RATHER INCONGRUOUS.

Tuz opponents of "Mormonism" frequently assume positions that are incongruous to the extent of being absurd. An instance comes under our observation. Some time since David Whitmer-one of the three witnesses to the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, whose mame is attached in that capacity to the certificate which appears at the opening of the recordpublished a pamphlet. In this publication he reiterates the assertions he has so frequently made upon that subject, about his having seen the angel from whom the plates were received; heheld that heaven'y personage turn over the leaves and exhibit the characters, and his having heard the voice of God proclaim that the record was true. In other words he asserts the divinity of the mission of Joseph Smith, but in the same work claims that he became a fallen prophet. The NEWS was requested to undertake or at least aid is the distribution of this publication. To accede to such a request would be inconsistent, although we have no objection to others undertaking the task. We have too much regard for the right to assume, for the sake of being considered liberal, the grave responsibility of spreading error when our proper duty as well as profession is to disseminate truth. The fact that the initiatory position of Mr. Whitmer is correctthat Joseph Smith was a true Prophet and the Book of Mormon a genuine record-does not cover enough ground to warrant us in assisting in the distribution of publications, or statein contiguous states and terri ories. ments in any form, to the effect that he became a fallen Prophet. The reason for this is that we hold that he was a real Prophet and never assumed any other position, giving the best flual evidence that could be efforded in that directionsacrificing his life for the sake of his followers and the principles he enunciated. When we aid in the promulgation of statements regarding the divine and inspired mission of Joseph Smith we do not propose that it shall be accompanied by conuter-statements that would place him at any time in any other position. The foolish and unreflecting may designate this course as a marrow one, but no attitude can be properly so defined which is harmonious with conviction.

scouting the idea of Joseph Smith being a prophet were to investigate the question impartially and scan the evidences in favor of the ail mative side of the question, they would be startled at their force and abundance. The existing condition of affairs at home and abroad testify to the fact that by a superhuman power he was enabled to point with prophetic foresight to events with which every individual conversant with current history is familiar.

A funny feature connected with the pamphlet in question is that the office of a bitter, unmerciful and unrelenting anti-"Mormon" journal published in this city generously undertakes its distribution. In announcing the fact it holds out as an inducement for people to procure it that the author of the pamphlet claims that the Book of Mormon translated by JosephSmith is a true record. The inconsistency of this lies in the fact that the parties who define this feature as an enticement do not believe the statement but have always held that the Book was a fraud But they are eager even to aid in the dissemination of that which is correct but which they do not believe to be true, in order to spread the statement to the effect that Joseph was a failen prophet. The object is to produce defection in the ranks of the Latter-day Saints, but the idea that such a result would proceed from such an attenuated cause is extremely failacious.

The anti-"Mormon" expectation is based on the hypothesis that the animadversions upon Joseph Smith's usission come from what will be esteemed to be a powerful source. Even if this were intrinsically correct-It is not, however-where is the consistency of the self-imposed mission of the paper in question? It necessarily has not of itself the slightest confidence in the statements of Mr. Whitmer. If it did have it would be tound to accept of the Book of Mormon as a divinely authenticated record. On the contrary it has always persisted in proclaiming it a clumsy fraud, and lauded the Rev. Mr. Lambs' feeble efforts to so describe it. Having repudiated the Book of Mormon it logically follows that the aforesaid paper repudiates Mr. Whitmer, as a person whose statements are totally cede legislation in such matters. For only the few living persons who may unworthy of credence. But to attain Congress to improve any portion of embrace it, is not sufficiently comprefinds a missionary or semi-avangelist the policy of spending money upon in a journal whose writers believe him to be a fraud.

The Latter-day Saints take a differtion, is commenced, where will it end? ent position and give Mr. Whitmer much more credit for truth and honesty than do his newly formed friends, from whom he may well desire to be saved. The former accept of his first position in reference to the genuine character of the mission of Joseph Smith and the record he was instrumental in giving to the world. They admire his tenacity and unyielding persistence in adhering to the testimony to which he gave his name, and that appears is connection with the published volume of the Book of Mormon. That far they go with him, but farther they do not follow.
