THE EVENING NEWS.

BREVITIES.

Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts.

If any one speaks ill of you, let your life be so that none will believe him.

Kate Field says a woman without tact should die. So she will.

There are just two things in this life for which we are never prepared, and they are twins.

The Courier Journal believes that Dr. Mary Walker is unquestionably the most thorough pantaloonatic of the age.

The New York confectioner, who a few years ago, taught his parrot to say "pretty creature" to every lady who entered his store, is now very rich.

A Newport belle who is fond of onions recently discharged her lover for a month in order to gratify her appetite for the delicious vegetable.

Editing a newspaper is very much like carrying an umbrella on a windy day; every body thinks he could manage better than the one who has hold of the handle.

The knowing ones tell us that the only way to get pure port wine is to go to Oporto, raise the grapes, press the wine, put it into the casks yourself, and ride on it all the way home.

A young man who boards for a living says he found a song in the butter the other morning. When asked the title of the song, he said it was "Only a Woman's Hair."

He who betrays another's secret because he has quarreled with him was never worthy of the sacred name of friend; a breach of kindness on one side will not justify a breach of trust on the other.

If anybody has any doubts about anything not being read in a newspaper, just let him put something which he would not like to have known in the obscurest part of the obscurest paper he can find, and then he'll see how it is himself.

Women require more sleep, it is said, than men. Bliffkins disputes this, as, he says, the last sound he hears at night is the voice of Mrs. B. in her nocturnal lecture, and the first in the morning is her matutinal admonition.

Economy is wealth. A well-regulated Newark family ate hash for breakfast in 365 different styles last year, and the mother is, in consequence, enabled to blow her nose on a nineteen-dollar lace handkerchief.

"Howard Glyndon" announces in a letter from Appledore, that she wouldn't have crimping-pins torturing her head of nights if any one offered her five dollars a night for wearing them. Would she do it for six dollars? Nobody wants to be mean about it.

Joseph McCarty, editor of the Truth-Teller, thinks that if the whole truth about women could be known every virtuous man in the world would run howling to the nearest water and drown himself. Well, don't tell it all. Who wants to know it?

A preacher, one slippery, frosty morning, was going home with one of his elderly members, when the old gentleman slipped and fell. When the minister saw that he was not hurt, he said, "My friend, sinners stand on slippery places." "Yes," replied the old man, looking at the preacher, "I see they do, but I can't."

In pronouncing judgment on a horse thief at Louisville, in Potawatomie county, Kansas, Judge Morton regretted that the law only permitted him to send the prisoner for seven instead of twenty years, as the penitentiary was his normal condition. The prisoner promptly replied: "I am sorry, your honor, that I am not free; for, if you had a horse, I should try and steal it."

Young Walkist—"I'm in luck, to come with such a good appetite for such a savory bit as this duck."

Landlady—"You may say that, sir; for we should have had nothing in the place but bacon and eggs, if the poor thing hadn't been so sickly for the last few days, we thought it was just kindness to put it out of misery."

An exchange gives the following as a sure way to drive bed bugs from old beds:

"Take green tomato vines, put them in a basin or tray, pound them to pieces as fine as possible, then stain the bedstead which they inhabit with the juice, fill the crevices with pieces of vines, and lay leaves under the ends of the slats. If this is practiced twice a year, not a bug will remain in the bedstead."

Ten thousand human beings set forth together on their journey. After ten years, one third at least have disappeared. At the middle point of the common measure of life, but half are still upon the road. Faster and faster the ranks grow thinner, they that remain till now become weary. At three score and ten, a band of four hundred yet struggle on. At ninety these have been reduced to thirty trembling patriarchs. Year after year they fall into diminishing numbers. One lingers, perhaps, a lonely marvel, till the century is over. We look again, and the work of death is finished.

The reign of the servant girls has commenced. A gentleman sent to an intelligence office to obtain a "young lady" to look on while his wife did the work. The fair creature who was offered for the place, after asking some fifty questions about whether they had "tubs set," whether the "kitchen was down stairs," etc., asked how many evenings she could have "out." "Well," said the gentleman, "I don't see how we can let you have more than seven." "How many children have you?" said the handmaiden. "Only one boy, eight years old, but we will drown him if you think he'd be in the way."

It was after a long day in India that Sir Harry Smith drew up to allow his command to march past him into their quarters. The infantry were the first to arrive, and to them Sir Harry said: "Aha! the infantry! yes, you are the infantry; yes, the foot soldier is a lucky fellow. The infantry boy for me; none of your nasty horses to clean. Get into camp, lie down, eat; there you are. Yes the infantry man is a lucky fellow." And so they passed. Not long after the cavalry came up, whereupon Sir Harry addressed them, too, in turn: "Aha! the cavalry! yes, the cavalry. Aha! you are the boys; you are the lucky fellows; none of your foot sore, tired, dusty infantry men, but a smart chap with a horse, a real gentleman; yes, you are the fellows for me; fresh as larks; that's it; go along. The cavalry man is a lucky fellow."

As a contrast to the case of Miss Barber, who married the Sioux chief, "Squatting Bear," and whose doleful story has gone the rounds of the papers, a New York journal tells us of Miss Ayres of Philadelphia. When Col. Downing, chief of the Cherokees, was in Philadelphia, his eloquence so impressed Miss Ayres, that disregarding the remonstrances of her friends, she resolved to cast her lot with the "noble red men." She established her home at the beautiful Cherokee village of Talequah. Here she instructed the people, and devoted herself to advancing their religious training and their educational interests. She soon became a Lady Bountiful among the Indians, and by the friendship of the grateful chief, Colonel Downing, was able to effect much good. When the Indian wife of Colonel Downing died, she married him, and is now Queen of the Cherokees, and apparently as happy as poor Miss Barber is miserable.
