A TINGE OF ROMANCE.

Someone who has been staying at Homburg has just come to London with the story of a romance about Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, and a very pretty American—a Miss Deacon—not, however, the girl of that name of whom the Crown Prince of Germany was enamored. The prince was immensely fond of her during his brief time in the small resort—American especially doing their best to give him a "real good time." His highness is one of the men reputed to be a confirmed bachelor, owing to a previous "affaire" in the day when Queen Victoria was alive. He was then madly in love with an American girl, who has since married a British peer. It was said at the time that he was prepared to risk anything and if needs be, relinquish his position for the sake of the fair one. When a belle of the day discovered that in the event of her marriage to his severe highness, he would be disgraced and an outcast, she promptly told the prince "she cared too deeply for him to spoil his life," but before six months were over, she had married! This experience should have taught Prince Albert not to have "gone and done it" again; but some "won't" learn. They say he is badly hit this time and people are wondering what will happen next.

COUNTRY HOUSE VISITS.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bayliss are making a round of country house visits, and I hear the lady's friends are causing an immense sensation wherever she goes with the natural result that the women hate her for all they are worth. Mrs. E. L. Bayliss—she was Miss Van Rensselaer before her marriage—is unquestionably the smartest American over here just now. Unique takes a lot of her clothes. An academical always designs them, after which she has her own say in the matter; for she is a woman with the courage of her convictions. When she has approved of the sketches, for which, of course, she pays a high price, she takes them to Paris and places them in the hands of Worth or Duet. She sees to every detail herself, matching or contrasting colors, for contrary to their usual customs the great artists in clothes allow her to dictate to them because they know their reputation will suffer nothing thereby.

QUEEN MAUD OF NORWAY.

The American artist, Mrs. Dupont Couder, better known as Amalia Kussner, has had many royal commissions, so it can be no surprise to her to have received an order for a miniature of Queen Maud of Norway. Mrs. Dupont has an immense vogue over here and commands big prices for her work. She is to paint Queen Maud's portrait when her majesty comes to her little unpretentious house in the king's grounds at Sandringham some time during the early winter. Amalia Kussner has already executed pictures of the czar and zarina and their children and was their imperial majesties' guest at the winter palace when she carried out the commission. Just now the artist is laid up with neuritis, but she hopes to have recovered when it is time to go to Sandringham.

ITALIAN APOSTLE OF DIRT TALKS OF HIS CREED.

Special Correspondence.

LORENZO, Italy, Sept. 12.—When Frederic Cerboni was discovered recently, several short paragraphs were published about him. He is a chemist by profession and 75 years old. When he declared that he expected to live twice that age, people were surprised. They were more surprised when he was reported as saying that the secret of health and long life was to avoid soap and water and never wash. He himself, according to the statements then published, has never taken a bath.

It now appears that these statements are all true, for the editor of "La Nazione" of this city sent a special correspondent to the aged professor's home at Gelsomino, not far from Rome, and interviewed him.

Before the interview was published the professor read it over and then signed it. Here, in brief, is what he says in it: "The secret of long life and health is to get as close to nature as possible. Go back to the history of the beginning of all things. Did not Adam and Eve and Moses and Aaron and Methuselah and the hosts that lived in the first centuries live to great old ages? They were close to nature. They did not use soap and toilet powder and all the other abominable things people nowadays use. In the Roman period, the luxuries of the baths shortened lives. A man in those days was old at 60. In the middle ages where you find baths, looking glasses, brushes, sponges, soaps? It is true that disease wiped out the people freely, but that was because they had no physicians worthy of the name and no knowledge of the science of cure.

"The present day hygiene—what is it? A myth, a mere superstition. Microbes are killed by other microbes. That is the long and short of it. I am a chemist. I know my profession well and, therefore, I know all about this fad of hygiene.

