POEMS EVERYBODY SHOULD KNOW.

THE IDEA.

(From Sully Prudhomme.)

The moon is large, the heaven fair
And full of stars; the earth is spent;
All the world's soul is in the air;
Of one great star magnificent.

I dream, of one I may not see
And yet whose light must, traveling, gauge
The eternal space and come to be
The glory of another age.

When at the last it shines above,
Fairest and farthest star in space,
Then let it know it had my love,
Oh! latest of the human race!

—Dorothy Frances Gurney.

BE STRONG.

Be strong!

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;
We have hard work to do and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle: face it: 'tis God's gift.

Be strong!

Say not the days are evil—who's to blame?—
And fold the hands and acquiesce—oh, shame!
Stand up; speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!

It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long,
Faint not; fight on! Tomorrow comes the song.

—D. Maithe Babcock.

NOTES.

An amusing anecdote of Disraeli is told in the recently published life of "Lord Randolph Churchill," by his son, Winston Spencer Churchill. "One night Mr. Disraeli was among their guests. 'I think,' said Lord Randolph, discussing with his wife their party after it had broken up, 'that I enjoyed myself. But how flowery and exaggerated is his language! When I asked him, if he would have any more wine, he replied: "My dear Randolph, I have slipped your excellent champagne." I have drunk your good claret; I have tasted your delicious port—I will have no more.' "Well," said Lady Randolph, laughing, "he sat next to me, and I particularly remarked that he drank nothing out of a little weak brandy and water."

A Byron novel of a different character from those written of late is "Maid of Athos" by Lafayette Mc-Laws, which Little, Brown & Co. will soon publish. In this new romance the author deals with the love of Byron for Thyrza, the Maid of Athos, to whom he wrote the immortal verse and whom the author portrays him wandering with abandon and disregard of danger. The author, Lafayette Mc-Laws, is best known by her novel, "When the Land Was Young," a romance of the days when buccannery sailed the Spanish main.

Mr. Owen Wister, who wrote that delightful book, "The Virginian," has preferred to leave his old field for an entirely new one. Instead of following up his great success with another story in the same field, he has chosen for his scene a historic city, and the life portrayed is that of the most refined and cultivated society, "Lady Baltimore," his new novel, to be announced by the Macmillan company for issue in April.

Of the 29 books which appeared in the Bookman's list of best selling books during the year 1905, 12 were written by men, 11 by women, three were collaborations in which husband and wife worked together, one was a collaboration of three women, and one, "The Breath of the Gods," was written, says the Bookman, "by an author whose sex and identity is still a matter of conjecture to the reading public at large. This is an exceptionally good showing on the feminine side of the ledger."

LOVES MUSIC AND LITERATURE.

A woman of unusual beauty of face and character, keenly interested in music and literature, herself a widely-known writer, a rarely sympathetic and helpful friend and sovereign, this is Queen Pauline Elizabeth Otilie Louise of Roumania, better known by her pen name, Carmen Sylva. Born in Germany in 1843, she married, in 1869, Prince Charles of Roumania. Twelve years later Roumania was declared a kingdom, and prince and princess became king and queen. In the March Century is published a timely article from Carmen Sylva's pen, in which, under the title of "The Jews in Roumania," the queen explains why her country has seemed inhospitable to foreigners, and pleads for a wider understanding of the sad conditions in her little kingdom.

potts: Vol I of "The Road in Tuscany," by Mr. Maurice Hewlett, being Vol VI in the limited large paper edition of Hewlett's works: "English Grammar for Beginners," by James P. Kibard, Ph. D.; "City Government for Young People," by Mr. Charles Dwight Willard; and a new edition of Butcher & Yang's "Translation of Homer's Odyssey."

BOOKS.

"The Most Popular Home Songs" is the title of a new volume of songs published by the Hinds, Noble & Eldredge Co., of New York, comprising a collection of not only the old familiar home songs of this nation, but of the best known of home songs of other countries including their national hymns. The collection is the most complete in existence and no home—nor indeed no private nor public library should be without them—while for the music lover it furnishes a treasure of music ranging through all degrees of taste. It is, in fact, an invaluable collection.

"Divine Considerations," by John

Valdesso, the English translation of Nicholas Farrer, with George Herbert's prefatory epistle and a portrait. The seventeenth century English translation, by Nicholas Farrer, of the "Divine Considerations" of John Valdesso, (Juan de Valdés), a reprint of which has just been issued by John Lane company, with the notes which George Herbert made upon his friend Farrer's manuscript, apart from its interest to admirers of those two great churchmen, has an especial interest to members of the Society of Friends. That doughty old Quaker literateur, Benjamin Barron Wiffen, who spent much time and trouble over the re-translation of the works of the early Spanish reformer, remembered late in life that he had once heard a friend say he possessed an old treatise written by a Spaniard which foreshadowed the main teaching of the Society of Friends. Eagerly ransacking his friend's library, he found, in Italian, the very volume which was translated by Farrer and annotated by Herbert, was published in 1628, and has since been reprinted for the first time. Readers of "John Inglesant" will recall the reference to the "Divine Considerations" which is printed on the cover of the new edition, and recall also that the author of "John Inglesant" was in early life, a Quaker.

Smart Self-Advertisement Helped This Author to Fame.

Our London Literary Letter.

Special Correspondence.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Maurice Barres, the French novelist of renown who has just been elected to membership in the Academy, is probably a firm believer in the necessity of judicious self-advertisement on the part of any author who wants to achieve a really big popular success. He undoubtedly would be in hearty agreement with the eminent English literary authority who recently declared with reluctance that the practice of what he termed "charlatanism," was essential, nowadays, to the winning of fame and fortune in the crowded profession of letters.

