WOMAN'S WORK IN URBAN IMPROVEMENT.

MANY American landscapes and cities and towns are characterized by barren ugliness. Tourists come home from Europe and exclaim at the unsightliness of our streets and our roads, our lack of parks, statues, fountains, trees and flowers and of all that makes the outdoor view attractive.

Nature's creations must be restored ere there will be anything to make our country attractive to the aesthetic sense. American men are as yet mostly too busy with money getting to attend to this beautifying of city and village. Women have time, and it rests with them to rebuild what the pioneers destroyed. While we ought perhaps to think more than ever about heaven, we ought to prove we are thinking of it by trying to realize it on earth. The beautiful city? What is it but the perfect ideal of all the beauty we know here—gardens and fountains and streets shaded by trees of paradise—sweet fields arrayed in living green? Bright winged birds will flash to and fro amid those trees of paradise, we believe, and the air will throb and thrill with their songs of celestial sweetness.

Why not here on earth? It is for women to help realize, on this earth at least, a part of the natural beauty we are accustomed to associate with the thought of heaven. Women teachers may do their share of the work by arousing in the children a desire for clean, beautiful streets and for planting trees and flowers in public places. Club women are beginning to be a power. They can do more than any others by arousing interest in the beautifying of cities and towns. Newspapers will gladly lend aid to any measure for public improvement. Club women through committees may get subscriptions and appropriations for the work; they may provide free lectures with stereopticon views of the city beautiful and otherwise.

Among the first things to be considered are the streets and sidewalks, before all in respect to good paving and cleanliness. After cows and pigs ceased to be allowed at large in American streets the yard fence gradually fell into disuse, and the grass plots in front of the houses became a continuous lawn, greatly improving the aspect of a street. But as yet the streets, even in places where there is plenty of room for trees, are insufficiently shaded. The public squares of American towns ought to be shaded, grass carpeted, laid off in walks and adorned each by a plashing fountain bordered with flowers. Such a square should be the vista toward which the street views converge. Or a statue, a handsome church, a public building that is slightly architecturally may be placed where it will meet the eye which looks toward the end of a street. These improvements take not so much money as labor and persistent agitation and effort, and public spirited women may achieve them all.

A well known club woman, Mrs. Clarence Burns of New York, has taken for one of her tasks the providing of pretty public playgrounds for children during summer vacations. She interested the city authorities in her scheme and gained her point; she has waded up organizations among her own sex till she now has 50,000 women behind her in her work. She has accomplished marked good in the congested, unbecomingly districts of New York city. Mrs. Burns is certain that every woman ought to be interested in municipal management, and she sees great things ahead for women in public work.

A few American cities are already alive to the necessity of civic adornment. Buffalo and Cleveland in summer are very beautiful and may be taken as illustrations of what can be done and must be done if residents of American towns are ever to become proud of the places they live in. If there is anything that is within the sphere of woman's activity it is working for the realization of the city beautiful on earth.

Telephone 65 For The Correct Time

While 'phoning us for the correct time, did it ever occur to you how we kept the correct time? Let us tell you. We have two nautical Chronometers, one Howard regulator, and one electric regulator, neither of which varies from the correct time over five seconds in two months, and the correctness of our regulators insures correct reports to those who 'phone us.

Correct time is the one essential required by all from their time piece and if a watch fails in furnishing this, it fails utterly in the purpose for which it was constructed.

We have for years sold better watches for less money than any other house in Zion, but at present we can sell watches cheaper than our competitors can buy them, and yet make a profit.

The Lyon & Co. stock contained about one hundred and fifty gold, gold filled, silver and gun metal watches, all of standard makes and grades, and commencing Monday Morning, June 20th (beginning the third week of the sale of the Lyon stock) we will place the entire lot on special sale at prices ranging from $5.00 to $90.00, and will guarantee that the values we give this week cannot be duplicated in America.

Those that are skeptical come early that we may convince you and provide you with a time piece, the price of which will be a mere incident and the correctness of which will be a constant pleasure.
