DESERET EVENING NEWS SATURDAY MAY 18 1907

IN LONDON THEATERS.

Special Correspondence. ONDON, May 4 .- What a joke it would be if the British stage censor should prove to have strained at a diplomatic gnat strained at a diplomatic gnat only to swallow a diplomatic camel' He has forbidden "The Mikado," as all the world is aware, lest its revital should offend Japan, but who knows that he may not have risked interna-tional complications in another direc-tion by licensing "The Girls of Got-tenberg," the new musical play by George Grossmith and Ivan Caryll which is soon to be given at the Lon-don Galety? This piece is partly based on the famous Koepenick hoax, which is well enough since nobody enjoyed tha prank of Cobbler Voight more than Willam the second to none. But what will the kaiser say when he learns that the main theme of "The Girls of Gottenberg" is his imperial action in sending a detachment of sol-diers to act as dancing partners for the damsels of this German town, and that one of the characters in the piece is an exalted German person-age? Will the emperor instruct his am-piece is an exalted German person-age? Will the emperor instruct his am-bassador in London to protest against the Galety production? Probably not, though Tautonic susceptibilities are tender at present so far as England is concerned, and it really would not be much more inane to forbid "The Girls of Gottenberg" for fear of of-fending Germany than it was to shelve the "Mikado" indefinitely to avoid a rumpus with Japan. Mean-while, report says that the Koepenick and Gottenberg Incidents have com-bined to make a decidedly attractive musical play, and, as usual in London, nowadays, the bright particular star of the piace is to be an American girl.

bined to make a decidedly attractive musical play, and, as usual in London, nowadays, the bright particular star of the place is to be an American girl. This is May de Sousa, who started her London carsen hast season as the "principal girl" at Drury Lane, and who afterward appeared as the hero-ine of "Castles in Spain" at Terry's, and later as O Mimosa San in the re-vival of "The Geicha" at Daly's Since then she has made a trip to the United States, but her present con-tract with George Edwardes is a lengthy one, and it will be some time before she is seen in her own country again. In "The Girls of Gotenberg" she will play the part of a young wo-man who changes places with some-bedy else in order to avoid a convent and go to a ball, and, of course, dis-concerting results follow. The Kospenick incident furnishes most of the first act of "The Girls of Gottenberg," which, of course, will be tried in America in case it pleases the Galety's patrons. Edmund Payne will be the humble artizan, Max Moddle-koff, who masulerades as the em-peror's envoy, and George Grossmith, Jr., the exalted personage. Both are sure to be very funny, but not too funny, one hones—for the sake of Anglo-German relations and the peace of mind of the lord chamberlain. That Miss de Sousa will shine in "The Girls of Gottenberg" probably may be taken for granted, and mean-why the past week by two other Amer-tican girls in London—the one in musical comedy, the other in comedy without music. Marie George, in fact, carriel off most of the honors of "Lady Tatters," the new "light opera" by Walter Staughter produced at the Shaftesbury last night, and Filie Burke added to her laurels at the beginning of the week by a very stractive performance in Louis N. Parker's play, "Mr. George" at the Vaudeville. As stated already in these letters, the scene of this piece by "Rosemary's" author is Boston in 1778, but the plot runs somewhat dif-ferently than the announcements led one to imagine. It is not a case of a young Englishman arriving in Ameri-ca to tind that his partner in business is a girl, but a fair English damsel masquerading as "Mr. George." "She turns up in Boston to astonish the milddle-aged bachelor who had sup-posed that his British partner was a man, and, of course, he falls in love with her and complications follow on account of the war clouds and the pa-triotism of both "partles." However, Parker has written a likeable play, which should do well on both sides of the Atlantic, and Billie Burke is quite charming in it et the Vaudeville. The part of the American lover, by the way, was written orginally for E. S. Wit-lard, but is played by Charles Haw-trey, who has sarrifaced the most be-witching moustache on the English stage rather than be of the picture.

