I have before me a circular, sent recitation, each class of females, England, Feb. 28, 1876, the comto the organ, where the exercises lowing machinery to Salt Lakewere closed with a song, and in most instances the teacher officiated as organist. We were sorry to learn that Prest. F. A. Hammond, who has charge of an interesting class of "silver grays," was not able to meet with the school on that day on account of sickness. His counselor, however, David McKay, in response to the call bell, led forth an interesting class of young men, whom he had been instructing; we need scarcely add that they did well, for the very group, comprising iron pipes, boshpresence of these two men as teachers is an evidence of the success of the school. How noble it appeared hot and cold blast valves and best to see these men willing to enlist as teachers of a Sabbath school, side linings. But why regard it as an anomaly? If memory serves | gas, etc. me right the amount expended for the school during one year was one gine," &c. hundred and forty-five dollars, together with the labors of the teachers on the Sabbath day, and a willing heart, at all times, on the part of the superintendent. The fusion. result is that nearly every child is found in school, while, as we were informed, their leisure moments during the week days are devoted to the studies for the Sabbath This appeared to be a self-evident truth on hearing them recite; for they certainly could not have done so well if their heart and thought had not been in their labor. All admired the promptness with which each of the childen, small and grown (from six years up), recited passages from the Bible, cateclaism, and other sacred works; at each question every hand in the tion of works, £54,500 per an class would be up, and every tongue num, equal to 27 per cent on eager to give the answer.

At the close of the exercises appropriate remarks were made by Sup't Richard Ballantyne, L. J Monch, W. W. Stowell, O. Eggleston, Prest. F. A. Hammond, who was able to meet the school a short time, and David McKay.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 24, 1876.

Editor Deseret News: There have been many good suggestions made through the columns the many circulars and advertizing of the NEWS in relation to the importance of home industries and employment of labor, to enable us to be self-sustaining and less reliant upon foreign products. Permit me to call your attention, though often before referred to in your columns, to the foundation upon which al other successful industries are based -the manufacture of iron from the ores that so profusely abound on off by a general Indian war, and every side of us. The fitful, uncer: the supply of the whole Pacific tain dazzle of our gold and silver Slope should fail? What departmines, like the fascination of the gaming table, has blinded our eyes and bewildered our senses to the more solid and much more permanmodest and unassuming ores that form an important part of our twenty-five miles of this city, an malleable iron ore, said to be equal to the best Swedish iron, of which there is, and has been for ages past, a continuous demand in Great Britain. The above refers to only one of cards sent to this Territory by companies in Europe and the United States. Why cannot we supply ourselves and all the mining and other demands of this and surrounding Territories and States? The idea is mortifying, to find we are so helpless and dependent upon outside supply. How, if communication from the East should be cut ment of the industries could move without the iron manufactures?

We have the best iron workers here that the world produces, from ent source of prosperity and wealth Birmingham, Sheffield, Scotland, to the entire community, these Sweden, Norway and Pennsylvania in our own country. Can't | can't we employ them, rather than every day life. We have, within drive them into new and, to them, unknown occupations out of which inexaustible supply of the best they can scarcely hope to get a meagre existence?
