DIED OF APPENDICITIS

Judge M. Kirkpatrick Stricken Down in This City.

FORMERLY A SALT LAKE LAWYER.

He Was in the City on a Brief Business Trip From His Late Home in Montana.

The announcement that Judge M. Kirkpatrick died at 10:27 this morning at St. Mary's hospital in this city came with a shock to the many friends of the highly esteemed attorney, whose arrival in town had been announced in the papers yesterday. Mr. Kirkpatrick was formerly a resident of Salt Lake City, as one of his daughters, Mrs. John A. Marshall, now is. He stood high in his profession, being a member of one of the strongest banking firms of the West. He first came to Salt Lake in the '70s, and was one of the firm of Hempstead and Kirkpatrick. Then he moved for a few years to Nevada, and returned to this city, where the legal firm of Bennett, Harkness & Kirkpatrick took a place in the front rank. Next the co-partnership was Bennett, Kirkpatrick & Bradley, upon Judge Harkness retiring from active practice; and later the firm became Bennett, Marshall & Bradley, by the removal of Mr. Kirkpatrick to Butte, Montana, about six years ago.

Mr. Kirkpatrick came to this city on Thursday evening, intending to return Friday evening. His object here was in attend to some business, and during the day he met with many old friends, with whom he chatted in the most pleasant manner. He expressed himself as feeling in the best of health. Suddenly, at 4:30 p.m. yesterday, he was seized with a severe pain, while at the Knickbocker hotel. He retired to his room, and getting no relief, Dr. Nies was called. Assistance was sought, and later Dr. Fowler was engaged on the case. Mr. Bradley, one of his former partners, also gave the most vigilant attention to his friend and old-time associate, and at 12 o'clock Mr. Kirkpatrick seemed much relieved. The doctors, however, had pronounced the trouble to be appendicitis, as there was no relaxation of the watchcare over the afflicted man.

At 5 o'clock this morning severe symptoms again appeared, and a consultation of physicians resulted in the decision that the only hope of saving his life was in an operation. He was accordingly transferred from the hotel to the hospital with great care, where Dr. Pinkerton and others associated with the case awaited to use the surgeon's knife as a last resort. An examination was made, and it was found that the pulse was too low, indicating that the patient could not bear up under the operation at that time. To strengthen him for the ordeal, medical skill applied the best powers at its command, but the patient gradually sank, and at 10:27 a. m. expired.

A few minutes before this time, a statement made before an attorney in Judge Merrill's court that Mr. Bradley was absent in attendance upon Judge Kirkpatrick who, to all appearances, was dying, caused a deep impression, and hushed into silence for a moment all in the court room.

The deceased was about 65 years of age and leaves a wife and two daughters. He was a wholesome and cultivated yet unassuming gentleman, and made many warm friends and was highly regarded by all acquaintances. He had not the slightest inclination to ostentation or display, as may be illustrated in the fact that while many people called him Judge Kirkpatrick, yet to his intimate friends he was familiarly known as "Kirk," the title "Judge" not being applied in his presence. At one time here, when his name frequently appeared in the newspapers because of his association with prominent cases, he called upon the newspaper reporters in quiet conversation, making the modest request that they do not call him "Judge." "I am not a judge," said he, "only plain Mr. Kirkpatrick."

As his business affairs, all are in perfect condition. His son-in-law, Judge John A. Marshall, of this city, is now on the Pacific ocean, on a trip to Tenth. Mrs. Marshall and her sister Miss Kirkpatrick were to accompany him, but word was sent to Portland that they would not go, so they sailed at a sailing vessel, hence it is supposed that they are yet in California.

Mr. Kirkpatrick was notified by telegram of the dangerous illness of her husband, and engaged a special train at Butte to bring her to his side. Arriving here, however, she received word of his death, and the special was abandoned. She will reach here tomorrow morning. The remains of the deceased probably will be interred in this city.

WILLIAMS WINS THE FIGHT.

The Utah Man Too Much for the "Tool" Producing Out Generalo Mexicau.

DENVER, Colo., July 5.—A special to the News from Cripple Creek, Colo., says: James Williams, of Salt Lake, and Malcom Pete, of Colorado, fought eight for a purse of $500 at the Vaughan club, the house being crowded. The men entered the ring at 11 o'clock. Charles Johns and Jack Hathaway were seconds for Williams, and Ed. McCoy and Jack Hamon were the seconds of the Mexican. M. C. Erion was referee, and T. S. Jones official timekeeper.

