DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Saturday, - August 2, 1890.

THE HOUSEWORK OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

This is a most important item in the work connected with this magnificent structure, says the London Carpenter and Builder, and is all done under the superintendence of the clerk of the works, who has a little office down in the crypt, and Mr. R. B. Green, the Dean's verger, who can well remember how that, when the Duke of Wellington was buried there, the housework was multiplied some hundredfold, for it took altogether six weeks to put up and take down the wooden galleries erected on that occasion.

There are continually some forty or fifty mechanics, workmen, and cleaners employed within the sacred edifice, for there is always something to be done in renovating, cleaning, and the like.

First of all the steps have to be kept white and clean. Though water is seldom used, they are being incessantly swept, for which some thirty brooms are needed, and some two dozen pails, to say nothing of hundreds of dusters.

The whole of the floor is swept three times a week and thoroughly washed once a month. It would take six men twenty-four hours to clean the whole breadth of St. Paul's, but it is done bit by bit—five people working at it day by day until it is finished. None of the cleaners go down on their hands and knees in the traditional style, but use a wet broom first and dry up with another. The windows are cleaned once a year, and the whole of the building from top to bottom is also thoroughly cleaned once in the same period, gangs of men being slung up in baskets right away into the great dome, where they look like dolls with their brooms and brushes.

There is a little piece of flooring which employs the sole attention of one man, for it consists of 2378 pieces of oak cleverly inlaid without the aid of a single peg or nail.

The monuments must be kept dusted. Half a dozen assistants go the round of them once in three months. Every monument is visited, including those up-stairs and in the crypt, where, by the way, the bellows used for blowing the great organ are placed, worked by a gas engine of three horse-power. Never a duster or broom is applied to the ball, which will hold twelve persons and weighs 5600 lbs. Great currents of air pass through and save the labor. But it takes a long time to dust 2000 chairs, to say nothing of great forms representing another 2000 seats. The value of the wicker chairs is over £1000.

It takes one man an hour to ignite all the gas jets within the building. The gas meter is placed outside the building for safety.

Another important item in the housework is the heating of the place and the washing department, for there are something like 200 surplices, and at least sixty of them are needed every Sunday. As a rule they are washed once a month by contract. When not in use they hang in immense wardrobes. The stock of cathedral surplices is so great that numerous applications are made for the loan of them.

An eye, too, has to be kept on the stoves in the winter months. There are eight of them, burning nearly a ton of coke a day, and they are situated under the crypt. The big coke cellar of the cathedral presents a grave stock in the cold weather, for the fires never go out, and a stoker watches them day and night. At night time, too, a watchman "walks his lonely rounds." As soon as the cathedral doors are closed for the day, the Dean's verger sees that the guardian of the night is at his post, and departs contented.

Nor must the winding up of the clock be neglected. This work, which is also a matter of contract, is done daily. It takes twenty minutes, not any too long when it is remembered that the clock-work governs a timepiece with two faces, each of which is 50ft. in circumference. The minute hand in each is 9ft. 8in. long, and weighs 75lbs.; the hour hand 5ft. 9in. long, and weighs 44lbs. Even the hour figures are 2ft. 2½in. long; 120, is the length of the pendulum; the weight at the bottom is 1,052lbs. It beats thirty times in a minute. There is a little gardening to be done as well, and that is undertaken by the Corporation of London. But what of feeding the pigeons, the cathedral pigeons, of which there are over [illegible]. Some twenty or thirty of them, which inhabit the south side, are fed by the Dean's verger, whilst the others, which never join in with those fed at the cathedral door, are looked after by the public.

These pigeons lay their eggs in the stone and within the heads of the stone robes of the statues outside the building, and so numerous an army are they that their eggs are often destroyed. They often enter during a service. A few Sundays ago when the big west doors were thrown open, two of them flew in, and successfully avoided being caught until the service was quite finished.—Richmond News.

The Love of Flowers.

