

The Judge's Saw Logs.

In the village of W— lived a man who had once been Judge of the county, and was known all round by the name of Judge F—. He kept a store and saw mill, and was always sure to have the best of a bargain on his side, by which means he had gained an ample competency, and some did not hesitate to call him the "biggest rascal in the world." He was very conceited withal, and used to delight in bragging of his business capacity when any one was near to listen. One rainy day, as quite a number were seated round the stove in the store, he began as usual to tell of his great bargains, and finally wound up with, "Nobody ever cheated me, nor they can't, neither."

"Judge," said an old man of the company, "I've cheated you more'n you ever did me!"

"How so?" said the Judge.

"If you'll promise you won't go to law about it, nor do nothing, I'll tell, or else I won't; you are too much of a law character for me?"

"Let's hear!" cried half a dozen voices at once.

"We'll bear you out in it—go on!"

"I'll promise," said the Judge, "and treat in the bargain, if you have."

"Well, do you remember that wagon you robbed me out of?"

"I never robbed you out of any wagon," exclaimed the Judge; "I only got my own!"

"Well, I made up my mind to have it back, and —"

"But you never did?" cried the Judge.

"Yes, I did, and interest too!"

"How?" thundered the now enraged Judge.

"Well, you see, Judge, I sold you, one day, a very nice pine log, and bargained with you for a lot more. Well, that log I stole off your pile, down by your mill, the night before, and next day I sold it to you. That night I drew it back home, and sold it to you next day, and so I kept on until you bought your own log of me twenty seven times!"

"That's a d—d lie!" cried the mad Judge, running to his book and examining his log accounts; "you never sold me twenty seven logs of the same measurement."

"I know it," said the vender in logs.—"By drawing it back and forth the end wore off; and, as it wore, I kept cutting the end off until it was only ten feet long—just fourteen feet shorter than it was the first time you bought it; and when it got so short, I drew it home and worked it up into shingles, and the next week you bought the shingles, and then I concluded I had got my wagon back—and in my pocket book."

The exclamation of the Judge was drowned in the shouts of the bystanders, and the log-drawer found the door without waiting for the promised treat. And to see a madman, you have only to ask the Judge if he was ever shaved.

THE YANKEE OPERATIVE.—The Manchester Guardian publishes the following extract from a speech delivered by the incumbent of Habermagham, at a meeting of operatives in Berkeley. The picture displays marvelous originality, and a wondrous talent for fiction:

What kind of factory operative was the Yankee? When a Yankee wanted employment he put on a suit of black cloth, and a stylish shirt, and with a cigar in his mouth, and his hands in his pockets, he went to the factory, slapped the master on the shoulder, and said, "Well, old boss, do you want a help to day?" The boss turned round, knowing his customer, and said, "I will just look and see." He looked over his book and said, "I think we can do with a help; what can you do?" The man replied, "I can superintend three looms; but if you wait till I have smoked my cigar, I will tell you."

He then crossed his legs, puffed his smoke in the eyes of his master, winked his eyes and enjoyed himself. After smoking his cigar he would say, "Now then, boss, I can take four looms. What will you pay me? It must be the regular thing, otherwise we will have a difficulty." Difficulty meant that the Yankee operative would take his bowie knife and bury about three inches of it in his master's ribs.

We did not do so in England; he mentioned it to show the independence of the Yankee. The employer said, "Well, let me see; I think you will be able to earn about $2 a week." The operative then said, "Can't you give me a few dollars over?" "No; it will depend upon your skill; if you are an excellent weaver you may make something more."

The operative made a note of it, and said, "Now, boss, you must stick to your engagement, otherwise there will be a difficulty."

THE OLDEST SHIP.—The bark Maria arrived at this port a short time since says the New Bedford Standard, from a three years' cruise in the Indian Ocean. She was built at the town of Pembroke, now called Hanson, for a privateer during the Revolutionary War. She was bought by Wm. Rotch, a merchant of Nantucket, afterward of this city, in the year 1783, and in the same year she made a voyage to London, with a cargo of oil. Her register is dated A. D. 1782, and she is, consequently, in her seventy seventh year. She claims to be the first ship that displayed the United States flag in a British port after the Revolutionary War, which flag is in existence, though in shreds. Her model is of old French construction, tumbling home, or rounding very much in her top sides, and she is, consequently, very narrow on the deck, in proportion to her size—two hundred and two tons. It is said that there stands to her credit over $2000,000; and from the earliest history of this ship she has never been any expense, by loss, to underwriters, except once, and that was to a very small amount.

Beautiful Illustration of Honesty.

The St. Louis Republican of Sept. 4, contains the following touching incident:

Johnny Moore is the name of a bright-eyed, jolly-faced lad, twelve or fourteen years of age, whose invalid widowed mother, living on Morgan street, he helped to support by the sale of newspapers and by such errands and small jobs as he may chance to fall in with. Johnny, who is the hero of the pleasant and truthful incident we are about to record, is extremely neat in his attire, though his clothes have not always been of the best, and may have shown, in sundry patches and mended rents, the results of both poverty and frugal care. In short, Johnny is just such a boy as we used to "read about" in Sunday school books.

Yesterday morning, bright and early, he was trudging along Broadway, between Franklin Avenue and Washington street, when he chanced to stumble against a large pocket book, which he picked up and found to contain a large number of bank notes and papers. While he was meditating on the sudden riches he had amassed, and which he had slid into a capacious pocket, or perhaps racking his youthful mind whether to seek for the owner or conceal his good fortune, a gentleman rushed by him in an anxious, hurried, nervous manner, which convinced the boy that he was looking for something, and he thought he knew what.

"Have you lost anything?" asked Johnny. "Yes—my pocket book," was the gentleman's answer; "have you seen it?"

The little fellow "expected" he had—he didn't know, though. What kind of pocket book was it?

This led to an adjournment to a neighboring store, where the flushed and almost breathless individual "of the first part" proceeded to say that the pocket book was a large black one, containing $1,200 in bank bills and some accounts, a strip of red morocco binding underneath, the flap being inscribed "Robert Thomas, Covington, Ky."

The description tallied, and Johnny's eyes snapped with cheerfulness as he placed the treasure, just as he had found it, into the stranger's hands; and we opine there was greater joy in that one act than ten thousand dollars could have purchased, at the expense of a guilty conscience.

Mr. Thomas hardly seemed to know which to feel most—relief on the recovery of his money and papers, or gratitude to the lad and admiration of his honesty. Taking Johnny by the hand, whose bounding heart (he knew not why) had by this time "splashed tears into his eyes," the gentleman took him to a clothing store and dressed him out, from top to toe, in a brand new suit. Then proceeding to a jewelry store he purchased a good silver watch, upon which he directed to be engraved these words: "Robert Thomas to Little Johnny Moore. St. Louis, Sept. 3d, 1859. Honesty is the best policy." Not even content with this, the generous stranger placed in a neat bead purse five twenty dollar gold pieces, which he directed the lad to give to his mother.

We shall not attempt to portray the emotions of the boy. If his quivering lips and choked utterance, and the smile that strove so hard to get through the great watery globes that trembled in his eyes, failed to tell what was going on in his heart, how shall we tell it?

AN ERUDITE.—A would-be erudite young man, wishing to ask a young lady if he might speak to her a few moments, "wanted to know if he could roll the wheel of conversation around the axle-tree of her understanding for a moment."
