LOCAL ITEMS.

STILL THEY COME.—It is highly gratifying to receive every day and by every mail additions to the lists of subscribers for our various papers,—the EVENING NEWS, the NEWS-SEMI-WEEKLY and the NEWS WEEKLY. Congratulatory comments are very satisfactory, but these additions to our subscribers are more substantial congratulations. The DESERET EVENING NEWS has now a circulation larger than any other daily paper published in the western Territories.

THEATRE.—A well selected and interesting programme is announced, on the posters, for Lisle Lester's reading in the Theatre to-morrow night. The pieces are a nice mixture of the grave and gay, the emotional, pathetic and comic. We hope she will have a good house.

THE SEVIER BRIDGE.—We have received a communication from Samuel Pitchforth, Esq., relative to the Sevier bridge being unsafe for travel, through some of the bents being carried away. We are obliged to Br. Pitchforth, but do not publish his communication in full, because a notice of the circumstance was received by telegraph the day after the bridge was injured, and was given to the public in that day's issue of the EVENING NEWS.

AN INVENTION.—Bro. John Pea of the 6th Ward, dropped in to see us lately, with a very ingenious door or gate fastener, patented by his son Ezekiel Pea who resides east. The fastener is a simple but effective spring, which holds the latch with the utmost security. Bro. Pea has the right to dispose of the invention in this Territory, and we believe it will come into very general use as it becomes known.

RETURNED.—President B. Young returned from Provo yesterday, arriving in the city shortly after five o'clock. He is in good health.

STORMY.—Yesterday was quite stormy, sleet, hail and snow coming down at intervals fiercely and furiously.

CANALING.—We take the following from the Idaho Statesman of the 29th ult:

"It is contemplated by a considerable number of the citizens of this city and vicinity, to carry the water of the Boise out on the west side of the river for irrigating purposes. There is a large body of land lying all along the Boise, from this city to the mouth of the river, extending back from the river from three to five miles, in some places even more. The tract is covered for the most part with sage brush, but there is a good depth of soil which only needs water and tilling to make it produce as well as any land in the valley. In many places bunch grass grows rank among the sage. This kind of land in Utah and Colorado has been found as good as any for most purposes, and the best for some. The irrigating canals of those Territories have caused a large outlay of capital, and are works of considerable magnitude and of great importance to the prosperity of those Territories. We hope the present plan will not end in talk. We do not see why the enterprise should not receive aid from Congress in the shape of a liberal grant of land. The land as it lies now is totally worthless for any purpose. In its present condition it will never be settled. The work of building a canal is too great to be undertaken by private enterprise. It would be an act of economy on the part of the government to give half the land that would be benefited by the work to a corporation which will do it. The remaining half would then be quickly sold for more than the whole will ever bring without improvement."

The idea advanced that the enterprise referred to should receive aid from Congress, in the shape of a liberal grant of the land, is a good and sensible one. The labor expended in making such lands valuable add to the national treasury, by preparing them for being brought into the market, and the public exchequer is directly benefited thereby. To extend this aid to the industrious and hardy citizens of this Territory, who have reclaimed and made valuable so much of the wilderness by extensive irrigating canals and ditches, taking the water out of numerous rivers and streams through the Territory and carrying it many miles to the land to be irrigated, would only be a simple act of justice. We commend the suggestion of our northern neighbor to Congress, and invite their attention to the subject.

CHANGED HANDS.—The Boise Democrat has changed hands in proprietors and editors. Walton Browne, the late editor, and S. R. Buchanan, the late proprietor, have retired from the field, having been kindly but plainly told by friends of the paper that they were "in the way," and rather "injured" it. Bail and Carlton are now the proprietors and editors. They place their platform before the people, and ask the support of the Democracy, and of others who may differ from them in views, to buy their paper and advertise with them, if they so choose, and candidly admit a truth, which most newspaper men shrink now-a-days, that they intend to publish the paper for a living. We hope they may succeed.

The Cheyenne Star says that business was dull in the police court in that city on Saturday last. There were but a few cases of intoxication and only one or two murders. The morals of that town are certainly improving.—[Denver News.
