

A BIT OF DOG LANGUAGE.

A dog has three "parts of speech." These are his eyes, his voice and his tail. When, therefore, we follow the dictates of fashion, and cut off a dog's tail, we deprive him of one of his most valuable possessions; for he may greet us with his eyes and express unmistakable language with his voice, but the tail is the true index to his thoughts and feelings.

Certain positions, certain movements of this useful and ornamental appendage, thus go largely toward swelling the vocabulary of the dog. The tail also occupies an important position in the sign language of the cat, and even of the bird; but a horse or cow has other uses for a tail besides talking with it, although they, as well as the deer and the rabbit and a few other creatures, make certain modified demonstrations with their tails which may be readily interpreted by a close observer of the way of animals.

To prove this statement it is only necessary to watch a dog—this is a dog with a natural tail. Then, by connecting certain emotions, which you have reason to know positively are passing through his mind at the time, with the corresponding or associated movements of his tail, it will be found that these interpretations rarely vary, although they may be more or less forcibly expressed.

When a dog carries his tail very high and stiffly, as he often does at the approach of another dog or a stranger while he steps cautiously toward the intruder—inquisitiveness, alertness, suspicion or anger are indicated, either in combination or as a single emotion. We shall still further find that when he carries his tail stiffly, in a line straight with the body, it signifies deep interest, attention and watchfulness, not necessarily accompanied by anger. This is easily proved by the attitude of the bird dog whilst at field work. Away from the scene of action, however, this same position, accompanied by side wags, denotes another frame of mind, and we may read pleasant thoughts, quiet anticipation and contentment; while a modification representing pride and gratified pleasure, well controlled, would be shown by an upright tail, waved gently at the tip.

The tail carried rather low but curved upward at the tip denotes ease of mind, acknowledgment of attention, quiet pleasure, and general "soft duty" sensations. The same position, accompanied by slow wavings from side to side, seems to mean suffused pleasure, rather than the increase. Again, the same, if the waving is uneven, in motion, with eyes fixed steadily upon the owner, should mean anticipation and entreaty. Once more, in that same tail position, this time wagged rapidly, we shall not be far out of the way if we read joy and eager hopefulness.

When the upper portion of the tail is pressed rather close to the body, but the free end is curved upward and wagged rapidly, we find embarrassment, apology, a wish to conciliate, uncertainty, and a generally undecided state of mind; and the tail tucked between the legs, though in dread of being seized or bitten, may be understood to mean discouragement, depression, sickness, anxiety or self-consciousness. To continue the list of this disagreeable side of the dog, we may readily read the most abject cowardice, dread or fear, especially when associated with whines and howls. If the tail is more snugly tucked between the legs and the body drawn up in a cowering curve.

Waving or rolling the tail in a circle, or beating it rapidly up and down, the movements accompanied by wild leaps and rushes, denote exaggerated and almost hysterical delight, also relief; and finally, when in a sitting position, that gentle thumping of the dog's tail upon the ground or floor we may understand to mean in his language—polite attention, personal sympathy, and the wish to attract notice, with its courteous acknowledgment when bestowed.

Taking these few renderings of the tail movements as a beginning, it is easy to see that a much larger vocabulary is possible. Nor should the ears be forgotten, for they play a part in the study of the dog language, although occupying a minor position in comparison with the importance of the tail—L. W. Blake, in Country Gentleman.

Women's Kidneys.

Women are more often afflicted with kidney disorders than men, but attribute the symptoms to diseases peculiar to their sex, while in reality the kidneys are arranged in the back, and are not peculiar to either sex. Nervousness, headache, puffiness of dark circles under the eyes, pain in the back, are signs of kidney trouble that must not be ignored, or a serious malady will result. Foley's Kidney Cure has restored the health of thousands of women, nervous, broken-down women. It stops irregularities and strengthens the urinary organs. It purifies the blood and benefits the whole system. Sold by F. J. Hill Drug Co.

GEORGIA PEACHES IN CHICAGO.

A fruit grower from Georgia was telling the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce about Georgia peaches, saying that the larger portion of the crop is sent to New York.

"How about Chicago?" asked Representative Mann, who always champions the city on Lake Michigan.

"Yes, send some to Chicago, but not as many to New York," Mann replied. "No," replied the Georgia man; "St. Paul and Minneapolis take more than Chicago."

And the committee laughed at Mann, add Ogden.

Invaluable for Rheumatism.

I have been suffering for the past few years with a severe attack of rheumatism and found that Ballard's Kidney and Bladder Pills was the only thing that gave me satisfaction and tended to alleviate my pains. NEGRO APPOINTEE.

C. W. Anderson, who has taken a prominent part in Republican politics in New York City, is to be rewarded with the appointment as internal revenue collector of that city, a position paying $4,500 per year. It remains to be seen whether New Yorkers will calmly accept the appointment or not.

WANTS TOBACCO AND A WIFE

[Hopkinsville (Ky.) Kentuckian.] Postmaster Brethitt has received the following letter from a former Kentuckian, who now lives in Oregon. We publish it to assist the writer in supplying both of his wants:

Erwin, Ore., Feb. 25, 1905.—Mr. Post Master: Will you please hand this note to some old tobacco raiser. I want 5 dollars worth of home made tobacco from old Ky. for chewing. I want as old tobacco as there is and as good. I want to pay what it is worth. Would like if it was twisted. Whoever gets this note answer at once. I used to live in Ky. in Livingston co., and if there is some good old maid or a widow lady about 35 or 40, tell them to write to me if they want to change their name to a better one. I was married once in Ky. I got my license at Smithland, was married at love's chapel, close to Caryville. I got a fine lady. I want a nother one from old Ky., they are the people and most respected. Believe me, your friend, A. J. BESS.

P. S.—Say, lady, if you do write send me your picture. I am this way quick sales; and good profits. My wife has Bin dead 7 years. I have no children. By By.

NO OSLERISM FOR OHIO.

[Washington Post.]

"This chatter about men being of no value after they are 60 years of age makes me weary," said Mr. Harry McBride, a retired business man of New York, at the Arlington. "Why, my own father was 60 when he was licensed to practice law, at Worcester, Ohio, and he was successful at the bar for many years thereafter. And speaking of this little Ohio town, I can remind you of some very considerable men who claim it as the home of their boyhood. Mr. Eckert, who became President of the Western Union Telegraph company, learned to be an operator there. It was likewise the early home of Mr. Taggart, the leading legal adviser of the same company, and of Mr. Samuel Kauffman, of the Evening Star, of Washington. The idea of inefficiency at the three-score limit is not worthy of serious consideration."
