

two crops were short. If winter irrigation will do all this in Dixie, won't it do in the north? Some fear the result, but I think they need not, for lucern roots have been measured here 14 feet long and too strong to be disturbed easily. It can be sown and raised among the sage brush, the brush serving as a protector for the young plants; in this way, fine new pastures can be made where naught but brush and barrenness prevail at present. Winter irrigation in California is considered sufficient for a crop of small grain, and I am satisfied that it will do the same in Utah. This and reservoirs for utilizing the water in winter and early spring as well as summer is a step in the right direction; try it and see, these artificial lakes are easily made and will serve more than one purpose, they hold the water from going to waste when there is a surplus, they cause more rain to fall; they can be made profitable as fish ponds. Fish can be domesticated and fed as you feed chickens, and a Chinaman would tell you that an acre of water supplied with fish will produce as much human food as an acre of good land.

OBITUARY.

BLOOMINGTON, Nov. 2d, 1879.

Editors Deseret News:

Isaac Dunford, whose sudden death was briefly noticed some few weeks since, was born June 23d, 1824, in Trowbridge, Wilts, England. He was baptized in said town by Elder John Halliday, in the month of July, 1843, was ordained an Elder under the hands of his brother, George Dunford, and was appointed President of the Steeple Ashton branch, Jan. 9th, 1853. On his departure for America, the Saints over whom he presided, presented him with a beautiful memorial, inscribed on parchment, as a token of the high esteem and respect with which he was regarded. Brother Dunford remained at Saint Louis, where he labored for the support of his family, and to acquire the necessary means for their journey to Utah. He was always faithful in his tithes and liberal in his offerings, and those in need found him a friend indeed. He was subsequently appointed President of the Saint Louis Conference, which position he filled with dignity and honor, and arrived in Salt Lake Valley Sept. 25th, 1864. He was employed by the Hon. Wm. Jennings as salesman, for two months, whose employ he left voluntarily, and, in company with Elder James H. Hart, in the cold, dreary days of December, wended his way, with ox teams, via Franklin and Soda Springs, to the beautiful Bear Lake Valley. He located in Bloomington, where he made, by his industry, a comfortable home. Although unaccustomed to manual labor on his arrival in Bloomington, he worked alongside and shoulder to shoulder with born and bred farmers and mountaineers, and by his energy and perseverance succeeded in getting a comfortable home and beautiful surroundings, which he had scarcely completed when he was called away.

He was actively engaged as a home missionary, in which capacity his labors were appreciated by the Stake Presidency and by the people. He was ordained a High Priest, under the hands of President Charles C. Rich, which office he strove to magnify. He was modest and retiring in his manners, and would take the lowest seat in the synagogue; but he was uncompromising in defence of the Gospel. In his testimony of the latter-day work was bold as a lion. On the last Sabbath of his life your correspondent called him from the humble seat he had selected, to sit among his peers and fellow-laborers.

He was thrown from his wagon in Blacksmith's Fork Cañon, whilst en route to Salt Lake City, to attend Conference, on the 4th of October, 1879, and was killed instantly, his wife and three children with him at the time escaped unhurt.

He was the father of seven sons and six daughters. He leaves a loving wife, the six sons and one daughter, with a host of friends to mourn his loss.

CASTORIA

Millions of Mothers express their delight over Castoria. It is nature's remedy for assimilating the food. Unlike Castor Oil, it is pleasant to take, and unlike Morphine Syrup, it is harmless. Castoria regulates the Bowels, destroys Worms, Cures Sour Gurd and Wind Colic, and allays Feverishness. What gives health to the Child, promotes rest for the Mother. Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria. It is the most reliable, effective and Popular article dispensed by Druggists.
