DONT'S, FOR SPEAKERS AND WRITERS.

(Written for the Saturday News BY EDWARD B. WARMAN, A. M. Author of "Practical Orthodoxy and Critique," "The Voice," "How to Train H. How to Care for H." etc.)

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Fowler.)

Author's Note.—It is one thing to record errors, quite another to avoid them. He who waits for the faultless is vain; therefore, as one of the many working for the betterment of the English language, I shall be pleased to receive kindly criticism, if, perchance, I, too, have erred.

Don't say "enclose" for "inclose." Example: "Enclosed you will find five dollars." should be "I enclose you will find five dollars."

Don't say "endorse" for "indorse." Example: "Endorse the note." should be "Indorse the note."

Don't say "enjoy good health." Example: "Do you enjoy good health?" should be "Have you good health?"

Don't say "evidence" for "testimony." Example: "Evidence may or may not be the result of testimony." One's testimony may not be sufficient evidence.

Don't say "except" for "unless." Example: "You need not come except you bring him with you." should be "You need not come unless you bring him with you."

Don't say "executed" for "hanged."

Example: "The criminal was executed." should be "The criminal was hanged."

Don't say "expect" for "suspect." Example: "I expect you looked for me this morning." should be "I suspect (or suppose) you looked for me this morning."

Don't say "experience" for "suffer." Example: "I experience many hardships." should be "I suffer many hardships." or "I have many hardships."

Don't say "extended" for "offered" or "tendered." Example: "They extended me the hospitality of their beautiful home." should be "They offered or tendered me the hospitality of their beautiful home."

Don't say "equally as well." Example: "He did it equally as well as you." should be "He did it as well as you."

Don't say "hasty" for "great." Example: "They seem to have every confidence in him." should be "They seem to have great or all confidence in him."

Don't say "farther" for "further." Example: "I'll consider this no farther." should be "I'll consider this no further."

Don't say "final completion."

Example: "The church has reached its final completion." should be "The church has reached its completion."

Don't say "find" for "give" or "provide." Example: "Who finds him in money?" should be "Who gives or provides him money?"

Don't say "find" for "follow." Example: "The use of the word find in this sense reminds one of the man whom the farmer was intending to hire. The former said: 'I'll give you $20 a month and find you.' To this the man very facetiously replied: 'Can't you give me the $20 first and find me afterwards?'"

Don't say "find" for "follow." Example: "He found a fine gold watch." should be "He found a lady's fine gold watch."

Don't say "find" for "follow." Example: "I give the foregoing just as it appeared in a hotel periodical, the editor claiming that the sentence as first given is incorrect. This is a question. It is a matter of correct and incorrect reading. I prefer the former. A fine what? Not a fine lady, but a fine lady's gold watch. Lady's-gold-watch is a phrase word, same as cup of coffee, suit of clothes, etc.

Don't say "finished" for "completed." Example: "The building is finished." should be "The building is completed."

Don't say "firstly" for "first." Example: "Firstly I will show you the cause; secondly, the effect; thirdly, the means of escape." should be "First I will show you the cause; second, the effect; third, the means of escape."

Don't say "first-rate" for "very well."

Example: "How do you like him?" "First-rate." should be "Very well." Note.—First-rate should be used only as an adjective, never in the sense of an adverb. "That is first-rate music!" signifies that it is very high; yet the word signifies some other adjective of the meaning would be better.

Don't say "find" for "follow." Example: "Will you find my watch?" should be "Will you follow my watch?"

Don't say "find" for "follow." Example: "Not less than ten feet of snow." should be "Not less than ten feet of snow."

Don't say "find" for "follow." Example: "The word foot, in this sense, should be used only as a compound adjective; thus a three-foot rule, a ten-foot pole.

Don't say "follow after" for "follow." Example: "When he dares to follow after me." should be "When he dares to follow me."

Don't say "forbear from." Example: "He could not forbear from weeping." should be "He could not forbear weeping."

WOOLTEX WALKING GOWN

There is a grace and a trim smartness to this Wooltex walking gown that will commend it to the fastidious in fashion. The little belted coat is somewhat suggestive of the Frocks and Filla style. Open at the neck, there is a broad mohair braid in an intricate design that serves as an edging, and this likewise trims the box pleats that afford the requisite fullness to the coat and emphasizes its jaunty style. The sleeves are a loose puff, topped with an epaulette cap, and the cuff flares downward at the wrist, in sharp contradiction to present styles.

The skirt has a pleated tablet front, the pleats attached down to just above the knee and then pressed flat from there so that they hold their shape well. The sides are in circular in-cut, and at knee depth a full flounce is applied; this, strapped with studded bias, folds all around, so that it presents the appearance of a double flounce. The back is arranged in similar fashion to the front, and the length is the later short one that clears the ground all around, and displays rather more than the tip of the shiny black shoe.
