

MONEY PANIC IS THREATENING NOW

American Treasury Department Appreciates the Grave Situation.

CHIEF WORRY IN ENGLAND.

This Country Will Get Along, but English Banks are Getting Alarmed—Hoping for the Best.

New York, Dec. 18.—A special to the Herald from Washington says: Secretary Gage will not discuss the question of what further action, if any, he will take to relieve the monetary stringency.

The gravity of the situation is thoroughly appreciated by the treasury department, but just what will be done is impossible to predict, though it is probable that some measure of relief will be afforded by increasing the government deposits in national banks. An offer to purchase another block of government bonds may be considered, though the results of the last offer were not encouraging. Officials think that in some of stringency the government might not be expected to offer more than the market price for its bonds. It is apparent, however, that if bonds are to be bought more must be offered than the market price. The government received only $20,000,000 out of $30,000,000 which Secretary Gage was willing to buy.

Treasury officials attribute the present emergency largely to the fact that business is prosperous and is absorbing large amounts of currency that in less prosperous times would flow to New York and would be available for loans.

It is continued that if the present conditions continue New York must get along with a smaller amount of currency than formerly and business must be adjusted to meet the new conditions.

New York, Dec. 18.—A special to the Times from Boston says:

The financial situation in so far as it relates to the great packing house of John P. Squire & Company, which has been closed for $3,000,000, has been greatly helped today by the action of Armour & Company of Chicago, who, it is stated, have come to the assistance of the stranded company.

Just what has been done is not known, but it is understood that enough money has been guaranteed to make the company go along without much further trouble. Whether Armour intends to acquire the plant cannot be ascertained, as the firm refusing to discuss the matter.

New York, Dec. 18.—The Times London financial correspondent cables:

A week of strain and anxiety has ended in something very near to a panic both on the stock exchange and in the money market, thanks to the news yesterday morning of Gen. Buller's defeat. All the good effects of the otherwise successful campaign to relieve the announcement of gold coming from New York was completely obliterated, and the effects of the disaster are all the greater because on Thursday and Friday we were buoyed up by the belief of a great victory, and there is too much reason to fear now when the gold arrives it will be drawn out of the Bank of England and buried.

Already some of our large banks are getting alarmed and on them is meant a remote contingency as things at present look. If you are able to spare us ten millions sterling we may stand a shock, but I fear that half this sum lost in New York might bring our looming troubles on your market.

We are able to draw gold now solely because the anticipated quantities of cotton have not come forward. Bills drawn in anticipation of these shipments have, however, to be renewed, and the rates on such offered for discount last week were generally higher than on their foreign paper. On Friday sixty-day American drafts coming this week in some cases at 6 1/2 per cent and on some at 7 per cent.

A MAN WITH A RECORD.

Sir George White, the British maitre d'hotel against the Boers at Ladysmith, has seen a good deal of active service in his day. He received a medal for participating in the suppression of the Indian mutiny, and in 1879-80 was engaged in the African wars. He took part in the march from Kabul to the relief of Candahar, and was mentioned several times in dispatches. Besides the V. C. he won the coveted cross at Candahar by charging a fortified hill with only a few men. At the battle of Candahar he was again "named" by Lord Roberts (whom he succeeded as commander-in-chief in India) for dashing ahead of his men and capturing a gun.—Collier's Weekly.

HONOR TO HIS WORTHY NAME

George Washington's Memory Fitly Celebrated Last Night.

A BIG THEATER MEETING.

Dr. Kingsbury Presides and Addresses are Delivered by Mrs. C. E. Allen and Rev. Clarence Brown.

"First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." After a lapse of one hundred years there are none of his fellow citizens who preceded him, or who have come after, that have robbed him of that position, and the citizens of his country delight as much to listen to George Washington's life's story as when his grand achievements were green in the memories of his contemporaries. The halls of the Theater last night were resonant with his name, and songs of praise reverberated from wall to wall. Every available seat was occupied long before the program began, and the enthusiastic students made things lively with their encomiums upon him, in whose honor the exercises were being held.

