The Southern States Mission.

The Southern States Mission.

Elder Wm. Spry, President of the Southern States Mission, returned to this city this morning after an absence of a couple of months looking after the interests of the mission, bringing with him a company of about thirty Saints from he South to Conejos Coupty, Col. He reports the mission-ary work in the South as being in a fairly prosperous condition. A large force of Elders from Utah are now in that field, who are moving along quietly, introducing the Gospel to all who will listen to them, and in some portions of the mission are making good heasway. No mobbing or other violence has been manifested towards the Elders of late, and the policy of the Elders is to cultivate the acquaintance and friendship of the more intelligent and influential classes, by which means they are enabled to make more rapid progress than they otherwise could. The mobbing which the Elders have received in the past in that region has usually been from the most ignorant and bigoted classes of people, though generally instigated by preachers whose autipathy is aroused by the success of the missionaries in making converts among their flocks, and who, as a consequence, imagine that their craft is in danger. The more intelligent people of the South are noted for their liberality of ideas and especially for their hospitality towards strangers, and the Elders who travel in that part without purse or scrip, as did the Apostles of old, are perhaps as well provided for as in any other part of the world. Elder synd the headquarters of the mission, about the last of the present month.

He makes special mention of the good that is accomplished by sending copies of the News to the south and good that is accomplished by sending copies of the News to the south and

He makes special mention of the good that is accomplished by sending copies of the News to the south and commends the practice to all who have friends living in that region or who have a desire to assist the Elders in the work they are engaged in.

Ratification at Provo.

Ratification at Provo.

When it is said that Utah Conuty did her best last night to democratize, it need not be told that there was nothing shabby about it. After the parade of the brass bands and the bondires on the street, the populace literally packed the parquette, dress and directories of the Opera Honse, after which the Lehi brass band opened the proceedings with one of their most inspiring airs. Mr. J. S. Rawlins arrived and the meeting was called to order by Hon. S. R. Thurman, who nominated Judge Dusenberry as chair man. The Judge set the patriotism bubbling in a short opening speech.

J. L. Rawlins was introduced as the first speaker. His remarks were telling and patriotic and well punctuated with applanse. Reviewing the origin and growth of the Democratic party, the speaker wrought up the feelings of his audience little by little, until when the red bandana came in for mention, and the record of Grover Cleveland was detailed in terms glowing with ardor and wreathed in flowerly eloquence, the enthusiasm fairly boiled over. Tariff revision, self-government by the Territories and statehood for Utah were snhjects for special applause. "Hail Columbia" was played by the combined bands of Lehi and Provo.

Hon. Wm. H. King was next introduced and responded in a few well-chosen terms. His remarks were confined to the tariff question.

S. R. Thurman referred with stirring pride to the integrity and manhood of Grover Cleveland.

Dr. W. R. Pike in a few feeling words of sympathy for democracy, added another gem to the speechifying of the evening.

Wm. Creer, of Spanish Fork, endorsed the remarks of the preceding speakers.

Dr. Pike moved that it be the sense of the meeting that we ratify the nom-or the preceding speakers.

Dr. Pike moved that it be the sense of the meeting that we ratify the nomination of Grover Cleveland and Allen G. Thurman by the St. Louis convention.

I found the Indian pupils all well and enjoying themselves. They look to me like civilized citizens—their hair cut short, their boots blacked; white shirts and stand-up collars. Two Indian boys were employed in the kitchen. The following are the names of the white employees; Mr. and Mrs. Mooney, teachers; Dr. J. J. The Indian boys are doing very well in their studies. Our pupils here don't seem to realize their education and treatment, but I am in greathopes that our pupils will come to the front some time. The people of Grand Junction think that our pupils are like dumb, driven cattle—they think we cannot learn. People of Grand Junction say they don't like to see Indians on the streets. We know this soil belongs to us, and we have a right to walk upon its face. We have American blood in every vein. I don't think people here are better than people in Nevada. I think the world of the people in Nevada brought me up to where I am standing. I thank them many times for their treatment. I say good bye to all may school friends in Nevada. A TERRIBLE DEATH.

A Fifteen-Months' Old Boy Drinks Concentrated Lye.

Another of those heart-rending cases Another of those heart-rending cases that have been altogether too frequent in this vicinity, occurred on Saturday afternoon, resulting in the death of the bright little son of George and Emma Everett, of the Sixteenth Ward, this city. A little girl had been scrubbing the floor, and in this labor had been lesing some concentrated lye. She had the floor, and in this labor had been using some concentrated lye. She had used all out of the box as she supposed and had rinsed it in the tub. About 2 p. m. she rinsed the box again, and refilling it with water, placed it on an article outside of the door. It had been there but a short time when Paricy M. Everett, an infant not quite lifteen months old, came along and took a drink from the box. The small quantity of lye that had remained around the edges of the can had dissolved, and burned the poor child's mouth, throat and stomach. and stomach.

Medical assistance was summoned, and as it was thought that possibly the deadly poison was not present in snificient quantity to do serious injury, every effert was made to counteract its effects and relieve the child of its sufferings. But the terrible work had been accomplished, and between 4 and 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after about 26 hours of fearful agony, the bane relinquished its hold upon life. It was bern in this city April 21, 1887.

It is impossible to describe the terrible grief of Mr. and Mrs. Everett at the fate of their little one. The poor mother especially was fairly distracted.

