

my face," whispered as the breath of life was passing from her. She had always entertained a strong aversion to ostentatious funerals, and her wishes in this respect will be fulfilled to the letter by her friends.

Early on Thursday she knew her end was approaching. At three o'clock in the afternoon she called her family around the arm chair in which she expired—for her sufferings prevented her from resting on a bed. Sadly did every member respond to the summons. In the little circle were Dr. Parton, Miss Eldridge, the dying lady's daughter, her two sisters, Miss Julia Willis and Mrs. Bumstead, and a little grandchild. Dr. Sturges, her physician, came in at that moment and found the group. The authoress, whose life was rapidly ebbing, called each to her side and said a few words of admonition till she had reached the last. When her little grandchild came to her, she directed Dr. Parton to send her early to bed, and if her death occurred that night not to tell the child till to-morrow.

Soon after this sad scene Dr. Sturges stepped forward and felt her pulse. The authoress fixed her gaze upon him, and asked firmly:

"Doctor, am I dying?"

The doctor answered, "Yes."

Her pulse had almost gone, and she presented unmistakable traces of her approaching demise; but the announcement of the physician made no impression upon her. At half-past six o'clock those around her noticed that she was unusually still. They felt her pulse; it had stopped. She had just closed her eyes as if to sleep. A mirror was placed to her lips, but its continued brightness revealed the fact that she had breathed her last.—New York Sun.

FOREIGN NOTES.

Solomon's Temple is to be reproduced at the Vienna Exhibition.

The drinking of absinthe has wonderfully fallen off in Paris. The drinkers have also fallen off wonderfully.

The oldest artesian well in Europe, is at Lillers, in the Pas de Calais, France, and from its mouth water has flowed uninterruptedly for 746 years.

A regular crusade against Nebraska emigration has been entered on by the London Times, which recommends the Red River country instead.

A Paris correspondent asserts that from twenty to thirty priests in that diocese marry annually. The Archbishop is reported to have said: "Marry, since you must, but keep it quiet!"

The German women of Dresden now imitate the gay elegance of the American ladies who throng that city, and the quiet customs that used to prevail are seen no longer.

The reporters who attempted to take a verbatim report of the remarks of the last session of the British Association got as far as monitromonobomben-zene and matamonitromonobrombenzene.

It is said that the English system of reformatory schools, by which young criminals are trapped and trained before they are developed into manhood and womanhood, has resulted in turning nearly eight out of every ten into honest courses.

An Englishman named Young writes to the London Times that Mrs. Theresa Black, Byron's "Maid of Athens," is still living in England at the age of 70 years, and in a state of destitution which requires instant relief. Mrs. Black being the widow of the late English Vice Consul at Missolonghi.

The governments of Germany and Belgium have, in consequence of the increased price of provisions—which is fully felt on the continent—increased the salaries of their employees. Salaries of less than $1,500 a year have had 15 per cent. added to them, while incomes of above that amount have been increased 10 per cent.

Lord Hatherly's resignation is said to have been caused by his failing sight. He has for some time been suffering from a disease of the eyes, which threatens to make him blind. As a chancellor he was a failure, but as a judge he was always highly respected and greatly liked by both parties.

The importation of cloth into Japan from Europe, and particularly from Germany, has increased to an enormous extent within a few years. The German Government has taken official notice of this fact. The Japanese greatly prefer gray color, and German manufacturers and exporters are advised by their government to send cloth to Japan of the same quality and at the same prices as that furnished from England and France.