Both men seemed confident of winning at the start, but it developed before the first round was over that Pete was outgeneraled. He began to strike wild with his knee, and not stopping to allow being warned by the referee, the sixth and seventh rounds the latter divided the fight in favor of Williams as the eighth round on a foul. The fight lasted thirty minutes.

Pete was driven to the ropes in order to keep from being knocked out entirely. Williams will exchange Billy Woods to fight him in sixty days.

time to go with his apparatus, but was taken to the fire in the chief's buggy.

Charges 3, in regard to conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentlemen, we are of the opinion is unsustained.

There is no evidence to show that the chief had acted, other than in a gentlemanly manner towards insurance men in the city and Max Freedman, but on the contrary several insurance men testified that they had always been received very courtesy by and while by.

Referred to specification "G," willing a hoist by Mrs. O'Connor; the evidence shows that the letter to Mrs. O'Connor was written by the secretary of the department; same was read in evidence and to the opinion of the commission it was gentlemanly and proper.

Specification "D" in regard to trying to get Welch to swear to Bates' incompetency, we are of the opinion is not sustained.

Charges to No. 7, with reference to cutting city property for household purposes, in using poor judgment in purchasing supplies for the department, we find are not sustained.

The only supplies used by the chief was coal furnished by the city for the heating of his apartments in common with those of the men.

There was no evidence that any dog house was constructed for the chief and the wards he has already been mentioned.

In regard to the feeding poor hay, the evidence shows that about hay was offered that they would not eat, and instead of wasting it, it was either injected or a reduction made from the price.

Charge No. 8, with reference to favoritism in promotion of the men, we are of the opinion is not sustained.

The board, after giving careful consideration to all of the evidence, are of the opinion that neither one in the controversy is wholly without blame; we are of the opinion, however, that the evidence was produced and that no such exists, and are among the men that they were willing to be removed, the recommendation of the members of the department to understand that the board is perfectly impartial and will allow no favoritism in the administration of the department, and that no member of the department need fear removal for doing his duty; on the other hand, we desire the department to understand that no insubordination or attempts to create dissension in the department will be tolerated.

AN EARLY MORNING BLAZE.

The Residence of Martin Feder, of East Waterloo, Visited by Fire.

The inhabitants of East Waterloo were excited this morning on account of a fire that for a time threatened to destroy a handsome little residence on Twelfth South between Fourth and Fifth streets, but which was extinguished confined to the roof.

About 6 o'clock a.m. smoke was seen to issue in huge volumes from the roof of the residence of Martin Feder, and soon afterwards the fury shingles around the chimney were ablaze. Friends in the neighborhood hurried to the scene, and laborers on their way to the street car stopped, and very soon an improvised fire brigade consisting of ladies and gentlemen were formed. The burning building was hastily emptied of the furniture which was placed at a safe distance, and then attention was given to the building. Water was brought from springs and ditches, and after an hour's hard work the flames were under control, a result not at first anticipated, owing to the scanty facilities for an emergency of that kind. The building was saved except the roof, and the damage was comparatively slight and will undoubtedly be fully covered by the insurance. Some defect in the flue evidently caused the fire.

THE HOUSE DESTROYED.

Later word was received that the fire, fanned by the wind, started up again and after a short time the handsome residence was a mass of smoul dering ruins.

Fourth at Farmington.

FARMINGTON, Davis County, Utah, July 5, 1895.

Editor Deseret News.

This is a gala day at this place—a grand display of loyalty to the ever-remembered Fourth of 1776, when liberty, to dearly purchased, brought joy to every soul.

At 9:30 a. m. the procession formed at the court house led by the Farmington brass band. Next came Utah militia, David Sanders, captain, followed by representatives on horseback of every President of the United States with names on sashes. Just in front of the horsemen was young George Washington, and his cherry tree. The next in the procession was Truman Leonard and outfit, representing the early settlers, Pioneers, hard times, some cried most hanging around the rude wagon and outfit, which is now historic, each sought and ready, drawing quite a contrast between the Sunday Scouts and Young Ladies' and Young Men's Mutual Improvement associations, which were in decorated wagons neatly fitted up for the occasion. But the greatest of all the outfits was that of the Goddess of Liberty, who stood in the midst of her suite, holding the staff of the flag of liberty. Flags with the red, white and blue were lavishly floating in the breeze, marking the line of procession which straddled the town, followed by numerous carriages, one of which was ornamented with sashs of silk crowns by Lucy A. Clark. The large platform was occupied by women's rights ites and suffrage was very conspicuous, taking a prominent part in the procession. Upon the whole, it was a grand display and a great credit to Farmington.

