THE DESERET NEWS,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Entered at the Postoffice of Salt Lake City as second class matter according to the Act of Congress, March 3, 1879.

SALT LAKE CITY, - DEC. 20, 1906.

A GREAT ANNIVERSARY.

Sunday, Dec. 23, is the 101st anniversary of the birth of the Prophet Joseph. His life and his teachings are the subject of the anniversary services, with appropriate exercises. The remarkable incidents in the life of the Prophet Joseph are well worth recounting to the present generation, for no man in this age has accomplished a greater work, or performed a more important mission than he did, during the few years that were allotted to him in this sphere of action. The anniversary comes so near the great anniversary of the Christian world, that the significance of the two may be appropriately dwelt upon in the assemblies of the Latter-day Saints next Sunday.

SALT LAKE'S FAME SPREADING.

That Utah affairs are followed with deep interest throughout the country, is evidenced by the fact that the present activity in real estate in this city is made the subject of editorial comment in eastern papers. We find in the Manchester, N. H., Union of Dec. 14, a leading editorial in which the story of recent real estate transactions in this city is told with considerable attention to detail, and accuracy.

Our contemporary explains that it gives the information referred to for the benefit of people who otherwise might be inclined to judge the State of Utah by the reports that are circulated to create an unfavorable impression, such as the murder of former Senator Brown in Washington, and the proceedings against Senator Smoot. This certainly shows a kind feeling toward Utah and an appreciation of the fact that whatever disadvantages the people here are laboring under, owing to anti-Mormon bitterness, are but temporary and accidental. The real Utah, as built up by the people here under wise leadership, by industrious laborers and enterprising business men is a desirable place to live in, and one that offers exceptional advantages to the investor. Notwithstanding the efforts to injure the reputation of the State, these facts are being appreciated abroad.

And this is another reminder of the necessity of the citizens pulling together for material and spiritual progress, if that is what is wanted. No house divided against itself can prosper. Strife is not inspired by the good spirit of advancement. No matter who is responsible for it, it comes from the evil spirit whose aim is destruction. Utah has great advantages and, practically, unlimited resources, but they will never be fully utilized, until public spirited, broad-minded business men with influence come together and make an end to the agitation of individuals who have no higher ambition in life than the gratification of personal spite.

THE DECEIT OF IT.

The chief anti-Mormon mouthpiece intimates that the numerous signatures to petitions asking the Senate to investigate the charges against the senior Senator from Utah "cut no figure in the case." The paper referred to does not say that in so many words, but it attributes the view represented by the quotation in the Deseret News, and as this paper never uttered a word saying that idea, the only inference possible is that the anti-Mormon organ itself looks upon the array of names, as of little or no consequence. That paper has a wicked habit of attributing its own questionable views and sentiments to others, and then assailing them.

The point we have made is this, that the agitation against Senator Smoot throughout the country was set in motion by resort to deliberate fraud. The women of the country were aroused by false reports to the effect that Utah has sent a polygamist to the Senate, and they were asked to petition for his expulsion on that ground. The form of petition reproduced in these columns a few days ago was sent broadcast in thousands of copies. The signers were requested to ask the Senate to investigate the charges made and to exclude the Senator, if he were found to be a polygamist. Perhaps 50 per cent of the signatures were secured by the fraudulent representations, and the IP which made the document look exceedingly fair and virtuous.

The fraud did not end with the attempts at securing signatures around the country. It was carried into the Senate. The leaders of the agitation, instead of presenting to the Senate the petition to which the signatures had been obtained, addressed two other documents to that body, one of which had only eighteen signatures, and the other only one, and that one was one of the famous eighteen. The intention was evidently to create an impression that the thousands of signatures for expulsion had been obtained in support of the protests and allegations of the eighteen, although in ninety cases of one hundred they had been attached to an entirely different document, viz., a petition asking for expulsion only on the condition that the charges of polygamy should be proved against the Senator. The fraud, we say, were first obtained by fraud, and then relied upon by the Senate as if belonging to the protest that was made the basis of investigation.

That the opposition to Senator Smoot was aroused by false charges is becoming evident to the general public, as evidenced by comments of impartial newspapers. The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, of Dec. 12, calls attention to the danger of shifting the ground to a charge of an entirely different character. The Bulletin says in part:

"Smoot himself is not a polygamist; there has been no evidence to show that personally he is not as decent a man as most of his fellow-Senators, and the opposition to him has been shifted to the ground that he represents a religious system which is held to be immoral and political also in its workings, and that his unseemly would be a blow to that system, even if it be conceded that he is not an immoral offender in his own person."

"But is this entirely a broad and equitable point of view? Does it not involve the creation of a precedent which may in time be hurtful? Are there not other religious organizations which are chargeable in the eyes of many people with doctrines or practices of a sinful and improper nature and of which the members might be ruled out of office on that ground? Besides, to argue from a man's religious opinions or convictions that he will necessarily do everything which might be logically deduced from them—as Senator Burrows has argued in his plea for the unseating of Smoot—is not wholly fair and is an assumption which has too often led to mere persecution."

