EVENING NEWS.

Honday, . November 17, 1884.

CORRESPONDENCE. A BOURING RATIFICATION.

FILLMORE, Millard Co., · Nov. 11th, 1884.

Editor Deseret News: In a recent issue of your paper our local politicians received a gentle castigation over the Nom de Plume of "Wake Up." As an interested friend, we might plead the absence of several of our most active officers from town, notably the Presieency of the Stake. But certainly any dereliction in the pooling has been fully compensated in the grand ovation of yesterday in honor of the successful election of the democratic candidates to the Presidency of the United States.

the United States.

Upon the arrival of our popular and energetic citizen W. H. King, Esq., from Logan, on the evening of the 9th, he appeared to possess a patriotic inspiration which was magically difused throughout the whole populace with results most gratifying, producing the grandest demonstration ever witnessed in this county.

grandest demonstration ever witnessed in this county.

Early vesterday morning a committee of arrangements was found with the ubiquitous Willie at its head, the "Stars and Stripes" were majestically floating in the breeze as the committee of invitation composed of leading citizens, left the court-house, headed by a four-horse team and wason contee of invitation composed of leading citizens, left the court-house, headed by a four-horse team and wagon containing the martial band, the team being gracefully decorated with a "Cleveland and Hendricks" banner. The artillery under command of Major Huntsman, of the Commercial Hotel, besleged every blacksmith shop in town and carried off the anvil, keeping up a constant roar of cannon, until a hundred guns had sounded the triumph of those principles, which will, we hope, give this fair land a respite from grinding monopolies and party tyranny that have rested like a blight upon the nation. At dark an immense torchlight procession was formed, composed of about fifty horsemen, headed by Mr. Isaac Ganda and Mr. J. Budley Reese, two stock men residing in Fillmore, bearing between them on horseback a large banner (with the inscription "Cleveland, Hendricks and Reform." Following this a troop of cavalry torch bearers, came the infantry, making an immense procession tapering off to the tinyest urchin with pants buttoned to his shirt, who was capable of raising a link and shouting for Cleveland and democracy. These paraded the main portions of town, visiting raising a link and shouting for Cleve-land and democracy. These paraded the main portions of town, visiting among other places the residences of the zealous republicans who, as early as the 5th, had become Bourbonized and belligerent on the strength of a cruel telegram from Salt Lake assur-ing them of the election of J. G.Biaine, but republicanism was completely run to earth, the plumed Knights hid their lances and democracyreigned supreme. In the meantime the State House was filled with a demonstrative audi-ence.

room the enthusiasm was unbounded, and your correspondent must confess to feeling its inspiring influence. He was filled with patriotic fire at seeing in virgin purity typified the galaxy of first-born States, who declared for freedom and the inalienable rights of all mankind. Order being again restored, the chairman introduced the various speakers, who were J. N. Hinkley Esq. Hon J. Q. Robison, Geo. Crane, J. T. Robison, J. D. Smith, Mayor Huntsman and others. Mr. Ganda being called for begged to substitute the cnairman, who is a universal favorite and looked upon as our coming Patrick Henry. He gave us a rouser in chaste and elegant language. Speeches being over, toasts and sentiments became in order, and were numerous and choice. order, and were numerous and choice. One we remember as coming from the fair representative of the Empire Stake, Miss Josie King, delivered with boldness and grace. "The triumph of democracy, places woman on an equality with Man." after which the "Star Spangled Banner was rendered by J. L. Robison and Joshua Greenwood, the whole audience joining in the chorus.

We are safe in saying that never before had the Stake House walls reverberated more patroitic joy than they have to the name and success of Grover Clevelaud and democracy, we trust that never again will "wake up" have cause to remind us that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

BEAR LAKE STAKE QUAR-TERLY CONFERENCE.

The Stake Conference was held at Paris, Nov. 8th and 9th. There were present of the Stake Presidency, Wm. Budge; visitors, President C. G. Card and R. G. Lambert; also the presidents of quorums and superintendents of societies. The Bishops and other local attentions.

authorities.

The reports of the Bishops were of an encouraging nature. The health of the people was remarkably good, and their desires to build up the kingdom were manifest by their liberality. The grain crops are badly frozen. The people as a general thing were paying an honest tithing, and at the recent election they voted the straight ticket with a very few exceptions. It was also reported that in Bear River Valley, those living on the outskirts were preparing to move into town according to the counsel given them. The speakers were Presidents Wm. ludge, J. U. Stucki and C. O. Card; lider R. G. Lambert and Bishop Jos. limball, and although the business of the Conference was cut down as much suppossible consistent with a second low type of forehead.

Foreheads not altogether projecting, but having angular and knotty protuberances upon them, denote vigor of mind and harsh and oppressive activity and perseverance. To be in exact proportion the forehead should be the same length as the nose. In Greek art, however, it is generally shorter, which gives softness and elegance to the face. It should be oval at the top, or somewhat square; if the latter, it gives more force; if the former, more sensibility of character. It should be smooth in repose, yet have the power of wrinkling when in deep thought or when in grief or anger; for, as I have before said, foreheads over which the skin is so tightly strained as never to change under these circumstances, show a dull, unsensitive and unintellectual nature. A forehead should project more over the eyes than at the top, and there should be a small cavity in the centre, separating the brow into four divisions; but this should be so slightly accentuated as only to be seen when the forehead is in a strong light coming from above it.

Square foreheads with broad angu-smooth and somewhat low forehead, shows a poetic, ardent and sensitive nature.

Perpendicular wrinkles, those between the eyes, are natural to the forehead (where they are sometimes seen in extreme youth). When much accentuated they show application and thought, habit of concentration; we invariably knit the brows when we wish to grasp a subject. These perpendicular wrinkles on the forehead are, however, often the traces of habitual indulgence in anger; therefore to be sure of the indication, one should have to consider the temperament. If the skin is of ithe color and taxture which denotes the Choleric or sanguine temperament, one would probably be right in attributing the formation of the perpendicular wrinkles in such a face to the habitual indulgence of anger; but if seen in a person of the lymphatic or melancholy temperment we should be most likely correct in attributing the lines to the habit of thought. Persons of the purely lymphatic temperment rarely have these perpendicular lines; they are too indolent to indulge much in study, and too indifferent to be given to anger. In persons of a billious temperament the lines would probably be produced from both causes—from the deep thought of study and also from the indulgence of fits of anger—for the billious temperament is especially an irritable one, though at the same time highly intellectual, being the result of the double influence of Apolio and Mercury.

W. H. King, Esq., occupied the chair. The cavalry torch-bearers having dismounted, filed into the hall to seats reserved for them.

Order being demanded by the chairman, we looked across the square and saw 13 young ladies dressed in white asch bearing in the right hand a torch, coming toward the State House. As these fals warms and the same transparent to the double influence of Apolio and Mercury.

Horizontal wrinkles across the forehead, especially if broken in the middle, show an anxious and somewhat fretful nature, if the lips are thin and drooping. These lines are, however, often the result of continued cares and sorrow. They are often traced by the vexations of domestic life; hence they are more commonly seen on the foreheads of women than men, to whom the perpendicular wrinkles are more common. Apart from the deductions to be made from the observation of the temperament, there is another indication whiteh sometimes serves to distinguish the perpendicular lines of analytic and the properties of the double influence of Apolio and Mercury.
