The Officers' Story in the Marks-

Yesterday afternoon in the case of the People vs. John T. Sullivan and resist the officers, as it might be a serious matter. Mrs. Marks was much house; Mr. Sullivan told me that he had received a dispatch from Mr.

Evans; heard Sullivan say that he was tended to take adsistance, as he was not going to take any chances; the day after I saw a number of men tearing the house down; recognized Mr. Tomphins among them, JosephFerguson was the first witness place; the first I heard of it was when Sullivan came to me and asked me to help move some furniture; knew that Sullivan was an officer, and went with him to Mrs. Marks' house; the house was situated on the Edreks Hotel property; upon arriving at the house, we met Mr. Lynett; Mr. Sullivan went to the bedroom door and asked to be admitted; Mrs. Marks refused to open the door; Mr. Sullivan then took a piece board and struck the door: Mrs. Marks had a revolver in each hand, and said,

"If you break, I'll break you;"Sullivan then went to the window and told

Mrs. Marks that was the dearest gun she had ever pointed; I had some conversation with Mrs. Marks after this, and advised her to give up the house to the officer; sie replied that she would never do so;

Sullivan went away and returned, bringing with him Mr. Howe, Mr.

Lynett and Mr. Douglas, who were armed with guss; Sullivan attempted to read a warrant of arrest to her, but she would not listen to ft. It was between 2 and 3 o'clock when Sullivan returned with the men, whom he placed
