Clerk.

MITTENS.—During a period of more than thirty years past, we have been accustomed to make cheap and durable mittens in the following manner, to be worn when performing all sorts of outdoor work. A good sheep skin is purchased for $1, which has been tanned with the wool on. The wool, of course, is short—not more than half an inch in length. A sheep-skin of medium size will make from three to four pair of mittens, as per the size of the hands. A pattern was first made out of stiff brown paper. The paper thumb piece must be neatly fitted to the pattern. Then the leather will fit the thumb hole. One pattern will answer for both mittens if the leather is turned over after one mitten has been cut out. Sometimes the mittens are made with the wool outside, and sometimes the wool is inside. When mittens are to be used for handling wood, stone, lumber, and other things which are liable to wet them the leather is smeared with a coat of coal tar, which must be dried in before the fire. A coat of coal tar will prevent the leather from being wet like a piece of wet cloth, and it will also make the mitten wear like horn. Apply tar only to the parts that are most exposed to contact with the materials to be handled. In lieu of sheep-skin we have sometimes employed

A PROFANE CLERGYMAN.—Earnestness we admire, and even some degree of sensationalism we are ready to tolerate, in the pulpit; but profanity can never be justified or excused in a minister of the gospel. The Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage is reported to have indulged last Sunday, in the course of his sermon, in a variety of oaths, some of which were quite original. "By the strength of the eternal God," "By the power of God," "By the God of America and Bunker Hill," "By the eternal God," were some of the oaths with which Mr. Talmage relieved his pent-up soul. "By the Eternal," we know, was General Jackson's favorite oath, which Mr. Talmage has elaborated into "By the Eternal God;" but then, Gen. Jackson was always considered rather a profane man, and in that respect not a fit exemplar for the clergy to follow. Other great men have made use of peculiar oaths.

Henry II. of England was wont to swear "By the eyes of God," and on one occasion it is recorded that the sainted Becket in response said, "By the same eyes by which you swear, O King," etc.; but this we have always considered rather a slip on the part of the saint. And what might be tolerated in a Becket under provocation could hardly be overlooked in a Talmage.—N. Y. Sun.