witching moustache on the English stage rather than be out of the picture. The stage topic of the moment, how-were, remains "The Mikado," which now has been officially prohibited, not only at the Savoy, but throughout the played no more while the present sov-ernment is in office, unless one of two things should happen. The first of these is extremely un-tikely, that is that W. S. Gilbert should follow a suggestion which has been put forth seriously and change the locale of the opera from Japan to some myth-ical country, and incidentally give it a new name. "The Shotgun" has been suggested for the latter, but it has been suggested for the latter, but it has been suggested for the latter, but it has been suggested for the slightest probability that Gilbert would consent to trans-mogrify his famous piece in this way-even were his refusal to do so to be is however, the other possibility, which is that the lord chamberlain, the real mandate against the "Mikado" owing to the tempest of ridicule which it has height and today the prime minister will be asked ironically in parliament if, considering that "Hamlet" depicts a king of Denmark as a murderer, it also will be prohibited in view of the ap-proaching visit of the present king and queen of Denmark to this country! Meanwhile, hardly a paragraphist or a misch-hall singer in the land has failed to have a laugh at the censor, and both Mr. Redford and his official master would gain in popularity by removing the ban on "The Mikado" and letting the it or lump it, according to their mode. mood.

18 N N

There is no question about the suc-cess of 'Brewster's Millions'' in Eng-land, any more than there is about the success of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," or about the success of Clyde Fitch's "The Truth," or about the in-terest taken in Marlowe and Sothern. Evidently this is the American season in London drama. The audience at the Hicks theater laughed whole-heartedly from beginning to end of "Brewster's Millions" on the occasion of the first performance this week. Of course, captious critics complain that it isn't "comedy" as described on the playbili, captious critics complain that it isn't a "comedy" as described on the playbill, but a farce, and that it isn't reasonable, and that the success is chiefly due to Gerald du Maurier, who took the part of Brewster, and to the famous yacht scene. But there is no doubt about the delight of the audience. CURTIS BROWN.

OULD you like to write a play? It's a pretty difficult Job, but think how many persons have become rich from it, says the Kansas City Star.

comes to me, but I never allow it to obtrude too forcibly upon my imagin-ation or to intrude into the work in hand. I'm no great dab at psycology. They talk a lot about the subjective mind: I don't know much about it," he laughed. When writing a play Mr. Thomas does not give his characters literal names. He leaves the christening as one of the finalities. Instead, he desig-nates his here as "A Man." his here-ine as "A Woman," while a secondary male character might appear in the first draft as "His Friend" and the opposite female character as "Her -that is, if he has saved any of it-

Mr. Walker Whiteside to Appear in Modern Drama

G ENERALLY those who have won fame in any branch of art are indelibly marked with some od-dity of personal appearance or tempera-ment, but one may search Mr. Walker Whiteside from his calm, self-possessed eyes to the soles of his active feet and find nothing out of the ordinary. He lives his quiet life on the stage or in his home and strives to make nothing bizarre of either. He spends his spare time in the open air, and in consequence the hard work that he has done has had no effect upon him. He is as youthful today in his aims and ambitions as when he first set foot upon the stage. Yet here is a man who has created seven-teen characters and has played Hamlet more than one thousand times, and now for something different, he turns calmiy to modern drama and says he will make the life life work. For the first time drama and did The Cousin of the King that Paul Kester wrote for me. Then which I arranged with the assistance of Mr. Kester. I was growing older then and gradually I came to a better reall-ation of the work I had set out to do. I never missed an opportunity to see the great artists, and I think now with gratitude of the kindly encouragement for a set of the kindly encouragement gratice of the work I had set out to do. I never missed an opportunity to see the great artists, and I think now with gratitude of the kindly encouragement gratice offorts. I remember the beauti-ful and talented Emma Abbott watched my performance of Hamlet' one after-noon, and then and there I thanked her in my heart for coming. That night a messenger came to my botel with a note. I treasure that note, and it lies with others that have given me stimulas when things seemed dark. "Next came the play. The Man in Flack, and I made as much of that as a within me and I followed it with the Red Cockade, which word followed in the romantic drama. Then came they of play and one which save me new studes of Sicily,' a slightly different type of play and one which save me new stude was the keys. Having proved the success of this, I found I had a fair-type of play and one which save me new fundern in tone anywhere; and, to tell in the romantic drama. Then came they concess of this, I found I had a fair-type of play and one which save me new saved We Are King. Having proved the success of this, I found I had a fair-type of play and one which save me new fundern in tone anywhere; and, to tell imodern in tone anywhere; and, to tell imodern in tone anywhere; and, to tell in the rould work my will upon, and I duals and rouge a new version of found pleasure in it. As the famous that I could work my will upon, and I duals and romantic plays, and it was inten i decided to end my course of prep-ration, so to speak, and try whit if ouid do in really modern play and mod-tion do the really modern play and mod-tion do the really modern play and mod-tion