After the display and a gentlemanly address of music by the brass band all proceeded to Smith's grove where a stand had been erected for the occasion. Order was called, and after music and singing, prayer was offered by the chaplain, E. T. Clark, when a fitting program was rendered. An address of welcome by the mayor was first, then oration, toasts, music and singing filled up the time. "The signing of the Declaration of Independence" was feelingly rendered, and also the reading of the Declaration. Utah as the 45th star, and not the 46th as the visitation with which it will be encountered. Some very appropriate sentiments were expressed, a few of which were—"Woman suffrage; may she shed the lovers hearts of politics stink;" "The Sons of Deseret are swarming, (Utah's test one), look out for plenty of honey."

Utah was well represented on this occasion, and mostly by Farmington growth, and it was very creditably done. After benediction, parties spent the afternoon in feasting in groups under the shade of the commodious grove and in singing, music, games, etc. Surrounding the grove is meadow, some of which will turn out three tons of timothy and clover per acre; six acres the past been sold for $1,000.

EDWARD HARVEIGH.

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.

Largest Funeral Ever Held at Riverton.

RIVERTON, Salt Lake County, July 3.—Few cases was called to mourn the loss of one of our active members, Sister Celia Marie Butterfield, born in South Jordan Oct. 15, 1865, died at Riverton June 25. The funeral services were held from the ward house June 27. Sister Butterfield was a faithful Latter-day Saint, a devoted mother and wife; she was the beloved wife of one of our home missionaries, Rockstain Butterfield, who recently returned from a two years' mission in the South. Some two years ago Brother Butterfield, who by profession is a sewing-man and farmer, was called to labor in the South. He immediately made ready for his mission without a murmur, although his wife at that time was in delicate health. He went and performed his duty in the cause of truth to his God and fellowmen, and was a faithful missionary. During all this time his wife was continually living on faith and by the administration of the Elders, and many and loving were the letters she sent to him telling him not to worry, although she was sinking every day. Thus along went month after month until two months before his arrival release. When on account of ill health he was honorably released to return home, he found his wife still more sick than when he left and time she lingered about four months in agony and pain until God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to relieve her of her suffering. She died a faithful Latter-day Saint, leaving two children aged respectively 7 and 10 years, while one child sleeps her on the other shore. The cortege was one of the largest that Riverton ever witnessed, containing 75 vehicles besides many who attended without teams. Brother Butterfield's traveling companion, Brother John Syper from American Fork, alleviated the funeral and many and consoling were the remarks with which he addressed the congregation.

DEFENDING THE LORDS.

The Marquis of Salisbury Replies to Lord Rosebery.

LONDON, July 6.—The Marquis of Salisbury in the House of Lords today replied to a speech of Lord Rosebery recently delivered before the Mighty Ones, in which he advocated the House of Lords. The premier answered Lord Rosebery's statement that the House of Lords has legislative preponderance. On the contrary, he asserted, the lords had no share in the voting by which governments were displaced, and in the provision of funds for public services.

Continuing, the marquis asked what the lords had done to induce Lord Rosebery to submit a proposal which had not been heard within Parliament for 200 years. The House of Lords merely rejected the evicted tenants bill, which, he averred, was impracticable in the shape presented. In such case the lords opposed combined resistance formed it. Their rejection was a rejection of measures, the question upon which the people had not been asked to decide. Subsequently the disestablishment of the Kirk of Scotland and the disestablishment of the Irish church were the measures which were one more of people against the lords and had produced the greatest excitement. In conclusion the marquis expressed the opinion that the House of Lords deserved the thanks of the country for clearing the field of sterile and angry officials and for bringing about a consolidation of measures to ameliorate the social troubles of the people.

Lord Rosebery replied that the legislative preponderance of the House of Lords against opposition, amounting to 300 peers was fixed to the house for purposes of imposing formal measures. The House of Commons, he added, changed, but the House of Lords never changes. Whenever the result of the elections as far as the House of Lords was concerned, it remained the same. In conclusion, the ex-premier said if the conservative measures were such as to raise the social life of the people without injury to their classes, he promised them the support of the liberals.

The house then adjourned.

The usual hours of Rev. Gibson was not considered, as the projected tour will be abandoned and other means pursued to raise the desired amount. The general sentiment against the Jewett crime has had much to do with the giving of the debt.
