Milton, Colo., is steadily developing its coal mining resources.

Durango, Colo., is rejoicing over the promotion of a post for a regiment.

Tucson, Ariz., will have a new jail, and Contract & Supply Co. is the name of the guilty.

Casper, Wyoming, will have an overland light plant in operation this year.

San Luis valley papers are still agitating the question of a grain warehouse.

A census of the population of White Oaks, N. M., shows 800 in the city limits, and 200 outside.

Carson, Nev., will send a competing horse to the shooting tournament at San Francisco next month.

They pay 25 cents each for cottontail rabbits at Grady, N. M., and are planning thousands of them this year.

Montrose, Colo., will run a swimming bath as a result of the development of artesian water at that place.

Less than 200 women have registered in Clarence Gytings, and the spring election is close at hand.

El Paso county Herald is the name of a new weekly paper just started in Colorado Springs by F. F. McLellan.

Prescott and Phoenix railroad is rapidly progressing toward completion. The dirt is flying all winter on the new road.

Fort Lupton, Colo., announces the development of a lodge of ore three miles north of that place which looks good for paying quantities.

Eastern Arapahoe county has been favored with very severe, and freezing cold weather of moisture for spring farming operations.

Ross, Colo., has not had snow enough for sledding, and the transferring and hauling has to be done on wagons—something unusual for Ross.

W. C. Turner, a prominent rancher and politician, was arrested in Colorado in 1889, has just died at his home on the Mesteta river, near Livingston, Colo.

Silverton, Colo., announces a great revival of industry to come with the melting of snow. Extensive preparations are being made for mining development work.

Durango, the new gold camp on the west side of the San Luis valley, is steadily and rapidly increasing in size. New houses are being completed daily.

Cashin, the new gold placer diggings, thirty-five miles west of Santa Fe, N. M., are yielding an average of fifteen miners each day as an increase to the Cashin population.

Mrs. Annie Larsen, the stewardess of the Oakland, Cal., receiving hospital, died on Friday from the effects of poison taken by accident. She was sick but a few hours before she passed away.

Rossiter, Wyo., and vicinity is overrun by vast herds of geese from the mountains, principally elk. The deep snow in the mountains has driven the starving animals out upon the adjacent plains.

Ed. Rinell, a Silverton, Colo., miner, started from Silverton for Ophir about a month ago. His snow shoes have been found at the edge of a snowslide and it is now supposed that he is sealed beneath the snow.

Albany county, Wyo., Grand Protective association has officially condemned the recent incorrect report of United States Fish Commissioner McDonald, relative to the abundance of fish streams in Wyoming.

White Oaks, N. M., declines to attempt the creation of a boom. The Eagle says that White Oaks is the center of one of the richest mining regions in New Mexico, but it enjoys unsapproachable or any fictitious booming.

The new masonry dam across the Pecos river near Eddy, N. M., to supply water for the great Hagerman canal, will be finished in time to insure millions for the Pecos valley, says an exchange.

From Hot Sulphur Springs to the Middle park, Colo., Schuyler Bolton has just sold 2,781 pounds of butter in Georgetown. He says he could sell 1,000 pounds a week if he could produce it.

Sam Ring, a native Chinese, voted at a Marysville, (Cal.) election the other day. The vote was challenged, but was passed by the judges. Sam Ring was born at Bidwell's Bar, and was duly registered on a certificate of naturalization from Butte county.

In Novato, Bernard Ardizoni, government sheep herder, has been assigning lands to Indians in the more desirable valleys. The Indians are assigned five acres each and a grass lot. It will result in constant litigation with whites in the Indian reservations.

Talbot Bros., of Trinidad, Colo., have taken a contract to supply the Denver and Rio Grande company with broad gauge ties for the line between Walsenburg and Garland. Two other below the contracts have been let to parties in San Luis valley.

At informal election held by the Santa Fe (Cal.) board of trade to ascertain the wishes of the town voters on the issue of $50,000 bonds to the end of $50,000 voted in favor for the construction of a wharf immediately in front of it, even the vote stood: For bonds, 245; against bonds, 32.

The lower San Juan river placers are being successfully worked by the Fergerson machine, which saves all the fine gold. The sand and gravel carry from $3 to $100 per ton, and the San Juan placers will prove a lucrative investment.

Flatiron, Colo., is the home of the juvenile whisker of the state. Gus Chesley, the 4-year-old daughter of Eddie Chesley of the Flatiron Hotel, and Lottie Jones, make declarations that will not be downed. Gus Chesley can shave as readily as her mother, and Lottie Jones can embroider with the best of them.

A pair of deer have been seen on the Rio Blanco, Routt county, Colo., by cattlemen, who have reported the fact to the game warden, Robert Hunter, and A. Rivers, of Meeker, have been appointed deputies. A petition asking the passage of a game law is now circulating in Meeker, which will soon come to the attention of special legislators. It is proposed to close everything but wing shooting and every season.

L. A. McCune and Dick Dryden while out hunting last week near Rifle discovered a flock of wild geese. They were the largest ever seen in the valley. Dryden made a long shot, and killed two of the flock. Each bird measured seven feet from tip to tip. The geese were of a species unknown to the hunters.
