FUEL FAMINE.

This valley has had quite a fuel famine, threshing machines having to stop because coal could not be ob-tained. While there has been some cold weather and great scarcity of fuel, no one has suffered, but in some instances fences have been burned and everything combustible that could be obtained.

Since the settlement of this place in 1879, there has not been a season like the present one. Since Oct. 20, there has been about three feet of snow fail, besides considerable rain. It rained all besides considerable rain. It rained all night last night, and today the country presents a perfect sea of mud and water. Less than half of the threshing is done, and a good many of the farmers have their grain in the shock, intending to thresh from the field to save work. The damage to crops by reason of the extraordinary wet season can not be estimated, but it is considerable. The country is so soft, machines that have coal can not move for mireing down.
