

THE AMERICAN PEACE SOCIETY.

Report Shows Remarkable Progress In Development of Principle Of Arbitration.

UNCLE SAM SETS BAD EXAMPLE

In Matter of Naval Increase—Wayne McVeagh Says People Are Ashamed Of Accepting Frederick's Statue.

Boston, May 18.—The American Peace society held its seventy-sixth annual meeting here today. In the annual report of the directors Secy. Benjamin E. Trueblood described the year as one of unexampled interest in the cause of international peace and of remarkable progress in the development and organization of the principle of arbitration among nations.

On the subject of armaments the directors were unanimous in their discouraging of the growth of the arms race of the world and of their reduction to the minimum.

The serious and increasingly pressing problem of checking the growth of the arms race of the world and of their reduction to the minimum remains as yet practically untouched.

We regret to have to chronicle the discouraging fact that in the matter of naval increase our government is setting a very bad and dangerous example.

The estimates for the navy for the coming year amount to nearly $100,000,000. In eighteen years the naval budget has increased 700 per cent.

The annual election of officers resulted in the re-election of the following: President, Robert Treat Paine; secretary, Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood; treasurer, Thomas H. Russell.

With Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale at the head of the list more than 30 vice presidents were chosen.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the war between Russia and Japan and urging the United States government to seize the first favorable opportunity to offer mediation to the belligerents.

In the evening a banquet was served at the rooms of the Twentieth Century club. The feature was an address by Wayne McVeagh of Philadelphia.

Referring to what he characterized as "another healthy sign," the speaker said that the attitude of people toward the armaments race is changing.

ACROSS COUNTRY.

The signs of the times point to an enormous increase of intelligent public interest in health, to a new generation with purer, stronger blood and therefore more active, braver brains and body.

Our blood is often in a fertile condition for the growth of bacteria—the germs of disease—because our stomachs are disordered, or our liver is torpid, in either case our blood does not get the proper nourishment.

To enrich the blood and increase the red blood corpuscles, Dr. Pierce's golden medical discovery, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, is the best.

COL. WATTERSON ON EDITORIAL PAGE

Gives His Ideas of What it Should Be to the National Editorial Association.

TENDERS SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Under a Certain Spell it is Becoming, If Not So Already, a Rather Useless Appendage.

St. Louis, May 19.—The National Editorial association held its final session today. The forenoon was devoted to addresses and the afternoon to election of officers and completion of routine business.

Col. Henry Waterson of Louisville, on "The Editorial Page," said in part: "The editorial page is valuable in the degree that it aids the reader to digest the news. It should either be reformed or abandoned. Under a certain spell which has crept upon the modern newspaper it is becoming, if it has not already become, a rather useless appendage—no, even ornamental."

"Disturbance of the soul, good humor is the solar system of the editorial page, which should be held subject to these precepts: 'Write of a man nothing you would not say to his face, and might not say in the hearing of decent people.'"

"Avoid equally intimation and intimidation, making no suggestion you are not prepared to reduce to assertion and to sustain with proof."

"The leading article being the rationale of the most important and interesting piece of the day's news, should have a beginning, a middle and an end; should be concise and inclusive; seeking to assist the reader in his effort to comprehend the situation."

"Satire should keep within the bounds of the probable; wit under the restraint of sense, and even invective—shorn of adjective and adverb, and stripped to the waist—should strike out from the shoulder to hit only above the belt."

"The pert paragraph should be allowed to die a natural death. No flowers."

"The editorial page, thus conceived and executed, thus inspired and partitioned, could not fail to impress itself upon the thought of the time, at once a power and a feature, an arm of the service and a commercial asset."

Following Col. Waterson, Homer Davenport delivered an address on "The Cartoonist and the Press," which he illustrated with many humorous cartoons. At the afternoon session $100 was appropriated for the funds for a monument over the grave of Bill Nye.

Officers were elected, including Major W. W. Screws of Alabama, president. The convention adjourned to meet next year at Guthrie, O. T.