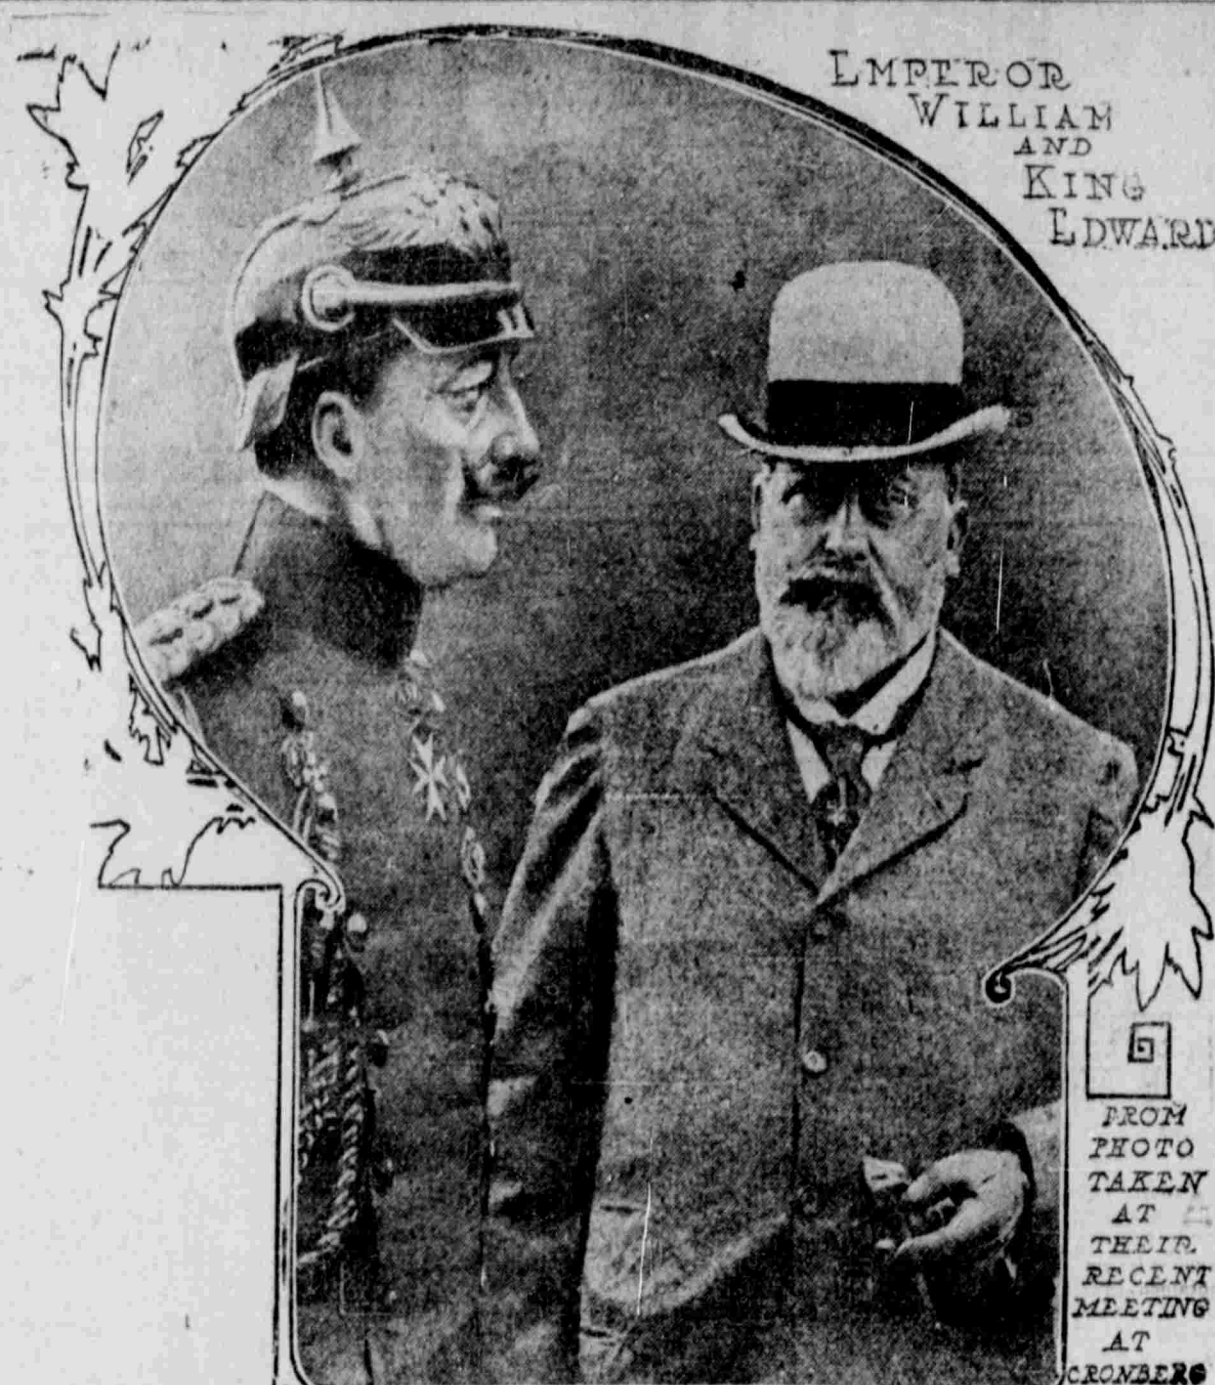

"Look at the number of people who live to 100 or more. The newspapers tell us of them now and again. Who are they? Simple peasants in the mountains or the country. They do not take daily baths or use the deadly soaps and toilet foolishnesses. They live close to nature and the soil from which they sprang.

"To wash one's clothes or one's rooms is different. I am hale and hearty. I have a good appetite. I sleep well. I am vigorous and in my prime. I have never had a day's illness in my life. I

LORD CURZON COMING HERE.

Cable dispatches announce that Lord Curzon, formerly Viceroy of India, whose wife died a short time ago, will come to the United States this autumn. Lord Curzon and his children are now staying in Scotland with Mrs. Lett, his late wife's mother.

EMPEROR AND KING NOW ON GOOD TERMS.

From the cabled accounts of several recent meetings between Emperor William and King Edward it would seem that the unpleasantness that was known to exist between the British monarch and his volatile nephew has been transformed into a personal entente cordiale. That the personal differences of the two rulers have been buried is made fairly certain by their recent meeting at Cronberg, where they appeared together in the best of good humor.

shall live to be perhaps 150 years old. And yet I never wash. I cannot remember to have ever taken a bath. Water is all right. To take a swim in it is healthful exercise. But that is all. I have analyzed soaps and all the toilet fads of the modern man and woman. They are all more or less deadly and harmful. I have never used any of them. Towels, sponges, brushes and all such things are so much useless lumber. I never even wash my face in the morning. Naturally I rise my hands occasionally and wipe them on my hair or my trousers or more often let them dry naturally. How many fringed towels and tooth brushes do you think Methuselah owned?

