EVENING NEWS.

Thursday. January 18, 1877.

"MAN."

Like as the damask rose you see,
Or like a blossom on a tree,
Or like the dainty flower in May,
Or like the morning to the day,
Or like the sun, or like the shade,
Or like the gourd which Jonas had;
Even such is man, whose thread is spun,
Drawn out and cut, and so is done.
The rose withers, the blossom blasteth,
The flower fades, the morning hasteth,
The sun sets, the shadow flies,
The gourd consumes, the man, he dies.

Like to the grass that's newly sprung,
Or like a tale that's new begun,
Or like a bird that's here to-day,
Or like the pearled dew in May,
Or like an hour, or like a span,
Or like the singing of a swan;
Even such is man, who lives by breath,
Is here, now there, in life and death.
The grass withers, the tale is ended,
The bird is flown, the dew's ascended,
The hour is short, the span not long,
The swan's near death, man's life is done

Like to the bubble in the brook,
Or in a glass much like a look,
Or like the shuttle in weaver's hand,
Or like the writing on the sand,
Or like a thought, or like a dream,
Or like the gliding of a stream;
Even such is man, who lives by breath,
Is here, now there, in life and death.
The bubble's out, the look's forgot,
The shuttle's flung, the writing's blot;
The thought is past, the dream is gone,
The waters glide, man's life is done.

Like to an arrow from the bow,
Or like swift course of water flow,
Or like that time 'twixt flood and ebb,
Or like the spider's tender web,
Or like a race, or like a goal,
Or like the dealing of a dole,
Even such is man, whose brittle state
Is always subject unto fate.
The arrow shot, the flood soon spent,
The time no time, the web soon rent,
The race soon run, the goal soon won,
The dole soon dealt, man's life soon done.

Like to the lightning from the sky,
Or like a post that quick doth hie,
Or like a quaver in a song,
Or like a journey three days long,
Or like snow when summer's come,
Or like the pear, or like the plum;
Even such is man, who heaps up sorrow,
Lives but this day and dies to-morrow.
The lightning's past, the post must go,
The song is short, the journey so,
The pear doth rot, the plum doth fall,
The snow dissolves, and so must all.

The Indigent Unemployed

The question of what is to be done in behalf of indigent idle people in our great cities is forcing itself upon the attention of humanitarians; and in this connection the Boston Traveler throws out some pertinent suggestions. It argues that the times are certain to improve, but the poor we shall always have with us in the best of times. Therefore some means ought to be devised for their employment. To house, clothe and feed forty millions of people, somebody must work, or all would starve and die. Notwithstanding all the artificial modes of ma[illegible] the life of a people mus[illegible]d by labor. The real[illegible]tion is the produ[illegible] this respect we are [illegible]richest country in the world. We can raise more grain, more provisions, and other means of sustaining life, than we require; and our capacity to increase is limited only by the demand. We have agricultural resources sufficient to feed the entire population of Europe, and if required, could produce cotton and wool enough to clothe them, and leather enough to furnish them with boots and shoes. These statements will not be denied by any person who is moderately acquainted with the country. Why then, it may be asked, is there so much wretchedness and destitution in all our large cities? Simply because the wealthy and intelligent take but little interest in the poor and ignorant. Suppose a thousand active business men should devote their time to organizing labor in the West, through suitable agencies, to provide employment for the healthy poor, and show them how to make an independent living? Our cities would soon be drained of their surplus labor, and want would be confined to those who were unable to work. We cannot conceive of any better employment for the wealthy and intelligent than working for the welfare of those below them. Half the means used to organize an army of a hundred thousand men and equip them for the field, would relieve the country of its physical wretchedness. And until society takes this subject up in earnest and acts with benevolent wisdom, the evils which we all deplore will increase, rather than diminish. It is not for lack of means, but for lack of disposition. The numerous benevolent societies are doing much, and are, doubtless, opening the way for a general system, which must be adopted to afford relief. The means required to detect and punish criminals, and guard our large cities, would furnish employment in more favored places for those who are now supported by charity. The sooner our statesmen take up this subject and act on it, the better it will be for the peace of the country, as well as for its future prosperity. An increasing, idle population will soon become a dangerous element to public order. The intelligent and the wealthy must use their talents and means to give proper direction to those less favored than themselves, and to help them to earn their own living. This may seem socialism, but it is the socialism preached by our Saviour, who "went about doing good." N. Y. Shipping and Com. List

THE ROAD TO HISTRIONIC HONORS.—To get on the stage is proverbially a difficult task. The rewards of success are rich, and of a character to gratify inordinate vanity, and accordingly aspirants for histrionic honors are as numerous as candidates for public immortality. If the aspirant be a man, his ambition is to play Hamlet, with a salary of £100 per week. If a woman—well, it would be difficult to say what the ambition would be in her case. In either case, however, the candidate for applause will have little chance of appearing before a London audience by relying on personal merit. A man or woman may have toiled in what is called "the provinces." He may have served apprentice at the same time to hunger and to his profession. He may have conscientiously studied all the great parts that are to make him famous. He might be able to cut a respectable figure in his favorite character. But, unless he is rich or born to good luck, the difficulty of getting on the London stage in a position suitable to what he believes to be his deserts, is great. If he is rich, he takes one of the thirty or forty theatres, and puffs himself into notoriety and the Bankruptcy Court. If he is born to good luck, some enterprising and judicious manager will happen to see him in the country, or in some inferior part on the London boards, and at once secure his services. Should he be neither rich nor lucky, he has to undergo the operation of making his heart sick with hope deferred. The same fate awaits an actress.—London Dispatch.

There are no women on the face of the earth whose cardinal virtues shine forth more brightly than do those of the Yonkers fair ones.—Yonkers Gazette. Same here.
