An Evanston Character.

It was at night, when the lower part of Broadway was as silent as a village street. A lone cab was crawling along, its driver comfortably slouched forward smoking a cigar. Suddenly there was a crash, the sharp rattle of broken glass on the pavement, and a leg protruded through one of the cab windows. The few pedestrians and one policeman who heard and saw were startled, and the glowering Son man had thrust forward his legs in starting to go back to his seat and while A story about a sprained or possibly the tragedy of a Broadway cab.

But the driver remained comfortably insulated, did not make a puff of his cigar and the horse moved on, until the policeman discovered the driver leaning.

"What's all this?" he asked.

"It's all right," answered the driver.

"But we have a leak," said the officer.

He peered into the cab, which contained but one person, a man, who, observing the affair, remarked in saying that tragic, in fact, is the friend first of hours:

"Fwee, he's all have 'scaped."

"Drive on," said the policeman and added, "But I don't want any more of this cab whatever smashing on Broadway."

"He can't smash any more," the driver said, gathering up his reins. "He smashed the left side glass at Dunlop, the front glass at Howard and the right door glass here at Grand. He's all right. He drive about once a month."

"Gad, 'Pete,' said the fare.

"Good night, sir," replied the officer.—New York Sun.

TO THE NAILS.

At the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago. A medal and diploma awarded "Supreme excellence in material, method in manufacture, and quality of finished product; elasticity and smoothness combined with holding power in clinch. It aligns the use of very small nails."

There is nothing beyond supreme excellence and as above carrying conviction as a brave judge's estimate of the material from which it is made. "The method of manufacture" and "quality of finished product," remain. Nails, or their "elasticity," are slighted in the exposition and examination of the head of the nail. "Small heads" are their "excellence," as are expressions "supreme excellence" in "holding power in the clinch" seems them to hold the nail to a thickness of less than one-half.

By the "use of small nails" large sales are evident and money saved to the consumer. This is well understood over the offices of the World's Columbian Exposition, except as what is called "Putnam" nails are sold and not less only one "Putnam" nail is sold.