Humors. Come to the surface in the spring as in no other season. It's a pity they don't run themselves all off that way; but in spite of pimples and other eruptions, they mostly remain in the system. Hood's Sarsaparilla removes them and cures all the painful and disgusting troubles they cause. Nothing else cleanses the system and clears the complexion like Hood's.

WORLD'S PRESS PARLIAMENT.

Convention Called to Order by Captain Henry King, Editor of The Globe Democrat.

WELCOMED BY PREST. FRANCIS.

Secy. Hay Was Principal Speaker and Official Representative of Prest. Roosevelt.

St. Louis, May 19.—Amid gorgeous surroundings, with cascades pouring their torrents down the waterways into the lagoon and thousands of electric bulbs illuminating the scene and silhouetting the ivory-white buildings of the exposition against the dark of night, the World's Press parliament convened tonight in Festival hall.

Thousands of visitors thronged the terraces, the steps and the esplanade at the foot of Festival hall, and a steady stream pressed toward the entrance of the great white-domed building seeking entrance. But the majority was doomed to disappointment, for the seating capacity of Festival hall is 2,600, and only the accredited delegates to the press parliament were admitted through the double line of guards at the entrance.

The convention was called to order by Capt. Henry King, editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and chairman of the executive committee of the parliament. David R. Francis, president of the exposition, welcomed the 3,000 visitors, journalists from all parts of the world, to the exposition. The principal speaker of the evening, John Hay, secretary of state, was next introduced, who came as the official representative of President Roosevelt to attend the convention. Secy. Hay was greeted with a salute of applause. He said in part: "In the name of the president—writer, soldier and statesman, eminent in all three professions and in all equally an advocate of justice, peace and good will—I bid you a cordial welcome, with the prayer that this meeting of the representatives of the world's intelligence may be fruitful in advantage to the press of all nations and may bring us somewhat nearer to the dawn of the day of peace on earth and good will among men. Let us remember that we are met to celebrate the transfer of a vast empire from one nation to another without the firing of a shot, without the shedding of one drop of blood. If the press of the world would adopt and persist in the high resolve that was should be no more the clangor of arms would cease from the rising of the sun to its going down, and we could fancy that at last our ears, no longer stung by the din of armies, might hear the morning chorus singing together and all the sons of God shouting for joy."

The final speech was made by A. Monprofit, correspondent Le Figaro, Paris. At the conclusion of the address Sir Hugh Gilzean-Reid of London, president of the Press parliament, was introduced by Chairman King as the permanent presiding officer of the convention. He was vigorously applauded and spoke briefly. The convention adjourned until tomorrow morning.

SECRETARY WILSON DISCOURSES ON GOOD ROADS. St. Louis, May 19.—James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, today addressed the convention of the National and International Good Roads association. He said in part: "Road making has not improved very materially since MacAdam applied broken rock, but it has become an economic question of great importance to the American people."

"We have established within the department at Washington an office for the study of road material. We are selecting young men who have graduated in engineering institutions to take practical work with us, so that we may be able to supply the demands coming from all parts of the country for men skilled in the art of road making."

"Our laboratory is designed to assist each locality in determining the use of the materials it may happen to possess."

"If what the department is endeavoring to do now with regard to helping to build better roads (which has been done in half the states of the Union) and the study of road material for the information of the people had been done when our government was organized, the people would have understood how to build roads long before this time—would have understood the value of the materials in all parts of the United States. And I am well satisfied also that when the people are thoroughly informed in the several states and territories with regard to the science of road building, there will be no hesitation in levying taxes to carry on the work."

"Each section of our country has problems peculiar to itself, and to the end that they should have consideration the department of agriculture has a scientific agency in each of our great divisions, bringing them into touch with the laboratory at Washington."

"Road making will be cheapened as research adds to our knowledge of materials. The knowledge of road making will grow as related sciences are developed."