E of the new stars of the day, Mr. Walker Whiteside, comes o Salt Lake for a brief engagement beginning Friday evening next. His play will be "The Magie Melody," an entirely new drama. Mr. Whitoside has been elimbing the theatrical ladder slowly but steadily for a number of years, and his attainments at last attracted the attention of the well known the-atrical firm of Liebler & Co., who are responsible for the success of Eleanor Robson and "The Squaw Man." That firm signed a long contract with Mr. Whiteside and his present tour is the result. In the play of "The Mag-ic Melody." Mr. Whiteside assumes the character of a young violinis: and it details his struggles in his up hill fight to gain recognition in the world. The play is a romantic drama with a powerful plot and Liebler & Co, have given him a strong supporting com-pany. the attention of the well known thepany.

16

Maude Adams' engagement in Salt Lake is being advertised by her man-agers as "Five Trips to Falry Land," beginning Monday, June 3, and end-ing Friday, June 7. At present only one matinee is arranged for, that of Wednesday afternoon.

15 4 14

9

0

19

We are to have one more taste of Shakespearean comedy before the sea-son ends and it is a pleasure to know that it will be contributed by the charming actress. Miss Viola Allen. The comedy is "Twelfth Night," and the date will be June 30. It is some-thing quite unusual to have three such stars as Maude Adams, Ethel Barry-more and Viola Allen tread so closely upon one another's heels in any city, and their coming will form a notable ending to what has been a notable theatrical season.

theatrical season. The engagement of Mr. Harry Leighton and his company in "We Un's of Tennessee," ends tonight and the farewell will be said in a benefit to the company of "The Prisoner of Zenda." The next attraction at the Grand will be the appearance of Miss Laura Frankenfield, a popular young actress who comes from the east for an extended summer stay. Her open-ing play will be "A Daughter of Colo-"ado," and Messrs, Pelton and Smut-zer, the big theatrical managers of Denver who are handling the young lady's tour, claim that they have provided the star with a strong com-pany and a beautiful production. The usual Wednesday and Saturday math-ness Wil be given at 2:30. Miss Frank-infield, herself, is a col-feen graduate and comes from an old Pennylvanian Dutch family. She made her initial hit in Ibsen's "Ghosts," and is said to be one of the youngest actresses that has dared to attempt the strong work in that great Morrison, Frederick Gernard, Lewis K. Conaughy, Hugh S. Allen, L. A. Sears, Allee De Lane, and Miss Orette Aliretus. Mr. Kent Bosworth, of the Leighton players, has also been en-gaged by Miss Frankenfield's man-adition to the company.

agers and he will prove a strong ad-dition to the company. The last week of the vaudeville sca-son at the Orpheum which opens on Monday, gives promise of a litting climax to the series of entertaining bills which have made the past season at the State street theater so notable. The bill embraces two comedies a European acrobatic turn, a couple of musical comedy offerings, one of those bilarious acts regarding nothing in particular, and some motion pictures. "After the Honeymoon," presented by Julia Kingsley and Nelson Lewis, is beoked as the headliner. Hayes and Johnson, in "A Dream of Baby Days," have a novel act that calls for the in-troduction of some good singing and seme motion pictures. Then there is the "Bootblack Quartet" of singers, dancers and comedians, advertised as "the original." They have a num-ber of papery songs and one of their number is said to be an original comedian. The applause of the whole house promises to be the reward of the Fredericks Family, eccentric com-edy acrobats from Germany. Of the act of Mr. and Mrs. Gottlob and com-pany presenting "Government Bonds," the benever Times says "in every line the characterization is so exact, so typical of American rural Mrs, so free from exaggeration, that one must give it high praise." Emer-son and Baldwin, are a comedy pair whose advance billing bears the le-gend, "Display of desterily and de-menta," and the kinodrome. lition to the company, Roy Clement's stock company, which opens at the Orpheum a week from Monday in Clyde Fitch's 'Cow-boy and the Lady," arrived this week with the exception of the leading wo-man, Miss Juli, Moore, and Gus Mor-timer, both of whom are expected once a Sait Lake newspaper man, to fit her peculiar emotional powers, and has been put on as a try-out for next season. The play is spoken of by the critics as fitting the actresse's powers very snugly, but there are various expressions as to its popular acceptance. The reading of the lines for which she has been cast, is, however, highly praised. Miss Wycherly appeared at the Orpheum in this city during the past winter, in a sketch which called for the display of her powers in delineating several different charac-

YOUNG STAR MAKES A HIT.