The celebration was under the auspices of the George Washington Memorial association. The stage was handsomely decorated with flags, and a life-size painting of George Washington. Upon the stage were seated Dr. Joseph T. Kingsbury, who presided; Mrs. C. E. Allen, president of the association for Utah; Rev. Clarence T. Brown, John T. Axton and a number of others.

The opening number was an instrumental selection by the Wehrle quintette, a performance of exquisite merit.

The invocation was pronounced by J. T. Axton, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and Dr. Kingsbury followed with an explanation of the object of the meeting, and the organization under whose auspices it was held. Dr. Kingsbury paid a number of glowing tributes to Washington as a citizen, calling attention to the idea incorporated in his will to establish a national university to spread throughout our land freedom of speech, thought and action. The object of the George Washington Memorial association was to carry out this idea, and the object of the meeting was to interest the young.

As Mrs. Allen arose to speak she was greeted with liberal applause, and her eloquent remarks were listened to with the closest attention.

She first told of the object of her association and the work already done towards the building of the "National Seminary of Learning" by the States, as a debt of honor to the memory of Washington. Mrs. Allen continued: "As a State, we welcomed $1,000 for the cause. The full sum has been forwarded to the national committee, and Utah was the first State to fulfill its pledge. It was a proud day for us as a State, when, at the meeting of the national board, held in Washington, on Wednesday last, Utah was placed first on the procession of States, the youngest daughter of the Union taking precedence over the great commonwealth, which formed the Union in the days of the revolution."

The gift came from the people of Utah, and due credit should be given them, as the association was but a financial agent.

"And Utah," resumed Mrs. Allen, "has given more to the nation in this gift than simply a sum of money. This gift is an assurance to the country at large that the people of Utah love their national heroes and are anxious to assume their full share of national obligations."

The gift came from the people of Utah, showing it to be in a very good condition, and the character of the university to be established was explained in detail. The amount to be raised is $25,000, which sum is to be used to erect a memorial building at Washington.

"The time will be very brief," said Mrs. Allen in conclusion, "before we shall actually behold the realization of the wish which was so near the great heart of Washington, that the people of the highest culture should be given to the youth of America at the center of our national life."

The Orpheus club and the Chaminade Chorus led by A. H. Peabody, then sang the "Star Spangled Banner," and under the impulse of the occasion the entire audience arose and joined in the song, enthusiasm being wrought up to a high pitch.

The address of the evening was then delivered by Dr. Clarence T. Brown, his subject being "Washington," and he rose admirably to his inspiring theme. He first paid his respects to those present, and then he spoke of the "Father of His Country" must be made small in order to be made human. He liked to think of Washington as "the greatest of good men and the best of great men." It was true he was silent, reserved and dignified, but was none the less human.

The Mississippi flows deep and silent, but is none the less water than the noisy brook. Washington was great, and greatly human. "We are here," continued Dr. Brown, "not to attempt to add lustre but to bask in the light of his full-orbed splendor, and my gratitude goes out to the fathers who have kept to the forefront the name and fame of George Washington."

Dr. Brown quoted liberally from some of Washington's great contemporaries, to show how ardently he was loved by those who knew him, and how profoundly they grieved when he died. He was a genius, not like Shakespeare and Beethoven, but a genius, who from the discords of a continent, worked out a grand symphony of peace and progress that had been sounding from that day to this.

Dr. Brown closed with an eloquent prayer having listened to with rapt attention, and loudly applauded.

An octette of ladies and gentlemen from the Orpheus club then sang Kipling's famous "Recessional." Geo. D. Pyper singing the solo. The inspiring refrain to this grand piece, "Let Us Forget, Let Us Forget," created a profound impression. The exercises closed with the singing of the national anthem, "America," by all present.