It is true that Mr. Barres—who has been elected to the Academy to succeed the late Jose de Heredia—is now eminently and entirely dignified. In fact, Barres no longer even deigns to provide his romances with plots, but fills them up with long-winded discussions and theorizings about the needs of contemporary France. The methods pursued by the new academicians were vastly different, however, when, at the age of twenty-odd, he started out to make a name for himself in the literary world.

Having attracted some attention by means of a laudatory article on Auguste Vacquerie, the youthful Barres brought out a magazine of his own called, "Les Taches d'Encre" (Spots of Ink), which was perhaps chiefly remarkable for the audacity with which it was advertised. For instance, when a certain banker named Morin had been assassinated under sensational circumstances and all Paris was talking of the crime, Barres sent out an army of sandwichmen bearing this legend on their boards:

"Morin
No Longer Reads
"Les Taches d'Encre."

However, there must have been some promise in the periodical, for Jules Claretie, the director of the French National theatre wrote to a friend: "I have just received a paper called 'Les Taches d'Encre,' bearing the signature of Maurice Barres. The name will do you a world of good. Thousands have already been cured of such ailments as Poor Appetite, Indigestion, Flatulency, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Cold, Grippe, Female Ills and General Debility. Don't fail to try it today."

printed a report of a scene that occurred at a sale of passive resisters' goods which had been distrained for nonpayment of the educational rates. The correctness of the report was admitted. But the head-line artist had labelled it: "Disappointed Martyrs. The Terrible Defection of Mr. Spearling."

Mr. Spearling, as he acknowledged in court, had no very clear idea of what defection meant until he consulted a Webster's dictionary. There he found it defined as: "A falling away from a state of morality to one of apostasy." Therefore he concluded that he had been accused of immorality, and appealed to a British jury to vindicate his character and compensate him for the injury done to his reputation. It was the dictionary that won the case for him. In the Times or any of the old school journals which pride themselves on maintaining the best traditions of English journalism, the report would have been headed something like this: "The Passive Resisters. The Position of Mr. Spearling."

Mr. Spearling, having conveyed to the reader no idea of the news of the story, but it would have looked dignified and respectable, according to English notions, it would have saved the editor who attempts any other sort of runs great risk of losing his job. "A Dangerous Word" is the heading which one of them puts over the report of the court proceedings in which Mr. Spearling triumphed.

HAYDEN CHURCH.

Hard on the Floor.

"Aunt Louisa," as the late Mrs. Louisa Eldridge was lovingly called, was well known as an actress, but she was even better known as the organizer of the annual Christmas festival for stage children at Pastor's theater, in New York.

"In presenting their Christmas gifts to the stage children," said an actress, "Aunt Louisa made the jolliest little speeches. I will remember what she said to me, when I was a juvenile, in presenting me with a crutch, for I had sprained my ankle badly in a snow storm."

"She said she hoped I would incommode no one with my crutch as her cousin, a veteran colonel, sometimes incommoded people with his wooden leg."

"Her cousin, she said, was once dining with a nun whose floors were of highly polished and costly inlaid woods."

"The host got nervous as he saw the colonel clumping and clattering about on his expensive floors. He was afraid they would be scratched up."

"Hadn't you better come over here on the rug, colonel?" he said. "You might slip out there, you know."

"But the colonel, with a loud laugh, struck the floor firmly with his wooden leg."

"No fear of that," said he. "There's a nail in the end, you know."

CATARRH, FOUL BREATH

If You Continually K'hawk and Spit and There is a Constant Dripping From the Nose Into the Throat, If You Have Foul, Sickening Breath, That is Catarrh.

CURED THROUGH THE BLOOD BY B. B. B.

Is your breath foul? Is your voice husky? Is your nose stopped? Do you sneeze at night? Do you sneeze a great deal? Do you have frequent pains in the forehead? Do you have pains across the eyes? Are you losing your sense of smell? Is there a dropping in the throat? Are you losing your sense of taste? Are you gradually getting deaf? Do you hear ringing sounds? Do you have ringing in the ears? Do you suffer with nausea of the stomach? Is there a constant bad taste in the mouth? Do you have a hacking cough? Do you cough at night? Do you take cold easily? If so, you have catarrh.

Catarrh is not only dangerous in this way, but it causes ulcerations, death and decay of bones, loss of thinking and reasoning power, kills ambition and energy, often causes loss of appetite, indigestion, dyspepsia, raw throat and reaches to general debility, idleness and insanity. It needs attention at once. Cure it by taking Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.). It is a quick, radical, permanent cure because it rids the system of the poison germs that cause catarrh. Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) purifies the blood, does away with every symptom, giving strength to the entire Mucus membrane, and (B. B. B.) sends a rich, tingling flood of warm, rich, pure blood direct to the paralyzed nerves, mucus membrane bones and joints, giving warmth and strength just where it is needed, and in this way making a perfect, lasting cure of catarrh in all its forms.

DEAFNESS.

If you are gradually growing deaf or are already deaf or hard of hearing, try Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.). Most forms of deafness or partial deafness are caused by catarrh, and in curing catarrh by B. B. B. thousands of men and women have had their hearing completely restored.

Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) is pleasant and safe to take. Thoroughly tested for 20 years. Composed of Pure Botanic Ingredients. Strengthens Weak Stomach, cures Dyspepsia. Price $1 per large bottle. Take as directed. If not cured when right quantity is taken, money refunded. Sample sent free by writing Botanic Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe your trouble, and medical free medical advice to suit your case, also sent in sealed letter.
