It is strange that able men, who are eminent in the literary world, do not post themselves on the "Mormon" question, before rushing into print and making themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the wellinformed.

The New York Times perceives the weakness of any attempt to block up the channels of emigration, and wants polygamy sup pressed by law. It urges:

"But the laws of the United States must be enforced in that ed States statute of the common law against bigamy. To say that its enforcement is persecution is the wildest folly."

If this is the case, why not procood against it by legal means Bigamy and polygamy are widely different. "The ion law (we suppose the Times means the old English statutory law, for there is no "common law" against bigamy) was directed against one offence, the act of '62 against another. True, the law says they are the same, but no human enact ment can make dis-similars simi-But if they are to be consider ed the same why not proceed against them in the same manner If the Government thinks it a pressing duty to exert itself unusually against a handful of people in the mountains, a few of whom practice plural marriage and make wives of all the women with whom they cohabit, instead of following the Washington and New York method, we have no particular complaint to make if the ordinary judicial mode of procedure is followed. The trouble is that the anti-polygamy fanatics want to take illegal anatical law. They want to enforce the laws in a different manner to the course pursued in other They must have juries to convict; courts preagainst the accused cuting officers bent on forc. ing a conviction spit of law or fact; the accused must be

The law of 1862 and to make the latter appear to be is merely a re-enactment into Unit-parties with them in their attacks, and injured by any strictures intended only for the liars and scoun dreis. But the vile crew are despis ed almost as much by the decent "Gentiles" as by the long-enduring "Mormons," and the effect of their nefarious course upon the business interests of the Territory is understood by all classes. With them we want no fellowship, of them we ductor had both his legs broken. ask no favors, to them we wish to abow no respect.