Margaret Wycherly has captivated the public by her work in the stellar. role of "The Primrose Path" now playing at the Majestic theater. New York. The play was writen by Bayard Veiller, husband of the star, and early in the week. The first renearsal is called for Tuesday and from that time on there will be one or more plays in course of preparation throughout the season. The new company gives promise of being a distinctly strong one especially when it comes to the men, there being nine experienced actors among them. ----

THEATER GOSSIP

Marie Tempest, it is said, will ap-pear next season in a play by Alfred Sutro.

Robert Manell is appearing in New York in a series of Shakespearean plays.

Margaret Anglin sailed for Europe on May 4, to remain throughout the summer sixth onth at the Belasco theater, New York. Bertha Kallch is to appear in Percy MacKye's tragedy of "Sappho and "Sappho and Phaon" next season.

a unique spectacle.

"The Rose of the Rancho" is now in early in the week. The first rehearsal is called for 'Tuesday and from that time on there will be one or more plays in course of preparation througheut the season. The new and the father of our country will be a unique spaced. How Thomas Writes Plays.

0,00

-

Guy Standing, who is now leading man with Alla Nazimova, has been engaged by Klaw & Erlanger to play the part of Charles Steele in the dra-matization of Gilbert Parker's "The Right of Way." to be produced in the fall. The play will have its premier in Montreal Oct. 7.

It was reported last week that Rich-ard Manssield had notified all the members of his supporting company, including those re-engaged for next season, that they might consider themselves at liberty. While Mr. Mansfield has practically recovered from his tecent illness, he is not cer-tain about his future health.

Times. Today he has uoney to waste Hall Caine's 16-year-old son, Derand all from writing plays. Here's went Hall Caine's repearing at the London Adelphi in "The Bondman," a dramatization of one of his father's novels. The boy plays three parts, a convict, a coast guardsman and a farm hand, and he is said to acquit himself surprisingly well. He is to have an important role when "The Prodigal Son" is revived.

MISS LAURA FRANKENFIELD. Who Opens a Stock Engagement at The Grand Next Week.

Teddy Bears are to be dramatized, and the piece is to be put on in the late summer or early fall.

Channing Pollock has written a play called "The Secret Orchard," which is to be produced in New York in the fall.

Francis Wilson will appear next season in a new play called "When Knights Are Bold." It is now running

W. S. Gilbert and Mrs. Henry de la Pasture are collaborating on a new comedy which will be seen in London this summer.

Beerbohm Tree, it is said, is soon to produce Comyns Carr's dramatization of Charles Dickens' unfinished story of "Cambridge Tread" 'Edwin Drood."

"Commencement Days," the new play in which Chrystal Herne is to star, is the Joint work of Margaret Mayo and Virginia Frame. houses.

Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin have closed their season, but will put "The Great Divide" on the New York stage again in August next, Margaret Mayo has arranged a one-act version of "Under Two Flags" for Toby Claude, which Miss Claude will use in vaudeville next season.

John E. Kellerd, who is touring in "Hamlet" this season, had added to his repertoire "Much Ado About Nothing" and "Othello," playing lago in the Lillian Russell will begin her sec-ond season in the legitimate in Chi-cago next fall with a new play by George Brondhurst and Goerge V. Hohart.

An action has been brought in New York against James O'Neill, the actor, for royalties amounting to about $2,000 on the play. "The Voice of the Mighty," which he has been producing.

Ellis Jeffreys has obtained from Lieblet & Co. the American rights to "The Sugar Bowl," by Madeline Lucette Ry-ley, and will make a tour under her own management next season, Miss Maxine Ellioit's next play will be by Henry V. Osmond, the English playwright, who wrote "When We Wero Twenty-One." The initial production will take place in London next fail.

Miss Marie Booth Russell (in private ife Mrs. Robert Mantell), has completed a stage arrangement for Ibsen's tragedy of "Hrand." The play will be included in Mantell's repertoire next roles.

