Provo, March 28 .- The Sunday school convention of the Juab, Nebo, Utah, Alpine and Wasatch stakes, opened Satur-day evening in the college hall of the day evening in the college hall of the Brigham Young university, with a large delegation from each stake, about 800 delegates being in attendance. There were present of the general superin-tendncy and th union board, Elders George Reynolds, Francis M. Lyman, L. John Nuttall, James W. Ure, Wil-liam D. Owen, Seymour B. Young, eGorge D. Pyper, Hanry Paterson called attention to the fact that convention was called for work; intel-ligense might be disseminated and to those who felt they were not so tal-ented as some others he would say: "Do not feel discouraged, but determine by God's help to become as bright as the brightest. The speaker called atten-tion to the great work of the Sunday school cause and its importance, and prayed that the convention would prove a time of rejoicing and that all would leave the convention better equipped for the great work entrusted to them.

ELDER JOS. W. SUMMERHAYS

SUPERINTENDENT EGGERTSON.

of the Utah stake delivered an address on "The Effect of the New Outlines' in Our Stake, and the Changes They have Wrought in the Methods of Teaching Home Preparation and General Effici-ency of Sunday School Work." He had found them productive of attention and attendance on the part of the scholars by causing them to take an interest in the lessons. The teachers had been benefitted by being able to become better prepard and thus making thir work easier and productive of greater good. The speaker called attention to the fact that union meetings had been com-menced in the stakes before the "outlines" were introduced. The union meetings were necessary to obtain the best results from the outlines, and were a preparation for that which was coming of Alpine stake also spoke highly in favor of the good effects of the "outlines." He suggested that for the lower departments of the school the teacher, could make the lessons more interesting by relating the subject in form, and thus create an interest that would cause the children to look up the references

Supt. Balley of the Juab stake read a paper dealing with the lack of uniformity and system in the old method of teaching and the gradual progress which had culminates in the "outlines," providing a uniform course of Sunday school study. He testified that the outlines had been productive of great good in the Sunday schools of his stake.

"How to Cultivate the Aesthetic Na-ture of the Child by Means of Flowers, Pictures and Personal Appearance was the subject of a very interesting address by Miss Maude May Babcock, in which she strongly and eloquently urged the saying and doing of things and the presenting of objects before the children that will have an enaobling influence on their souls, and cause the children's visions to be opened to the influences of good, and spoke of the wonderful moral effect of outside con-

Among the important ex-terior conditions necessary for inculcating aesthetics, were given as order, neatness, cleanliness, high ideals, and opportunity of putting the ideals into practise

Benediction was offered by Elder Seymour B. Young. After the exercises the congregation adjourned to room D, where refreshments were served under the direction of the Alpine stake.

SUNDAY MORNING.

The services Sunday morning commenced by the congregation singing "The Cause of Truth," under the direc-tion of the Wasatch stake. Prayer was offered by Elder George H. Brimnall. "The Song of the Workers" was sung by the congregation, after which the delegates were assigned to the various departments, where the progrom pre-viously published in the "News" was carried out.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON. Sunday afternoon at 1:45 the convention met for opening services in college hall The congregation sang, "Today, while the sun shines," etc., under the direction of the Alpine stake. Prayer was offered by Elder George D. Pyper, "Pence, Be Still." was sung by the congregation, and the congregation sepcording to the program. These exercises were greatly enjoyed, and the general expression of those attending was that great good will result from the excellent points brought out and dis-cussed, and the good counsel given by members of the Union board and others.

SUPERINTENDENT'S DEPT.

In the superintendent's department Elder Summerhays, who presided, struck a responsive chord during one stage of the proceedings by calling attention to the habit, which appeared to be growing, of the Sunday school workers, address-ing one another, as "Mr." "Mrs." and "Miss" instead of brother and sister. He urged strongly that this practise be stopped and the class shared his views enthusiastically.

SUNDAY EVENING.

The evening session held in the Tab-ernacle was attended by a very large congregation, Elder J. W. Summerhays presided.

The meeting opened by the choir singing "The Pligrims' Chorus." PPrayer was offered by Elder Hor-ace Cummings.

The choir sang "The Lord is my shepherd."

ELDER J. M. ANDERSON read an article from the Juvenile Instructor entitled "Attention, Sunday Workers," treating upon the relations that should exist between Sunday school officers and the General Church authorities in the ward and stake.

ELDER WM. A. MORTON

spoke on "The Juvenile Instructor as a Sunday School Ald." The speaker referred to the great good the maga-zine had accomplished in moulding the minds of the young of the Latter-day, Saints. He especially spoke of the good that would result from these con-ventions that five now being held; the papers from the conventions would be while the five the five the five the five the he had heard in the various depart-ments of the convention. He believed the Latter-day Saints were accomplishing more in training the children than any other people, although many other people were doing o good work in this direction. No Latter-day Saint should resitate to do all he can in this cause because it is training the spirits of the children for this life and the life to come, and the field is as important as come, and the field is as important as any missionary work abroad. It was also the duty of all members of the Church to aid in popularizing this Sun-day school by attending the Sunday school and thus bear testimony that they are interested in the work.

Active Sunday school workers should also be exemplary in their daily walk and conversation, so that the children might see they were sincere in their professions and lead lives consistent therewith, He asked the question "How can we increase faith?" and answered that like any quality of mind many talents by work and cultivation. And when it is exercised it will grow and increase until all doubt is expelled from the mind. Therefore faith should be cultivated. It will come freely from the Lord unless the window of the soul is closed against it. And such a con-dition is not the fault of the Lord but of the people. He prayed the Lord to bless the Sunday school cause and the Sunday school workers.

ELDER J. W. SUMMERHAYS.

Elder Summerhays said in closing, behalf of the Union board, that the board considered the convention a great success and thanked all who had assisted in making the convention a success, and now that the workers were going back to their labors, he hoped they would do so with renewed deter-mination to spend their lives in working for the salvation of souls. The choir sang, "The Lord of Heav-en." Benediction was offered by President David John.
