THE BRANSFORD-HARRIS WEDDING LEADERS!

Gorgeous Scenes at the Nuptials of The Contracting Parties Last Night-The Most Elaborate Display Ever Made at a Utah Marriage.

In the marriage of Miss Nellie May (Bransford and Jay Turvin Harris last night transpired the most brilliant nuptial exent ever witnessed in Sait Lake. In beauty of scene, in lavishness and art of decorative display, and in gorgeomers of dress, the event eclipsed any former one ever given in Utah, and gave the initial distinct tone of splender and outlay which come to our western cities in echoes from the mentropolitan centers of wealth and elegance. The expenditure for flowers nione must have come somewhere near the tidy sums so often blazoned as among the striking features of notable metropolitan centers of wealth and added details of banquet, music and dress-this last alone being elaborate enough to make the event notable, the affair will easily rank among the most ones that have transpired in the West.

brilliant ones that have transpired in the West.

The marriage ceremony was performed in the First Congresational church, and the beautiful transformation of the pretty church effected by the hands of skilled floral decorators was sufficient to keep enchained the attention of the assembled guests during the hour which elapsed between 8 o'clock, the hour set for the wedding, and the appearance of the bridal party. The platform, which forms the pulpit, and the great organ, were embowered with paims and plants, rows of the pretty greenery extending from the edges of the platform to the organ, which was transformed into a floral wall. From the circle of plants rose arches of eyergreens with a heart of rod carnations as a central point, with bows and arrows of small yellow chryanthemums at each side. Hanging from the highest curve of the arch was a great wedding bell of white and red carnations, and under it was a rich, white satin pillow for the bridal pair to kneel satin pillow for the bridal pair to kneel on. Flanking each end of the arch were huge wases of chrysanthemums and carhuge wases of chrysanthemums and carnations. The choir stalls were filled with tall vases of chrysanthemums and the rear walls were covered with a network of greenery. A feature of the lavish details was the carpeting of the altar, and of the central aisle which had been widend by removing several of the pews.

The canvassed arcade outside which led from the street to the steps was also carpeted with costly rugs. Added to these details of decoration was the brilliant effect of an audience of guests which filled of an audience of guests which filled the edifice, the majority of whom were in gorgeous costume, with jeweis flashing from neck, hands and head dress, making a most brilliant ensemble. In the time before the entrance of the bridal party, Prof. Radcliffe rendered a number of beautiful and appropriate musical selections, and Madame Swenson, the bride's vocal teacher, sang "The Silent World is Sleeping."

The strains of the Lohengren bridal chorus sung by Madame Swenson's sixteen pupils from a side room announced the approach of the bridal party, the six ushers entering first, followed by little

Then came the six bridesmaids in pairs, gowned in exquisite creations of pink and green; then four little flower girls—Dorothy and Eisa Bamberger, Genevieve McCornick and Bessie Niles—daintily dressed, carrying baskets of roses and ferns; after them came Miss Grace ferns; after them came Miss Grace Emery, the maid of honor, followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Levis Evans, and then the bride and her brother The bride's gown was a most beautifu creation. It was designed in Paris and made by Oatman of New York. 's skirt was made over a foundation taffeta and mousseline, with a full cour train. Down the front was a pane laced on either side with mousseline and finished at the bottom with pear ornaments. The skirt was outlined with seed pearls and bunches of orange blossoms. The bodice had yoke and fichu of duchesse lace, and was fastened in the hair with orange blossoms. She carried a shower boquet of bride roses

The bridesmaids entered in the following order: Miss McMillar and Miss Park-the former wearing an exquisite gown of pale green taffeta veiled in green chiffon. The bodice was low in the neck and finished with white applique. She carried pink roses, Miss Park wore rose-colored net over tat-feta. The low-necked bodics was trimmed with an edge of fuxel lace, and was finished at the walst with a sash of pink velvet. She carried pink and white carnations, Following them came Miss Keith and Miss Webber. Miss Keith's gown was pink taffeta with trimmings of marguerites, and she carried a boquet of the same flowers. Miss Webber's gown was pale green taffeta, velled in gree mousseline.