George Ade will elaborate his sketch, "Marie Covington," into a three-act councily drama, and it will be used as a starring vehicle by Edward J. Con-nolly, who has been doing the one-act version in vaudeville.

Edmund Breese has signed a five-year contract with Henry B. Harris to be starred in a new production season after next. Mr. Breese has gene to London with Robert Edeson's ompany to play his original role in "Strongheart."

Bernard Shaw is writing a play for Cecilia Loftus, who used to be E. H.

Cecilia Loftus, who used to be E. H. Sothern's leading woman, and who was the original Peter Pan in Lon-don, now turns a cartwheel and does some imitations for a big salary as one of the members of Joe Weber's company. Florence Bindley, who has played in melodramy and in vaude-ville, is starring at the head of her company, and is playing the xylo-phone to help out.

Charles Frohman has just returned from a short visit to Paris. He there concluded an arrangement with the author of "Les Buffons," by virtue of author of Les Ballons, by virtue of which he acquires the English rights, is addition to the American, previously secured, in that play, now drawing crowds to Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's theater. It is Mr. Frohman's inten tion to present the piece in London next season at one of his West End houses

Down at Ronkonkoma, R. I., Maude Adams maintains a small farm. If it were not for the fact that she is "the best plece of theatrical property in the world," she would de-vote her entire time to the life of a farmer. What time she can spare from acting, she spends on the farm and makes a business of selling pigs and poultry. She loves privacy, and the many St. Bernards she has on her place are kept as much to ward off place are kept as much to ward off camera fiends as for pets.

Miss Margaret Illington will sever her connection with the John Drew company next week and take a much-needed rest at French Lick Springs. Her pole of Nina Jesson in "His House in Order" will be played by Miss Mabel Roebuck. Next season Miss Illington is to appear at the head of her own company and will be first seen in an English comedy, "Dr. Wake's Patient," which will be pre-sented at the Lyceum Theater, New York, in September next, Sarah Bernhardt's supposed inten-Sarah Bernhardt's supposed inten-tion to portray Mephistophiles has greatly interested the public, writes the Paris correspondent of Pall Mall. The queen of tragedy has a horror of stereotyping her talent, but there is little chance of it, she has presented most human characters. She has been a young and prospective emperor, a Danish prince, an emprose, a queen, a modern mother, a saint and a sor-ceress. To be the evil one would be the natural complement of her roles.

Actors love a loke, particularly if it is at the expense of one of their fai-iow-players. Henry E. Dixed delights in telling this joke on Wilton Lack-eyer During a performance in which they were both appearing a box was occupied by a couple end a child which began to cry at the beginning of the play. An usher immediately told the parents that if the child did not stop crying they would have to leave the theater, but would get their money back at the box office. The boy stopped crying, but when in the fourth act Wilton Lackeye comes on for a long scene the man turned to his wife and asked what the usher had said. Upon being told he quickly said to her: "Make Tommy cry."

what he says about his art:

"There are three ways of writing plays," said Mr. Thomas recently. "The first kind of writer starts out with a story he can get anywhereit need not necessarily be his own-and then he sets to work to give life

Not so many years ago. Augustus

Thomas, author of "The Other Girl," was a reporter for the Kansas City to that story. The second kind of writer is the one who finds or conceives a very strong situation and writes up to that and down from it. The third type is the one who starts

The third type is the one who starts with a set of characters, or with one character, and lets them work out their own story." "And which type of man are you, Mr. Thomas?" asked the interviewer: "which of the three methods do you employ in writing plays?" "The third." he replied, laconically. "I begin with a group of characters and let them live together for a while, and they make their own story. If the public is disappointed. I'm not, for I have no idea how the thing will work out—they develop their own story, you see. Under these condi-tions, if a man tried to bind his char-acters by conventions, they would med of the theorem.

acters by conventions, they would smell of the theater. "How long do I think about my characters? Oh, that depends; some characters? Oh, that depends; some times a year, sometimes two; some-times not longer than six months. The work of a play is all done when the writing is commenced. That is the mere mechanical part." After Mr. Thomas has his dramas well in mind---when his dream-people have lived together, have joys and serrows, and developed, through situ-ations, a plot, he sketches the story orally to the manager for whom he is writing the place. If this resume proves satisfactory, he then writes a scenario, a composite victure of the regular sequence. "The division into scenes and neis? Oh, it isn't a question of division, but of construction. Scenes are a neces-sity. They are the anatomy of the thing. thing. You can't measure them off with a yard stick." "Does your environment affect your work?"