"As the twig is bent the tree's inclined," is a trite saying, the truth of which we sometimes forget. Nearly three thousand years ago the wisest of men declared, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Most persons are born with a natural love for flowers. I never yet saw a toddler whose eyes did not light up with pleasure at the sight of bright blossoms, and whose fingers did not itch to hold in their grasp "the pitty flowers," and small boys show fully as much liking therefor as their sisters. It is considered the proper thing for our girls to wear flowers, to love them and care for them, and so encouraged and trained, the majority of our girls grow up into flower-loving women. On the contrary, in many homes the boys are made to feel that the love of flowers is "girlish," and trust our modern boy for wanting at all times to be "mannish." So our boys smother their natural liking with a forced indifference, which later, alas! becomes a second nature. Ninety-nine one-hundredths of the men and women who manifest this indifference never had their tastes cultivated in this direction while young. It is freely admitted that there is a refining, elevating influence about flowers; why, then, should not parents feel it a duty to encourage the love of the beautiful in bud and bloom?—Vick's Magazine for August.

Paris.

Paris is ambitious of becoming a seaport, and the plans have been devised and the money, it is said, is in a fair way of being provided, by which this result is to be brought about. The intention is to construct a canal along the Seine which will enable sea-going vessels, instead of unloading at Havre as they are now compelled to do, to find their moorings in the extensive docks to be built in the vicinity of Paris. The government was asked to give its sanction to the enterprise, but preferred to wait until the necessary capital, or the greater part of it, was subscribed. About $25,000,000 is being raised for the prosecution of the work, and the guarantees in this respect are supposed to be such as will induce the government to give its approval to the undertaking.

Queen Victoria is said to be the largest holder of copyright in the United Kingdom. Besides the Holy Scriptures and the Book of Common Prayer, which can only be printed cum privilegio, there are the official publications, such as the statutes, blue-books, consular reports, ordinance maps, etc., all of which are copyrighted.—Ex.

ON BABIES' GRAVES.

CURIOSITIES SEEN IN THE ANCIENT CEMETERY OF WASHINGTON COLORED PEOPLE.

A little child's tea set spread out upon a new made grave. What could be more pathetic? The tiny cups and dishes all carefully arranged as if for a make believe party, with a small tea pot in the middle. But the mite of a girl who should play the hostess at the lilliputian feast is lying cold and stiff in a wooden box buried three feet beneath the mound of fresh earth whereon the tea set is arrayed.

The little grave is but one of thousands of such huddled together in an old colored people's cemetery out towards the northwest, beyond the city limits and close by the bank of Rock Creek. Acre upon acre of the inclosure is so thickly occupied by the dead that the graves adjoin each other row upon row without an inch of space between to set the foot upon. No verdure conceals beneath its green carpet the crowded hillocks of clay and gravel, nor do costly monuments arise to commemorate the virtues of the departed. There are not even headstones, but usually slabs of wood instead, most of them merely shingles and old scraps of board stuck into the ground, and all this not because of any lack of love or reverence, but simply for the reason that the builders of this necropolis are poor.

On the piece of board at the head of the grave where the tea set is spread out is this inscription:

> Sacred to ...
> INA SCOTT
> a Born ...
> 15 JEAN ...
> Aged 4 yrs OLD.

This is by no means the only grave on which toys and such things are to be seen displayed. On the contrary nearly every little mound of earth that covers a child's coffin exhibits some relics of the sort. Near by is a shingle serving the purpose of a head stone, against which is tied with twine a doll's chair with a china doll sitting in it. The doll's dress has had all the color washed out of it by the rain, but it still sits there patiently, as it has sat for many a month, waiting for its mistress to pick it up when the day shall arrive and carry it before the judgment seat.

On a grave not far off is a tin box full of empty spools—once doubtless used for playthings to beguile baby hours—and a mouth organ. Tied to another head board is a pair of little reins, and scattered over the mound are several dominoes. A grave that is marked simply "No. 1"—may be the child had got no name—was adorned merely with a stoppered nursing bottle.

