

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Newsy Notes of Utah People and Friends Now Located in the Metropolis.

Special Correspondence.

New York, Oct. 21, 1901.—They are playing "La Tosca" at the American theater this week. Shades of Bernhardt and Davenport! Last season the writer paid a fabulous price to see the divine Sara in this same character. The seat was just three-quarters of a mile from the stage and our knowledge of French very limited. But even at that distance and laboring under the many disadvantages, there has never been a regret. In looking over the paper to see which of its many attractions we would select for an afternoon's entertainment, "La Tosca" in English, caught the eye, and the first thought was to go and see what it was all about. So we could picture La Bernhardt in every scene. Armed with a box of chocolates, and a good opera glass, we were prepared for the worst, and we got it. Almost the first name on the program was a familiar one. Mortimer Snow was cast as Angelotti; he did the small part exceedingly well, never overdoing his scenes, where there is a chance for heroics if one cares to indulge in them. The characters of Scarpia and Mario were fairly played, but others of the piece were so indifferently done, they scarcely deserve mention. As there was but one Booth so there is but one Sara. "Hamlet" and "La Tosca" are too closely identified with these great artists to ever be enjoyed again, no matter how well they are portrayed. Delightful memories to be cherished by all who ever had the pleasure of seeing them.

In a letter from Hugh Douglass, dated Berlin, he says he is making rapid progress on the piano and in voice culture. Good teachers are plentiful, he says, at moderate prices. He has met many friends and acquaintances over there, among them Spencer Clawson, Jr., whom he reports as speaking the language well and doing good missionary work.

Agnes Rose Lane has accepted an engagement of twenty-one weeks at the new theater in Washington, D. C., as leading lady in a round of good old stock plays. She will find many friends in the Utah colony of Washington, among them Hon. F. J. Cannon and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Israel Willey and others who are wintering in the capital.

Harry Stittard, a Utah boy who has been in New York for the last three winters studying drawing and designing, returned from his vacation spent near Buffalo, a week ago, to resume work in the Chase school life class, also a course of composition at the Art League under Dow. He has been doing farming on a small scale to get rid of the fallow and malaria that all New Yorkers feel in duty bound to acquire.

After an absence of eleven years Hon. John W. Young took his departure for Zion a week ago today. It will be a joyful reunion of relatives and friends.

Our Relief Society, which holds its meetings once a month at the home of Mrs. Laine, west Twenty-third street, met last Wednesday to discuss some important matters, and to listen to Mrs. Alonso Hyde, who promised to address the society. But business kept her in Washington longer than she anticipated. In her absence Mrs. Cummings and Miss Beecraft instructed the ladies on the work required of them, and valuable suggestions were offered by other members of the club, which were accepted, and will be acted upon.

Mrs. Pond has issued invitations for a musicale on a grand scale at his elegant home in Jersey City, Tuesday, Oct. 22, in honor of Miss Lulu Gates. We will then be given an opportunity to hear what Berlin has done in the way of voice culture for one of our girls.

Memorial services were held in the Latter-day Saints' chapel last Sunday in honor of President Snow. An impromptu quartet, Miss Ruth Wilson, Miss Schaffer, Elders Coulam and Gill rendered "O My Father" and "Rest." Elders B. P. Cummings and Gill delivered very feeling addresses, giving sketches of the noble life of the great departed leader.

Miss Jennie Hawley accompanied Mrs. McLaughlin to Buffalo this week. It will be a brief visit, as Mrs. McLaughlin goes to Chicago very soon on business. Mrs. Arthur Brown, who was at the Waldorf with Mrs. McLaughlin, sailed for Europe at the same time to visit her sister, Mrs. Reed, who is very ill in London.

Two new home papers found their way into our letter box a week ago, "Truth" and "The Spectator," both new and interesting. I took pleasure in showing them to some artist friends, and it was the universal opinion that the Spectator's cover was a most artistic piece of work.

The papers are having great sport this week at the expense of J. H. Stoddard, who was a guest of the Twelfth Night club, last Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Alice Fisher-Harcourt, the club's Coughing?

Start at once for your drug store for some cough medicine. If you meet your doctor on the way, tell him you are going after a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. If he has anything better to offer you, get it. We want to help you, and so does your doctor.

"I coughed terribly after having a grippa. If it had not been for Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I don't think I could possibly have pulled through."

president. In a moment of ecstasy, threw her arms around his neck and kissed him. May Robson, Ida Conquest and Mrs. C. A. Doremus, hostesses for the day, were not long in following their president's example. Poor, modest, Mr. Stoddard, they say, bawled bravely without flinching; in fact, though blushing furiously, he seemed pleased, as he is the first man who has enjoyed this distinction by the club.

MAN'S WILL WAS TATTOOED.

