SMART AND PRACTICAL COSTUME FOR THE RACES.

Three-piece racing costumes are developed in all the fashionable shades in rough silks of both plain and bordered type. The skirts are invariably trained and simply made, while the blouses, whether separate or detached, show any amount of lace and embroidery. The transparent sleeves and yoke, playing a prominent part. The wrap worn to the races is quite as elaborate as those used for carriage wear, and should be of three-quarters length with loose back and fronts and roomy sleeves. When the Persian and oriental bordered pongees are used for the wrap they require no other trimming, as the material is quite wide enough to form the fronts.

WHITE CLOTH SUITS ARE ALWAYS USEFUL.

The woman who has a limited wardrobe will find a suit of white broadcloth, serge or mohair most useful, as it may be worn at any season of the year, may be easily cleaned and will wear indefinitely. A trained skirt of this character is not advisable, as it soils readily; a short one should be made simply and perfectly tailored. The coat may be of whatever length and style is most becoming, have three-quarters or wrist sleeves and be trimmed with Herculite, soutache or fancy white silk braid. If there is a waistcoat it may be all white or of figured brocade and a suggestion of color afforded by the use of velvet collar and cuff edgings, a scarf, a necktie or a ruff.

In Women's World.

England boasts a National Thrift Society offering prizes to those who can save good records of 30 years' savings. "It is found," says a writer in the current Harper's Weekly, "that of all the classes domestic servants produce the best records. One woman who had held the same place for 38 years managed, out of wages varying from $50 to $80 a year, to save $1,700, besides buying an annuity of $50 for her old age."

Mr. test that this servant was not only lodged and boarded, but also clothed by her employers. It is quite interesting to note the slow but sure improvement in matters of thrift among the Southern negroes. It is getting to be less and less uncommon for domestic servants there to lay aside enough to invest in a small home and lot—a possession in which they take infinite pride. Such gains are beginning to invest in small suburban farms which they let out on shares while they use their wages to bettering the land and building. It will come rival English servants in fidelity, perseverance, and thrift, and the great mass of them are still hopelessly improvident.

No girl, nowadays, need stay from college because of lack of funds. There are many ways in which she can earn the necessary money, even while attending college. In fact, outside of the most simple means, she can take the college girl funds to do from sewing on buttons to being a student in charge of hospitals in a summer vacation. Back of these girl workers stand the colleges, facilities to clothes and help secure employment says Laura A. Smith, in the July Delinquent. Former students help greatly by founding Students' Aid Funds. A girl may borrow from these funds paying back after she leaves college. Patrons help by giving scholarships ranging from $50 to many thousands. All colleges supply information about these scholarships. All colleges will help the girls sincerely in their determination to secure a college education and are willing to work—in Woman's World.

It is difficult to lay down rules in regard to seasickness. Some persons suffer from it in spite of every precaution, and others who violate all have made it to go entirely free. There can be no doubt that much of it is brought on by anticipation and by getting the stomach out of order when trying to prevent it.

For a few days before sailing, one should avoid sweets, fats and soups, eating easily digested substantial food. Three days in advance of sailing some simple laxative should be taken to cleanse the bowels and stimulate the liver.

Some persons find it refreshing to have a little fruit brought by the stewardess to eat before trying to dress in the morning. The main thing is to get on deck as quickly as possible, not attempting an elaborate toilet, and to remain in the stateroom chair all the while of illness passes off. The deck steward will serve from the menu whatever seems to tempt the appetite, and only the most simple food should be selected. If really ill, take bits of ice water (cover which a little brandy may be poured), oranges, apples, grapes, or delicate biscuits. Keep on deck, allow the wind to blow freely on the face, keep warm during the hot-water bottle, if necessary, and the attack should soon pass away. As soon as possible, begin to walk about the deck (to get your sea legs on, as old sailors say), for this not only accustoms one to the motion of the ship, but causes the blood to circulate freely again.—Practical European Guide, by Mrs. M. D. Frazer.

If you are thinking of taking up stenography as a means of livelihood there are many things to consider.

Let us take account of your stock before you decide to be a stenographer. Are you a good speller? Is punctuation one of your strong points? Are you accurate and possessed of a quick, dependable memory? Are you neat and quick with your hands? Do you like routine work, and are you willing to do the same thing day after day with little or no variation?

If you can write "Yes" after each of these questions, you will succeed as a stenographer. But the girl who always had to consult a dictionary when writing an essay, who lost counts in her "home work" because she forgot cominus, semicolon and quotation marks and was careless about the use of capitals, will never earn her salt as a stenographer. A stenographer is a well-equipped, well-oiled, guaranteed not-to-run-down machine, and nothing more. Occasionally a wide-awake stenographer works up to a position of trust with her firm. But the majority of girls never get beyond the coveted $15 a week and acquire nervous prostration from confinement, sedentary work and monotony.

The girl who is content to be this sort of machine will find her best opportunities in the offices of a large corporation, like a publishing house, insurance company, loan and abstract firm, etc. The preparation for such work is at least six months in a good school of stenography and typewriting.
