

American Medal for Safety Devices.

A distinguished jury of experts chosen by the American Museum of Safety Devices, after a careful examination of the exhibits in the Museum have made the first annual award of the Scientific American Medal.

The American medal, offered for the best device for protecting life and limb. The jury consisted of Professor F. R. Hutton, chairman, Messrs. H. H. Westinghouse, Stuyvesant Fish, George

Glimour, John Hayes Hammond, Samuel Sheldon and Cornelius Vanderbilt. The findings of so distinguished a jury will certainly carry great weight. The award of the gold medal for 1908 was made in the field of transportation and was presented at a luncheon at the Engineers' Club, New York, May 25th. It was eminently proper that the first medal should be given for a device for safe-guarding life at sea. To prevent fire by proper ventilation, to detect fire by purely mechanical means, and to put out the fire in especially inaccessible places with the aid of a live stream is the object of this device, which has already been "tried by fire" in a number of instances. The device consists of one-inch pipes, which run to each hold and coal bunker. These pipes are all assembled at the bridge, where they terminate in a case with a glass window. At the top is a small fan constantly exhausting air from all sections of the vessel. In front is a clock which rings a bell once every fifteen minutes, calling the attention of one of the officers to the apparatus. If there is no indication of smoke he rings a time clock and gives the smoke-detector no attention for another fifteen minutes. If a fire is detected, the case is opened and a hose is attached to the end of the pipe and live steam is run into the compartment, putting out the blaze, or at least checking it until it could be fought from below.

The medal, which is two and three-eighths inches in diameter has an allegorical design and is inscribed "Scientific American Medal." On the reverse is engraved "Awarded to Rich Marine Fire Indicating and Extinguishing System for the Most Meritorious Invention in Transportation at the Exposition Held by the American Museum of Safety Devices, New York, 1908." The Wein Quadrant Davit and the Shimen Automatic Railroad Signal received honorable mention.

We Devote the Coming Week to a Special Exhibit and Low Priced Selling of White Yard Goods, Wearables, Lingerie, and Household Needs.

Fashions may come and go, but white is always in style for summer wear. This season bids fair to see the summer maids and matrons wearing more white than ever before. And after all, what else is so becoming, so cheerful, so cool and comfortable as a fairy white costume?

We have prepared liberally to supply needs in White Goods, specially, carefully and skillfully. You will find our stocks wide and diversified, and choosing pleasant and easy. Whatever your needs and whatever your tastes—in white wearables or materials, we can suit you with good qualities at round savings.

You, who are familiar with the standards and policies of this store, know that when we planned and prepared for this exhibit, we did not tire in our provisions, nor weary in our well doing. And in the special pricing of this white merchandise, our heart was in our work.

But we will not go into raptures over this White Exhibit or exult about the low prices. We will leave that for you to do—when you come. Enough to say that "My Lady" has no better time to supply her summer wearables than now while choice is excellent and prices are low.

Irresistible Sample White Waists

One-Third to One-Half Underpriced!

This is the greatest shirt waist offer ever made and you will not doubt or question this statement when you see these waists. They consist of the complete sample lines of two of New York's most noted manufacturers, in sizes 36 and 38 only; hardly any two alike out of the hundreds we show; made of the finest sheer fabrics and trimmed with the daintiest of laces, embroidery, medallions, etc., in intricate and elaborate designs of val lace, cluny lace, filet and Baby Irish lace and solid lace yokes. The sleeves are of the handsomest, newest patterns, with lace insertions and trimmings to match fronts of waists. Not one of the Waists offered in this sale which is not entitled by right of its newness, beauty, originality of style and excellence of make-up, to a price double that which it now bears. And beyond the extraordinary nature of the values, we emphasize the greatness of variety, which affords widest scope for choice among Waists of every degree of fineness.