Perhaps it was not parsimony, as his relatives alleged, that led a Mexican miser who recently died to tattoo his last will and testament upon his body. They allege that the decedent, named Moreche, in order to save the cost of pen, ink and paper, imprinted his will indelibly upon his body with some red pigment. When the old miser died, his heirs protested against the burial of the body and petitioned the court to have the remarkable "human document" admitted to probate. It was a knotty problem, but the court decided that a copy should be made of the tattooed will, and that the copy should have the full effect of an original will. After the copy had been made, the old miser was buried by his legatees, the original will being "filed for reference," as it were.

This case is another instance of the imaginations of authors being realized in fact. In one of Rider Haggard's stories, the plot hinges upon the existence of just such a tattooed will, only in the case of Rider Haggard's man the will was tattooed on his back because he was shipwrecked and there were no pens, ink or paper handy for the drawing up of the "last will and testament." In the case of the Mexican miser the tattooed will could be read easily, and the copy of it was attested by four witnesses before being admitted to probate.—Chicago Chronicle.

Story of the First Race for the Cup

The following description of the schooner America's venture in English waters, whereby she won the cup which was recently contested for by the Columbia and Shamrock II, is taken from the record of current events in Harper's Magazine of October, 1851:

"No event in England has created more excitement or engaged more attention during the past month than the visit and performance of the yacht America, built in New York, and owned by John C. Stevens, Esq., who commands her.

"She arrived at Cowes early in July and her commander immediately offered to sell her against any vessel of a similar construction in the world for any wager up to $50. Public attention was instantly attracted to her by the reports of pilots and others who had seen her, and she was visited by thousands and thousands of people from every part of England, but her challenge was not accepted.

"On the 18th there was a race of seventeen yachts, owned by gentlemen from every part of the kingdom, contending for the prize of the gold cup which the queen gives every year to the best yacht in the kingdom. The America was entered for the race, and won it so easily as to excite the unbounded admiration and applause of the unsuccessful competitors.

"On the 25th there was another race by the squadron, but the America was not entered. The wind was light, and the last vessel of the squadron had been under way sixty-five minutes when the America hoisted sail and followed. The race was around the Isle of Wight, and she came in only ten minutes behind the winner.

"Mr. Stephenson, the distinguished engineer, offered to sail his yacht, the Titania, for a small wager against the America. The offer was accepted, and the race came off on the 28th of August. The wind was fresh and the course was forty miles out and forty back. Earl Wilton was umpire. The America won the race by a long distance.

"The queen, with Prince Albert and the royal family, visited the yacht on the 20th.

"The spirit of England is thoroughly aroused by this defeat, but they are unbounded in their expressions of admiration for the vessel which has conquered them. Several new cutters are to be built immediately for the purpose of contending with the America."

THE CZAR'S CRUEL FATHER.

Nicholas' Strong Contrast to His Haughty Predecessor.

The czar is a curious contrast to his father, and the peasants of Denmark who used to gaze with admiring awe on the huge Alexander III can scarcely understand that the slight boyish figure which is so overshadowed by their own tall old king can indeed be that of the great White czar himself. In disposition and in attainments, as well as in bodily presence, the son differs strangely from the father. Alexander was a very uneducated man. His elder brother, Nicholas, had been carefully taught and trained, but his death at the age of 22, placed Alexander in the position of heir to the throne, and he was then too old to learn. He was a thorough Romanoff, imperious and haughty. The one person with whom he was gentle was his wife, whom he treated to the last as though she were a pet child. To his underlings he could be absolutely brutal, although toward the end of his life his manners were said to have wonderfully improved.

Before he succeeded to the throne a very painful thing occurred which proved how callous he could be. An officer of Swedish origin had been sent to the United States to order rifles for the Russian army. On his return he had to report to the czar which was appointed to superintend the rearming of the troops. During the interview the prince lost his temper and began to scold sharply. The officer replied with dignity, whereupon Alexander fell into a fit of fury and loaded the officer with insults. The man bowed himself out of the royal presence, went home and wrote a letter to the heir apparent asking him to apologize within four-and-twenty hours, adding that if the apology did not come he would shoot himself.

The czar took no notice, sent neither excuse nor apology, and the officer kept his word, next morning he was dead. The czar heard the story and was very angry with his son. He ordered him to follow the hearse of the officer to the grave. But even this terrible lesson failed to cure Alexander of his haughtiness. The gentle ways of the present czar and his unwillingness to hurt the feelings of anyone are in sharp contrast, indeed.—London Modern Society.

SHOULD NOT SHUN POLITICS.

We shall have reason to hail it as a wholesome sign of the times when American youth cease to be indifferent to politics. A country in which any man, however obscure his origin, may, through determination to overcome obstacles, and fine strength of character, arrive at the highest distinctions in the gift of the republic, ought to stimulate young men to splendid endeavor and rich achievement. One regrets to observe an aversion on the part of many men to study political economy, and a singular lack of responsibility in wielding that power of the unit, which is so tremendous a force in our national life.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Had to Conquer or Die.

"It was just about gone," writes Mrs. Rosa Richardson, of Laurel Springs, N. C. "I had Consumption so bad that the best doctors said I could not live more than a month, but I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by seven bottles and am now stout and well."