"The zealous women and their allies who are concerned over Senator Smoot seem to lose sight of the consequences which an application of the anti-Smoot rule of reasoning may have hereafter when some other church, creed or organization may be attacked by similar methods when a considerable body of popular prejudice is turned against it."

"Moreover, if Smoot is unfit to be a Senator because he is a religious precedent of polygamists in Utah, what are we to say of some Senators who are not Mormons but whose habits as well as associations imply an entire disregard of personal and marital decency? Why not a 'crusade' against some of them?"

The general public is commencing to get a clearer understanding of the vicious agitation against Senator Smoot, and the Church, and we believe the love of fair play and a square deal, for which American citizens are renowned, will, finally, assert itself. Those who have tried to further their ambitious ends by means of falsehood would display wisdom if they would not presume too much on their ability to fool all the people all the time.

THE JAPANESE QUESTION.

From the light now thrown on the difficulty with the Japanese school children of the Pacific coast, it is evident that there is a widespread sentiment in the West against the presence of the Japanese in this country. Laborers do not want Japanese competitors, and would rather favor an exclusion-law directed against Japanese immigrants. They object to the Japanese on the same ground as the Chinese. The school question is but an incident, illustrating this general animosity toward an alien race. If this sentiment is encouraged, it will undoubtedly extend and, in time, include other classes of immigrants. If exclusion laws are framed against the Japanese, there is but a short step to legislative measures against the immigration of Armenians, Greeks, Italians, and others. Where is the stopping place, if this course is entered upon? If the interests of this country demand exclusion laws of a more stringent nature than those already existing, the best policy would be to make them applicable to all races and nationalities alike.

A question of great importance has been raised in connection with this trouble with the Japanese children, and that is one relating to state's rights. The attitude of President Roosevelt, as we understand it, is that the interests of the nation demand that the Federal government shall not be placed in a ridiculous position before the world by the attitude of the citizens of any one state. He considers it intolerable that the national government should be hampered by deference to the states in the performance of its duties. The record of the Roosevelt administration is one of doing things, and it has won popular approval on this account. The people feel that they can trust the President not to go beyond proper limits, even when he acts without precedent.

It is the duty of the President to enter into treaties with foreign powers, with the advice and counsel of the Senate. In the capacity of treaty maker, he certainly represents every one of the states and territories of the Union, and it is the indisputable duty of each state to honor the obligations thus entered into. Each state must be bound by the agreements entered into in its behalf, otherwise the treaty power would be a hollow mockery. The duty of the President, according to the Constitution, is also to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," and since a treaty is a supreme law of the land, it is evident that the President is charged with the duty of seeing that that law is faithfully executed. There is in this prerogative no menace to any rights of individual states.

In the meantime it is interesting to notice that the foreign governments are taking an almost extraordinary interest in the relations between this country and Japan. It is claimed in a Berlin dispatch that Emperor William recently discussed that question with several persons, and that he is kept thoroughly informed regarding President Roosevelt's personal views of the subject. It is even believed that the discussion of the California school question has encouraged the Russian government to assume a rather resolute attitude against the requests of Japan for trade and colonization rights on the Amur river and in Siberia. The possibility of a conflict is still discussed in German military circles. All this illustrates how closely the interests of the different nations of the world are now interwoven with one another. A local dispute in a city on the Pacific slope of this country is enough to arouse intense interest in two hemispheres.

Now you see it and now you don't—plenty of coal.

Tomorrow is the shortest day because it is December 21 and Christmas is so near.

And now Mr. J. J. Hill knows how it feels himself. It is only the application of the law of talions.

There is no good and sufficient reason why Dubois, who confessed to the murder of the cashier of the Japanese bank, should not receive the full penalty of law. His crime was deliberate and atrocious, and his confession in no way mitigates it.

No matter how abundant the ice crop is in winter the dealers will say in summer that it was short.

It is a good thing for Uncle Sam that he doesn't have to pay space rates on presidential special messages.

Senator Dubois' spleen against the Mormon people seems to be exceeded only by that of his helpmeet.

Mayor Schmitz says that he is all ready for trial. This announcement robs the event of much of its interest for the public.

Dealers in agricultural machinery have declared war on the harvesters' trust. Do they mean business or are they out chaffing?

If any European government has been maintaining a lobby in Washington to "whoop up" the Congo Free State question, then it should be investigated, and Senator Patterson's resolution calling for one is a right and proper move. The affair savors somewhat of the Citizen Genet nature.

The President never did a more graceful or worthy deed than in giving Sheriff Merrill of Georgia, who lost his reelection because he did his duty in protecting a negro prisoner from a white mob, a place under the general government, and giving him promotion when there was an opportunity. It is a just reward for a deserving officer and is a recognition of duty done that cannot fail to have a good influence in encouraging all officers to do their duty.

