THE STORY OF COELIO.

[CONCLUDED.]

"Save your Majesty!—I have promised to finish the likeness of the Senor Don Paez by the festival of his daughter. He saved my life, and has paid me in advance on condition it is finished by that day. I have given him my promise; and I must fulfil it."

"Sir Coelio!" said the King, assuming a terrible aspect, "know that we have some reason to suspect that you are an impostor, and have deceived our most worthy servant Paez. There are those within who know you better than you think for."

"Let them appear!" exclaimed Sanchez Coelio, with an impetuous indignation—"let them appear! I do not fear them, whoever they may be. Never has a lie passed my lips; never have I committed an action for which I need blush—never but once, and then I was driven by want and misery to seek to free myself from a life which had become an intolerable burden. I impose upon him? No! I would die first. Bring forward those who know me better than I think for, and then, King Philip, truth shall put calumny to the blush."

The King struck three times heavily upon the floor with his sword. Suddenly the door opened, and who should appear before the astonished Sanchez Coelio but the Marquis of Mariavalle, leading in Donna Estafania!

The young lover stood like one under a spell. Presently he opened wide his arms, and folded them again, pressing the beautiful and faithful Estafania to his heart. He led her to the King, who, drawing from beneath his cloak the gray beard and locks of his disguise, held them up before the astonished painter.

"Philip of Spain and Don Paez are one and the same. May Sanchez Coelio, whom Don Paez had learned to love, be ever true to Philip. Marquis of Mariavaille, we ask of you the hand of your daughter, Donna Estafania, for our court-painter and beloved friend Don Alfonza Sanchez de Coelio."

"That which the King asks a subject may not deny," answered the old courtier, bowing low before his sovereign.

"God bless you! Sanchez," said Philip, as he placed the hand of Estafania in that of Coelio. "May you both be as happy as I"—here he lowered his voice—"as I am wretched!"

A HOUSE WHERE MEN NEVER LAUGH.

How do you think you would like to live fearing every moment to be blown up; not daring to speak loud, to jar any thing, for fear of starting an explosion that would send you in an instant to the other world?

You don't think it would be very pleasant? Well, it isn't; yet hundreds of men live just in that state, work, receive pay, and live year after year in the very sight of death, as it were; all that the world may have gunpowder.

You can easily guess that those men go about quietly and never laugh.

You know that gunpowder is very dangerous in a gun, or near a fire, but perhaps you don't know that it is equa ly dangerous all through the process of making. A powder mill is a fearful place to visit, and strangers are very seldom allowed to enter one. They are built far from any town, in the woods, and each branch of the work is done in a separate building. These houses are quite a distance from each other, so that if one blows up it wouldn't blow up the rest. Then the lower parts of the building are made very strong, while the roofs are very lightly set on, so that if it explodes only the roof will suffer. But, in spite of every care, sometimes a whole settlement of the powder mills will go off almost in an instant, and every vestige of the toil of years will be swept away in a few seconds.

But, though you feel like holding your breath to look at it, it is really a very interesting process to see. It is made, perhaps you know, of charcoal, saltpetre and brimstone. Each of those articles is prepared in a house by itself; but the house where they are mixed is the first terrible one. In this building is an immense mill-stone, rolling round and round in an iron bed, and under the stone are put the three fearful ingredients of gunpowder. There they are thoroughly mixed and ground together. This is a very dangerous operation, because if the stone comes in contact with its iron bed it is very apt to strike fire, and the merest suspicion of a spark would set off the whole. The materials are spread three or four inches thick in the bed; the wheel, which goes by water power, is started, and every man leaves the place. The door is shut, and the machinery left to do its terrible work alone. When it has run long enough the mill is stopped and the men come back. This operation leaves the powder in hard lumps or cakes.

The next house is where the cakes are broken into grains, and, of course, is quite as dangerous as the last one. But the men can't go away from this; they are obliged to attend to it every moment, and you may be sure no laugh or joke is ever heard within its walls. Every one who goes in has to take off his boots and put on rubbers, because one grain of the dangerous powder, crushed by a boot, would explode the whole in an instant.

The floor of this house is covered with leather, and is made perfectly black by the dust of gunpowder. It contains a set of seives, each one smaller than the last, through which the powder is sifted, and an immense laboring mill, where it is ground up, while men shovel it in with wooden shovels. The machinery makes a great deal of noise, but the men are silent, as in the other houses. The reckless crashing of the machinery even seems to give greater horror, and one is very anxious to get out of that house.

The stoving-house is the next on the list and there the gunpowder is heated on wooden trays. It is very hot, and no workmen stay there. From there it goes to the packing-house, and it is put up in barrels, kegs and canisters.

Safely through all these houses, it goes at last to the storehouse.

One feels like drawing a long breath to see the fearful stuff safely packed away out of the hands of men, in this curious house.

"You've heard of things being as dry as a powder house, but you wouldn't think this house very dry. It is almost imbedded in water. The roof is one big tank kept full of water. Did you ever hear of a water-roof before? Instead of steps to go in, their are shallow tanks of water, through which every one must walk to the door.

In none of these powder houses is any light ever allowed except sunlight. The wages are good, the day's work is short, ending always at 3 or 4 o'clock. But the men have a serious look, that makes one think every moment of the danger and glad to get away.

Though curiosity may take a man once to visit a powder-mill, he has no desire to go the second time; and he feels all the rest of his life that for once he has been very near death.—Ex.
