NATURAL GAS.

A Smithfield Man is Putting it in Practical Use.

It seems strange that in a place like Cache Valley, enjoying, as it does, a reputation for the energy and progressiveness of its inhabitants, one of its most important natural resources has been so long and so completely overlooked. It has been known for many years that large quantities of natural gas were being evolved from the earth in the Cache Valley, but it was not until within the last few years that it was being put to practical use. The first person to do this was a man named Smithfield, who has been putting it to practical use for some time. He has been putting it to practical use in his home, and he has been putting it to practical use in his business. He has been putting it to practical use in his home, and he has been putting it to practical use in his business. He has been putting it to practical use in his home, and he has been putting it to practical use in his business.