Bah! It makes me sick to think of the fools who enrich the soap makers. "I wear the same clothes all the year round. I never take them off from one Christmas to the next. In the hot weather, I shed my coat, my vest perhaps. In winter I may wear a heavier coat. That is all. I go to bed in my clothes and also my boots. I am never offensive to other people. The world would be better off if every one followed my example. People would live longer, and be in better health. They would not waste half their lives and their money in attending to their toilet and at watering places and hydropathic establishments.

"I have given you the secret of health and long life. Be a public benefactor and publish it to the world."

MEN PAST SIXTY IN DANGER.

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostate gland. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of these diseases. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rock Port, Mo., says: "I suffered with enlarged prostate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 61 years old. #### German Wine Prospects.

Consul W. Schumann, of Mainz, says the outlook for either a fine or fair vintage in Germany is fast disappearing.

To the middle of July the condition of the vineyards was most satisfactory. About that time, however, several very cold and foggy nights set in, followed by intense heat. Soon after that very much feared disease of the vine, peronospora, made its appearance, and spread with most extraordinary rapidity to almost all vineyards—to those that had not been sprayed with sulphate of copper solutions as well as to those that had. The infection assails leaves and also the grapes. The leaves turn rusty and the fruit withers, causing the fruit to drop off. Strenuous efforts are being made to combat the disease, but at present there seems little prospect of saving much of the vintage in some of the wine-growing districts.

American Shoes Abroad: Unfair Treatment in Belgium.