At 5:40 p. m. last Saturday a Utah & Nevada train, bearing 120 members of the excursion party of the Iowa Press Association, and a large number of residents of this city, most of whom were formerly citizens of the Hawkeye State, started for Garfield. This bathing resort had been prepared for the reception of the guests in a splendid manner. Across the entrance to the stairway leading to the pavilion was a streamer bearing these words: "Welcome Iowa! The Affections of its People, like the Rivers of its Borders, Flow on to an Inseparable Union."

From 6:30 to 7:30 such of the excursionists as so desired, bathed. Judgling by their expressions of pleasure the bathing in the bouyant waters was a delightful experience to the visitors. They lingered so long in the water as to necessitate a postponement for half an hour of the opening of the dining room doors for the grand banquet which had been prepared. By 8:10 o'clock the gnests were seated at the tables, which were spread with an elegant collation, including Idanha mineral water, and champagne.

Just before the attack on the edihles was made President Swalm of the Iowa Press Association called the assembly to order, the gnests being seated at the tables, and announced that the present was deemed a fitting time for the transaction of of the Iowa Press Association. A financial report was then read and the following officers were elected: President—Al. Swalm, of Oskaloosa.

Vice-president—Byron Webster, of Marshalltown. Secretary-C. M. Junkin, of Fair-field.

Treasurer - J. M. Brainard, of Treasurer—J. M. Brainard, of Boone.

Executive committee—Ralph Robinson, Newton; L. A. Marine, Vinton; E. M. Can, Manchester; J. H. Duffers, Madison; J. H. Ragsdale, L. Mars; and the officers, ex-officio, are members of this committee.

This business transacted, grace was pronounced by Dr. Clarkson and the company proceeded to dojustice to the banquet. When their appetites had been satisfied, Chairman Sells, of the reception committee, in behalf of the Chamber of Commerce, whose gnests the visitors wer, in behalf of the excursionists, thankedomr. Hoyt Sherman, manager of Garfield, for the reception which had been tendered to the tourists. In well chosen words he bade the latter a hearty welcome, and closed by introducing

JUDGE BENSON,

JUDGE BENSON,
who made a brief but excellent speech of formal welcome to the visitors. He sald: When asked where he is from, no houest man need be ashamed to say
'I am from I lowa.' I am proud of having been long a resident of that State.
Though but a youth among the States,

struggle for the Union, and had equally glorious things to hoast of in the pursuits of peace.
He then pictured, in glowing terms,
the natural wealth and attractions of Utah, and praised the peaceful character of her inhabitants.
Mr. Swalm, in behalf of the guests, made a neat speech in response to the address of Judge Benson, expressing surprise and grattude at the reception they had been given in this city.

HON. LAFAYETTE YOUNG,

this city.

State Senator, and editor of the Atlantic Telegraph, then nade an address of some length, characterized by a rich humor and rare eloquence. The speaker proved himself an orator, and a man capable of appreciating greatness and the higher qualities of manhood, even among men with whose views he differed widely. He expressed a keen gratitude for the hospitality which had been extended to the visitors, and a vivid appreciation of the attractions and advantages Dtah now offers to the world.

then responded in a very happy and humorous manner to the toast "Iowa Editors." His remarks elicited much laughter and applanse, and were inter-spersed with several chtertaining an-spersed who several entertaining anecdotes.

At the close of this speech Chairman
Sells autounced that the company might consider itself dismissed, when there was a rush for the pavilion,
where dancing was indulged in by all who desired to participate therein. A few went in bathing, a pastime to which the shimmering moonlight on the water lent additional attractions.
The grounds and buildings were illuminated in a manner to present a grand and beautiful spectacle, and every phase of the reception tendered to the visitors at Garfield was a pronounced success. Hoyt Sherman, Esq., deserves great praise for all this. His exertions to make everything pleasant for everybody were strenuous and deserved the triumph which followed them. The last of the excursionists returned on a train which started for this city shortly before midnight, and yesterday afternoon the Iowa editors "went west."

The main topic of comment on the streets hereabouts is a recent case of fishing with giant powder. Four young men were brought before Judge Booth on the charge ou Tuesday and pleaded guilty. Owing to the recent legislation, there was nothing else to do but fine the boys $100, for which they are now in custody.

At the school meeting last Monday

At the school meeting last Monday evoning, the Liberals asked for a representation on the board of trustees, but were refused. They then proceeded to score the present incumbents on their financial reports. Their efforts to make a point in that direction were however as unavailing as in the first instance. instance.

Several of our young bloods have made it a practice of late to buy theater tickets for the circle nearest the stars, and afterwards introduce themselves into the dress circle. At the last performance their little game was made known to Manager Graham, who calls for an explanation through the Enquirer, and promises to give it himself unless satisfaction is forthcoming.

There are great expectations at seit unless satisfaction is forthcoming.

There are great expectations at present entertained for the advancement of the interests of the Brigham Young Academy during the present year. Opening its thirteenth year on August 6th the Academy will offer increased inducements in the way of facilities and apparatus over any previous year, and has the present assurance of a larger attendance than for several years past. As appears from letters received almost daily a lively interest is being manifested throughout the Territory to get the benefit of a course under Professor Maeser before he retires from the schoolroom. This will be aforded the youth once more, the professor having been again assigned his old field of labor.
