Underground Danger.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 7.—The inhabitants of St. Petersburg, the center of the great Russian petroleum field, have been much alarmed over a subterranean explosion, which shook houses and caused considerable damage. At the same time a volcano burst on Lobkha, ten miles distant, throwing a column of fire and mud 350 feet high, illuminating the country for miles around.

From seven to fourteen feet deep over a full square mile of territory.

THE RAILROAD HORROR.

INTERESTING BUT PAINFUL INCIDENTS.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 7.—Mr. Henry W. Tewksbury, of West Randolph, Vermont, the lecturer, states that he was in the first day coach. He was dozing at the time of the accident, but was aroused by feeling the car jumping up on the railroad ties. He had been in the railroad coach for some time, and was seated with the intention of making his escape. The train seemed to come to a standstill, or to go very slowly, and he thought it was all right and so sat down again. Then without a moment's warning he felt something was wrong, and the car seemed to leap into space and then came the terrible crash. For a moment he was stunned, and scarcely knew whether he was dead or alive. He tried to move but found he could not.

RUDE AN INCH.

He noticed with great alarm that the flames had broken out at the farther end of the coach. He struggled with all his strength to free himself, but was unable to do so. He was in a state of panic, and was unable to do anything but sit there and wait for death. He was in a state of panic, and was unable to do anything but sit there and wait for death.

At this time the railroad bridge above him was a mass of fire, and the heavy burning timbers were falling all about him. Having less than a second's time to live, he turned back and resignedly to meet what seemed his fearful fate, his hopes of life were renewed. He suggested that the engine and the car, and saw the engineer and fireman close at hand. He called to them for assistance, but they were too far off to hear him. He was in a state of panic, and was unable to do anything but sit there and wait for death.

He begged them to try again, and break his leg if necessary. They did so, and he was able to get out. He was in a state of panic, and was unable to do anything but sit there and wait for death.

Foreign Grain Trade.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Mark Lane Express in its review of the British grain trade, says: The condition of English wheat offered has shown no improvement, and as a result there have been no sales of British wheat in both London and the provinces. The sale of English wheat during the week past was 44,800 quarters at 4s 6d against 47,484 in the corresponding period of last year. It is estimated that the total wheat crop of the year 1886-87, has been eighteen per cent. smaller than the average for the period in 1885-86 in this country; four per cent. lower, made in foreign wheat, is stagnant. Arrivals have been heavy, and stocks are increasing at Liverpool, Bristol and London. Australian shipments are commencing, and the new crop of the Argentine Republic, Chili and the United States is expected to be no chance for higher value. Flour is dull and unchanged quotations. Corn hardened, and prices have advanced 3d. Oats are firmer, and have recovered 1s 6d, but are still at a discount in the market. Barley and peas were unchanged. Corn and pulse were unchanged.

The Abyssinians held Sallabier, an Italian engineer, as a hostage. The latter was threatened with death and begged the Italian commander to come to an agreement with Rasoulia. The commander replied that he was unable to do so because the Italian forts were in a state of disrepair, and he was ready to resist the Abyssinians.

How to Live a Full Century.

Prof. Humphry, of Cambridge, has prepared a series of tables which contain some interesting information about centenarians. Of fifty-two persons whom he mentions, at least eleven—two males and nine females—actually attained the age of 100. Others attained very nearly to the hundred years. Only one of the persons reached 108 years, while one died at the alleged age of 106. Of the fifty-two persons, thirty-six were women and sixteen men. Prof. Humphry tells us that the comparative immunity of women from the exposure and risks to which men are subjected, and the greater temperance in eating and drinking exhibited by women are the chief points in determining their higher chances of longevity. Of the thirty-six women, twenty-six had been married, and eleven had borne large families. Of the sixteen men who had been married, eight had married before they were 30, one at 36 and two at 47.

Two of the fifty-two centenarians were discovered to have been the eldest children of their parents. This fact, adds Dr. Humphry, does not agree with the popular notion of immortality of women. The fact that "firstlings" are to be depended upon for good performance in the course. The centenarians generally regarded as "firstlings" are, as a rule, absent. It seems, however, that the fact that the women are destined to great age needs no such propinquity, and that the none of the peccant humors for which the finger joints (as in youth), may find a vent."—St. James Gazette.