CONSUL GENERAL G. W. ROOSEVELT, of Brussels, after investigating the local market in regard to its demand and supply of American shoes, came to the conclusion that better efforts ought to be made to meet the increasing demand. He writes:

In view of the fact that an immense trade is carried on in this city in ready-made shoes, I find that although they are in fair demand, it is next to impossible to buy a pair of fine first-class American ready-made shoes, men's or women's, in this city. Occasionally one's attention is attracted to a pair of shoes exhibited in some show window ticketed with a flamboyant small card bearing the American flag and legend "American shoes." When the possible buyer enters the store and requests to be fitted with a similar pair, he is most likely told that the shoes in the window are a model pair and for the moment the only pair in stock, but they have Belgian-made shoes in every respect a perfect counterpart of the American article. It may be remarked that the Belgian-made shoe strongly resembles in cut and style but lacks the finish of the American ready-made shoe. These imitation shoes are usually manufactured from native leather from American styles and on machines rented from parties in the United States.

AMERICAN SHOE STORE NEEDED.

In view of the growing popularity of the American style shoes for both men and women, as well as from information gathered from interested persons making inquiries at this consulate relative to this article of trade, I am persuaded that Brussels offers a most advantageous opening for an enterprising, up-to-date firm ambitious to capture the trade of this market. This can be done by establishing a well-appointed, up-to-date store and selling only first-class goods, as the average Belgian is a critical buyer, willing to pay a good price for first-class goods, and remains a constant customer once his confidence is gained. Consequently I see no reason why a store on the order here mentioned should not in a comparatively short time do a most thriving business and at the same time establish a well-merited reputation for our fine-grade shoes.

UNFAIRLY TREATED.

I am informed by shoe dealers here that most of the American shoes now sold on this market are bought through agents in London; that the goods are of a cheap grade and sold here at high prices, and in all cases at higher prices than a corresponding grade of Belgian-made shoes, thus creating for American shoes a reputation for high prices and poor quality, naturally putting an end to the consumers confidence and custom. Leading wholesale and retail shoe dealers in Brussels agree as to this being a first-class market for American fine-grade shoes, provided the enterprise is introduced under attractive business methods. This could easily be accomplished by intending exporters, who could look the field over and familiarize themselves with the requirements of the market. An undeniable proof that American shoes are appreciated on this market for their perfect shape and fit is the fact that they have been copied and the imitations manufactured and sold here.

CHARACTER AND PRICES.

Belgian dealers claim that the class of American shoes sold here are not equal to the Belgian article, either in point of make or materials used. That one of the most serious complaints is against the soles, which are said to be made of a soft porous leather unsuited to this damp climate. The average retail selling price of men's ready-made shoes is from $4 to $6.40 per pair, and it is claimed that the grade of men's shoes imported four years ago and retailed at $2.50 per pair were of better quality than the $3 to $3.10 now imported. The leathers used for men's shoes are box calf, vici kid, Russian calf, willow calf, patent leather, kid, and patent calf. Patent leather is fairly well liked, though regarded as somewhat too brittle. Heels on men's shoes are always low, and on women's shoes usually about 1 1/2 inches in height. The English are the greatest competitors for the trade, and their shoes especially men's, are made from American models and find a fairly ready sale here. The only other competitors are the French and Germans, the former sending fancy goods and Germany the cheapest grade. French and German prices average about the same for the same class of goods. The method of payment is from 30 days to six months.

FLOURISHING GERMANY.

Consul Walter Schumann, of Mainz, writes about the shoe trade in the German empire, which is reported to be flourishing and prosperous: A newspaper describing the opening of the exhibition of machine-made boots and shoes held in the city of Cassel, reports that one of the speakers reminded his audience that the German boot and shoe industry was only 40 years old. In spite of its youthfulness, however, it is in a flourishing condition. The German empire contains 1,600 boot

BERNARD SHAW A NUDE MODEL.

George Bernard Shaw, the witty Irish playwright-publisher, posed in the nude as Rodin's "The Thinker." It is the sensation of the Photographic society's annual show now in progress in London. It is an impressionist photograph by a widely known American artist, Alvin Langdon Coburn.

By a remarkable exercise of the photographic art Coburn has got rid of Shaw's misanthropic expression and has produced a wonderful resemblance to Rodin's great work. The photograph was suggested by Rodin himself to Shaw when the latter was sitting to that artist in Paris this year for his statue. Shaw has also been posed this year by Neville Lytton, the Earl of Lytton's brother, in imitation of Velasquez's famous portrait of Pope Innocent X.

and shoe factories, employing 60,000 workmen, who are earning between them the sum of $12,000,000 per annum. Last years 60,000,000 pairs of boots and shoes were made in the empire, whose total value was about $75,000,000.