your work?" "Other things being equal, it does not. I can work and write any-where. As for incidents which sug-gest my plays, as a man gets along in life he draws on his own observa-tion; every bit of experience, of travel, is valuable to him, and he never if ows when he is going to need it." "The length of time for writing a blay after the mental construction is complete differs, of course, depending upon circumstances. Mr. Thomas has been known to write an act in onbeen known to write an act in on-night, while sometimes he is busy on one as long as a month, "Do you like writing to order, or would you usef it to follow your own inclination?"

would voit worf it to follow your own inclination?"
"Yes, I like it." answered Mr, Thomas thoughtfully, "If I am writing 't for any actar with a strong, inspir-tus personality, Thomas W Roiss, for ustance. It is a great pleasure to write a play for him. His personality is so strong so full of insulation."
"While writing a play for some par-ticular actor must be a great guide to you in the matter of character work, do you not find it a restriction that sometimes hampers you?"
"Yes, I do, of course, but one off-sets the other; it's a commensating thing." renied the nlaywright."
Asked if, when actively at work on other, the dramatist replied: "Sometimes an allen character opposite female character as "Her friend." These names bear the same relation to the people they stand for as a modiste's dummy models do to the frocks which are maped and fit-

The frocks which are emped and ht-ted upon them. They serve for the fittings and the drudgery. "Do you get as much pleasure out of a big hit now as you did the first time?" time

"Well, it is different," he answered, "At first the pleasure is like that felt in a successful 'stunt' of any kind, but after a while you get used to it and look at it more as a plain business proposition.

iness proposition." Speaking again of his characters "working out their own salvation," Mr. Thomas cited the case of "The Earl of Pawtucket," which was writ-ten for Lawrence D'Orsay. "Naturally," said the dramatist. "you take an Englishman of D'Orsay's pronounced type. Then you associate him in your mind with a girl. Next the questions arise: "Who is she?" "What is she?" and the story begins to work itself out?"

Mr. Thomas said that he is always looking ahead about a year, and keeps working ahead of the market at least that time.

Didn't 'Member.

"Mamma says for you to please tell when it is 4 o'clock, for she says I must come home then." said our neighbor's wee daughter, when she came over to play with our children one afternoon. When the time came, I reminded her of what her mother had said. "Oh, mamma said if 'membered, but I don't 'member,' said the child, and kept on playing.--Chicago Tribune.

to modern drama and says he will make that his life work. For the first time he is essaying such a role, and he has not one regret for the classic or ro-

that his life work. For the first time he is essaying such a role, and he has not one regret for the classic or ro-mantic plays. Walker Whiteside is of the medium height, yet his physical being impresses one with the idea of considerable reserve force. Quiet and calm-eyed, he looks the man whom no amount of labor in pros-pect could terrify. The type that would reply when told an apparently impos-sible task was in prospect: "When shall we begin?" "I went upon the stage before I was is," said Mr. Whiteside to a representa-tive of The Times. "For years before that I had thought and dreamed of what I might do if given the opportunity. It was in Chi-cago, years ago, that I first met Irving, and I sat in the gallery night after night and studied him. Then, quietly, I appended to him an agree and I was given an opportunity to not as supernumerary and get closer to the greet man and to study him at first hand, and from an-other angle of view. In the months that passed I studied and declaimed, and then I got together a little company and went out to play 'Hamlet.' It looks odd now when I think of the seriousness of it all. It had its effect, however, in fitting me for better things, and then I had the chance to go to New York and play there at the Union Square Theatre. I did 'Hamlet.' of course, and the Times that anot ill spent. From that I went about the country, playing where I might, and next I cessayed Telchard III. One may look hack at those early years and smills a little, but it has all had its effect in the building of what I may call my character. In the latter days I became more confident and I essayed Telchelieu." The character of the willy cardinal ap-pealed to my youthful fancy and I made him a close study. What was the result I can hardly say, but he satisfied me for the time being. Perhaps much of enario, a composite victure of the lece, and then follows the piny in ctall, seene by scene, act by act, in