The nursing bottles seemed to be of all things the most frequent decoration of the graves—certainly the most pitiful. As a rule they were partly filled with mud washed into them by the storms. But they were not by any means the only kind of bottles to be noticed on the mounds. Medicine bottles were there in plenty—enough, indeed, to supply an apothecary's shop with glassware. As well as could be discovered, it was much the fashion to place on a grave all the medicine bottles emptied by the deceased during the last and fatal illness.

Thus one was enabled to surmise at a glance whether or not the sickness had been very long or complicated. Some graves would have only two or three bottles, while others would make a showing of as many as fifteen. Many of the medicine bottles on the other hand were partly full.

One headboard bore the epitaph:

> ... may pass away
> Quietly to ... land

On the grave were a rubber doll, a tin fire engine, very much rusted, and a little china cat.

A curious thing found on one of the mounds was a cast of a human foot in ordinary plaster of the sort that is used for houses. Perhaps the father of the family was in that business. Other casts of angels and such things in the same rude material were not infrequent. The most conspicuous object in the cemetery was a huge hobby horse placed over a small boy's grave. Many a day, doubtless, had he ridden on it to Banbury Cross. A pathetic ornament, washed down by the rain from a mound, was a child's school slate. Sticking up in the sand by it was a half used slate pencil. The slate itself was broken.

One thing that struck the observer in this cemetery was that all the ornaments and articles of whatever description that decorated the graves were without exception broken or deprived of their usefulness in some way. If such had not been the case they would be likely to be carried away. Even a tin basin on one mound, red with rust, was punched full of holes. A starch box on another grave was full of fragments of china dolls, and even the nursing bottles were cracked. The big hobby horse had lost its rockers and every one of the statuettes were more or less mutilated. Coffee pots with their noses knocked off in very many cases served the use of pots for flowers, though no flowers were in them, of course.—Washington Star.

WHY THE DESERET NEWS SHOULD BE SUBSCRIBED FOR IN PREFERENCE TO ANY OTHER PAPER.

1. It is An Organ of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and the authorized medium through which the views, wishes and instructions of the Church Authorities are expressed, and given to the Saints.

2. It may always be relied upon as advocating or defending the right side of every question proper for public journals to treat upon.

3. It is devoted to the interests of the Latter-day Saints, and has, from its inception, valiantly defended their rights and advocated the principles in which they believe; and every Latter-day Saint should therefore feel under obligations to do his part in helping to sustain it.

4. It is not published for speculation, and never has been, but for the good which it is capable of accomplishing; the profits, if any were to be derived from it, being devoted to extending its sphere of usefulness, and benefiting the community.

5. It is doing its utmost to establish home industries, among which are paper making, type-founding, stereotyping and electrotyping—branches necessary to the development and independence of the community, but which, during their infancy (which in this Territory they have not yet passed), can only be carried on at a pecuniary loss.

6. There is no danger of any subscriber to the News failing to get what he subscribes for through failure of the business and a suspension of the publication—a common result in the case of hundreds of newspaper ventures every year.

7. It is now printed throughout in new and readable type, so that even the aged can peruse it without difficulty or danger to their eye-sight.

8. It is free from objectionable advertisements, so that no parent need fear that his children will have their minds corrupted from having access to it; in fact, it refuses thousands of dollars worth of the best paying advertisements annually, because it is devoted to the moral and spiritual interests of its readers instead of to getting gain at their expense.

9. Its tone is not regulated by public opinion nor the hope of gaining subscribers or advertisements. It advocates that which is right and condemns that which is wrong regardless of results financial or otherwise.

10. It never nauseates its readers by palming off columns of self-praise for news items.

11. The News practices no deception and resorts to no subterfuges to induce people to subscribe; but, on the contrary, prefers to stand upon its own merits, as the people's newspaper, with a promise only to do its utmost to give its patrons the full value of their money—a promise which it has endeavored to faithfully keep in the past.

12. In conclusion, if a Latter-day Saint can afford to subscribe for only one paper, that paper should be the Deseret News; and if more than one, the News should invariably be the first.
