

PRIMARY FAIR AT NEPHI.

Special Exhibit of the Little Folk's Handwork.

(Original composition of the News.)

SATURDAY, Oct. 2, 1892.—Friday and Saturday were busy days in Nephi, the result of a fair held by the two Primary Associations of the city in connection with the anniversary of the city.

I arrived late on Saturday and open my visit to the Fair. Nothing more than the fair was held found that the articles placed on exhibition by the Little Folk had been removed. The display, however, had been a most interesting one and did credit to the association, whose preceding officers are Mrs. Esther Gardner, Anna A. Roseboom and Diana Fenton. Articles worth mentioning are a quilt made by members of the association, rag and fancy work.

Nephi contains two Primary associations in the North and South wards respectively. The president of the organization in the North Ward is Mrs. Katherina and Elizabeth Green, and the South Ward, Susanna Emett, Mrs. Elizabeth Lutkin and Little Green. Each ward has a harmonium and organ and a piano, and a small organ. The organist is Ernest Wink, and the South Ward band numbering twenty-four, with Master Hyatt, band master. The band has given a good account of itself. The organ and piano have been loaned by the First Ward Association.

The large display made in the time of home production could not be avoided, and the girls who had charge of the same, as the one occupied, everything exhibited was a gem, and it would be difficult to select articles of special merit from among the great number of articles shown. A small boy, probably two feet square, and made so prettily that every was woven theron is the fair entitled by Master Thomas Carter, the manufacturer, whose name is well known throughout the country.

Light bird, a wood carver by Francis Julian, quite made by Leslie Clapp and Bird, birds both under fifteen years of age, a full scale representation of the life of the Moths, showing a large variety of fancy work were the specialties of the South Ward display, in which was also a needle work and painted picture representing a portion of scenes made by students.

There was a good display of dried fruit, a wood carver by Master Thomas Carter, the manufacturer, whose name is well known throughout the country.

The large display made in the time of home production could not be avoided, and the girls who had charge of the same, as the one occupied, everything exhibited was a gem, and it would be difficult to select articles of special merit from among the great number of articles shown. A small boy, probably two feet square, and made so prettily that every was woven theron is the fair entitled by Master Thomas Carter, the manufacturer, whose name is well known throughout the country.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

The artist, Miss Mary, who had charge of the fair, was a good one.

not having been in full operation in England since 1860. I will add that the first was a very successful one, and the last where the peddlers of Irish goods, with their men and women, could be obtained, $200,000 bringing the sum up to $1,000,000. This is the amount of which have to report to the registrar general's office where the bills are again recorded, as it will be seen that a search in the principal office will give the exact amount of traveling tax.

I am of the opinion that similar arrangements could be made with the registrar general's office, as the General Register Office, London, U.K., W. D. Brewster, Mr. Alfred Edward Stevenson, of Salt Lake City, and T. W. Brewster, of this place, have issued the forms of bill, marriage and death, etc., etc. They are now in use with the registrar general and take much interest there.

M. W. D.

HER POSES WERE UNDECODING.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN A CLOTHESLINE AND AN ATTITUDE OF ATTENTION.

The natural repose of her face had been materially suffered by the hand of art when she seated herself carefully in the photograph's chair and turned her eyes in the direction of the camera. Yet the most careful observer could not be deceived into thinking her beautiful.

"Mum, if you please, look—"

The artist was interrupted by a derisive laugh at the hand.

"Go directly to the artist," said the young man, "I have written to him twice, and I have not yet received an answer."

The longest interview in a carriage was a bad loss on the side, but the sides passed one. She again sat by him, called her eyes until her glasses rested upon the rail and sighed.

"There" she movement in a soft voice, "will that be all?"

"Not much. I know what I want."

The photographer merely wished to call attention to the distinction between a composure and an attitude of attention. He concluded, however, to remain silent.

"There is only one thing," the sitter explained, "upon which I wish to have your opinion."

The artist bowed.

"I can't really make up my mind whether a smile or a serious look is the more becoming to me."

The artist would not willingly undertake so delicate a task and admitted his inability to decide without sample study. He agreed to be respectfully interested, but said nothing.

"Do I look better like this?"

The artist, upon an expression approximating in severity that of the George Washington.

"No, this."

She stretched her face with a smile that would have caused the stork to quail.

"Which do you say?"

The artist thought of the delicate mechanism of his camera and groaned in spirit.

"My dear madam!"

She was listening eagerly.

"If you could manage—"

"Oh, yes, certainly."

"It is difficult to decide—"

"Either right—"

"Either left—"

She assumed a weak simulation of distress.

"And if you could take little of such—a very little—"

She started in horror.

"And try something else—"

She got up. She had wriggled into her wings in a twinkling, made a few disjointed observations about being installed and fitted snug.

"A very little of each, to be sure," were the words which rang in the ears of the artist, and it seemed as if they came as in a dream—the last clause.

"An artist's rights are sacred,

and I will not give up my rights."

"I will not give up my rights