J. Gould and the Union Pacific. Mr. Loveland testified that Gould and Sidney Dillon had once suggested to him that he should BUN FOR GOVERNOR of Colorado. He denied that they had suggested he should run for the United States Senate. United States Senator Henry M. Teller was then sworn. In reply to questions by Commissioner Littler, he testified that he did not believe there was a word of truth in the statement made before this commission yesterday to the effect

BECAME SUCCESSFUL (meaning himself). If the Union Paci-fic exerted any influence, which the Senator would not say it did, it would be an influence against him, as he had he testified that the firm of which he had been a member until 1882, which consisted of his brother, himself and another lawyer, had been attorneys for the Northern Pacific Company part of the time on a salary of $3,000 or $3,000 a year, but said at that time he had no connection whatever with the firm nor with the railroad. In reply to questions by Commissioner Anderson, he said he did not believe the United States Government should itself attempt to run a railroad. He saw no warrant in the Constitution for the assumption of such a function by the government. He thought it would be better for the government to specify a fixed annual sum which it would require the Union Pacific to pay, rather than a percentage of the net earnings, as the latter plan led to disputes as to what the net earnings really were.