Those who have been prominently identified with relief work in San Francisco say that the refugees are being pauperized. If they are it is to be regretted but not to be wondered at. It is but a repetition of all relief history. The trouble is not in the relief itself, but in the prolongation of it. Idleness with the necessities of life furnished very soon enervates people, and that appears to be what is taking place in San Francisco. What the refugees now need most is work and relief from relief.

ANOMALIES OF PROSPERITY.

Chicago Chronicle.

National prosperity continues to show that it entails certain penalties as well as pleasures. The very force of the swelling tide tends to react upon itself. Thus business activity is so great the money commands high prices. It is not only the stock gamblers who suffer. Legitimate enterprises are halted by the difficulty of financing them. It is well known that the published rates for money do not by any means tell the story. Money, like any other commodity, is worth what it will bring, and neither lender nor borrower is likely to take the public into confidence respecting transactions far above the nominal rate. The scarcity of money is one disagreeable phase of prosperity; the scarcity of labor is another. Here, too, great enterprises are hampered and delayed by the circumstance that men are not to be had to do the manual labor. They cannot be secured even by offering extravagantly high wages. There are simply not enough men in the country to do the work of the country. The tide reacts upon itself again.

GLUE THAT IS WATERPROOF.

The Scientific American.

Waterproof glue is manufactured of gum shellac three parts and India rubber one part by weight, these constituents being dissolved in separate vessels in ether, free from alcohol, subject to a gentle heat. When thoroughly dissolved the two solutions are mixed and kept for some time in a vessel tightly sealed. This glue, when the action of water, both hot and cold, as well as most acids and alkalis. If the glue is thinned by the admixture of ether and applied as a varnish to leather along the seams, when this has been sewn together, it renders the joint or seam watertight and almost impossible to separate.

BUSY CHINESE SCHOOLBOYS.

Detroit Free Press.

The Chinese school children have instilled into them at an early age habits of hard study. At the age of 5 a boy begins his schooling. At daylight he rises, and after dressing as quickly as possible, he starts breakfast to school. He is given a task, and after it is completed he is allowed an hour for breakfast. After that he has an hour for luncheon, but he is at his study nearly twelve hours a day, seven days in the week. All his time, when he is not resting, is his lesson, he is studying aloud at the top of his voice. He is under the eye of his master, both in school and on his way to and from school.

MILLION MOTH WORMS.

Sacramento Bee.

One million codlin moth worms have been placed in cold storage for the winter by the State Horticultural Commission. These will be kept in this condition until early spring, when they will be put in racks containing codlin moth parasites. The latter will then lay their eggs on the worm, where they will hatch. As soon as they are properly matured, the parasites will be distributed throughout the orchards of the State. This will be done much earlier than last year.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

Moody's Magazine opens its second year with illustrated descriptions of several important corporation undertakings in the public interests. The $200,000,000 tunnels of New York City are described by Charles H. Cochrane with some detailed mention of each of the fourteen bays which will be finished in two years' time. The projected opening of the Tehuantepec railway by the Mexican government is made the occasion of a historical illustrated article by George C. Moon. The railway crossing of the Michigan Central railroad under the Detroit river will be accompanied by a tunnel constructed by novel methods as described by Paul Leake. In an inquiry into the whereabouts of our gold W. H. Allen concludes that immense quantities are held by foreigners and carried off by returning immigrants. Other important subjects are exhaustively discussed, and the editorial review and comment is full and incisive as usual.—35 Nassau St., New York.

The action in the plot of Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Weaver's Son," is more intense and exhilarating in the January issue of Harper's Magazine. This number opens with a delightful personal account by Robert Shackleton of the quaint, independent grand-duchy of Luxembourg, which, though surrounded by Germany, Belgium, and France, is constantly overlooked by the tourist stupor following his nose between Paris and Berlin. Frederick Trevor Hill, in his series of articles on "Decisive Battles of the Law," writes with a vivid personal touch of the Alabama arbitration case at Geneva, illustrated with portraits and drawings made at the trial. A scholarly and a vivid personal touch of the Florida overruling is described by A. W. Dimock, with photographs for illustration. What children say and do when they go to books at the library is told by Gertrude Urban in an amusing article on "Life in a Children's Library," beautifully illustrated by Ivanovitch. In "Studies of Natural Death," Prof. Elie Metchnikoff, of the Pasteur Institute, Paris, presents the idea that the desire for death is as an instinct at some late period of our lives, and is as natural as the desire for life. Some hitherto unpublished letters written by George Washington to George and James Clinton, an historic find of some importance, are contributed to this number by George S. Hellman, who writes the accompanying explanatory comments. In "The Unexplored Regions of the Earth" in an article accompanied by maps. There is a fine group of short stories and other excellent items.—Franklin Square, New York.
