospital. Its present work is the establishing of hygienic family laundries in every ward of the city. Each one of the 52 clubs reported, and each had some similar progress and good work to show. Ask a suffragist to describe the com-mander-in-chief of the woman suffrage army-writes Ada Patterson in the December Human Life-and, she will answer, "She is so pretty." Ask anyone of any suffrage faith or unfaith, who has had a gimpse of her in any assemblage, and the answer will be. "She is so well gowned. Of deep-rooted convictions, she is never irritatingly aggressive. Her weapon in the fray for equal suffrage is cool, inescapable logic. The litany of her accomplishments, recited by an enthusiastic friend is: "She is an all-round woman, a hard student and logical thinker, a good housekeeper, a fine cook, an enthusi-astic gardener and cultivator of flow-ers, a tasterul milliner and dressmater, and a most loyal friend, possessing equally the housewife's gift and the genus of leadership.'' day. "Both were Massachusetts born-both came from familles of intelligence and serious purpose, before they were 20 both had married educated men who were active in the government of Mass-achusetts and who from the first re-sisted Great Britain's growing tenden-cles to exploit the colonies. Neither Abigait Smith nor Mercy Otis ever had anything of what we should call school-ing. They had been taught at home to read and write and keep accounts, and that was the end of it; but they had practised unlimited letter writing. "The approach of the Revolution day

"The approach of the Revolution found them both women with families, Mrs. Warren living at Plymouth and Mrs. Adams at Braintree. Familiar with every detail of colonial polities as they were, their homes were soon cen-ters of red-hat patriotism, The Adams-es and Warrens had been accustomed to visiting and writing back and forth, and as the troubles grew their intim-acy became closer.
