"EVEN THIS SHALL PASS AWAY."

Once in Persia reigned a king,
Who upon his signet ring
Graved a maxim true and wise,
Which, if held before his eyes,
Gave him counsel at a glance,
Fit for every change and chance,
Solemn words and these are they:
"Even this shall pass away."

Trains of camels through the sand
Brought him gems from Samarcand;
Fleets of galleys through the seas
Brought him pearls to match with these,
But he counted not his gain
Treasures of the mine or main;
"What is wealth," the king would say,
"Even this shall pass away."

In the revels of his court,
At the zenith of the sport,
When the palms of all his guests
Burned with clapping at his jests,
He amid his gas and wine,
Cried: "Oh, loving friends of mine!
Pleasure comes, but not to stay;
Even this shall pass away."

Fighting on a furious field,
Once a javelin pierced his shield,
Soldiers with a loud lament
Bore him bleeding to his tent;
Groaning from his tortured side,
"Pain is hard to bear," he cried,
"But with patience, day by day,
Even this shall pass away."

Towering in the public square,
Twenty cubits in the air
Rose his statue carved in stone,
Then the King, disguised, unknown,
Stood before his sculptured name,
Musing meekly, "What is fame?
Fame is but a slow decay,
Even this shall pass away."

Struck with palsy, sere and old,
Waiting all the gates of gold,
Said he, with his dying breath,
"Life is done, but what is death?"
Then in answer to the king
Fell a sunbeam on his ring
Showing by a heavenly ray—
"Even this shall pass away."

APOCHRYPHAL.

II. CHRONICLES.—CHAPTER 7.

And it came to pass in the latter times, that certain men arose who were well skilled in the law, and who sought to please the king, in order that they might find favor in his sight; for they desired to know who should be considered the greatest and the wisest in the estimation of the king.

For be it known the king, from afar off, noted the proceedings of these men, and he was greatly perplexed to know which one was the wisest, and which one was the smartest and best expounder of the law.

And it came to pass that they vied with each other, and they racked their brain to get off some good thing, whereby they might make some speech, in order that they might get applause of men.

And it came to pass that one did choose for his text the "Marriage Relation," and another took for his text the "hold out" phrase, and the third said he would speak on the "Woman Question," for they much desired to be heard for their much learning.

And they desired that the king might know of these things, and they agreed one with another, that he that should make the greatest speech and tickle the ear of the king the most with his sophistry, should be called great and should have the seat of honor.

For they desired that they might receive great gifts, and be clothed in fine apparel, and wear straw hats, and drink much strong water pleasantly prepared, out of fine vessels in the gilded palaces of Main Street.

Yea, that they might from henceforth sleep upon beds of down, with spring appliances beneath, and fine linens, and have much grandeur, and beautiful women to please their fancy.

Yea, that they might ride in chariots, drawn by fast horses, and have everything in splendor, and wear rings, and chains of gold, with studs of diamonds and precious stones.

Yea, to be exalted among men and to be near unto the king; even to the carrying out of the word of his power, and to find favor in the eyes of the most beautiful and richly attired women of the court, and also of such as walk the street in the evening time, when the electric lamps are turned on.

For be it known, that he that was lucky to obtain these favors, was sure of shekels in his pockets; yea, many of them, so that he could gratify all his whims and desires.

Therefore, they were agreed as touching this matter, and a day and a time are appointed when their speeches should be made. And all the wise men of the courts were gathered together to have a good time, and to hear what these limbs of the law had to say.

Now when he that was to judge these things, had taken the royal seat of judgment, and the nobles (?) were gathered together, these three came also, fully prepared with briefs and notes; and each was great in his own opinion, and felt assured that he would be the winning man. Therefore, when time was called, he that had chosen the "Marriage relation" was the first to take the floor and say his say, and he said it in this wise:

Most learned, powerful and wise potentate, that sitteth on the royal seat of judgment, the "marriage relation" is a great thing, yea the greatest of all other things known to us in the prosecuting of this crusade.

Yea, were it not great, neither the Commissioners nor the beautiful man would adopt it as one of their sayings, for behold they adopt not any saying that is not wise.

Yea, by the use of this phrase they deprived many of their votes. Yea, without this phrase we are sapped in the foundation for all our prosecutions of this people.

Yea, were it not so, we could not perplex, harass, annoy, divide and break up the family tie; neither could we drag to the pen only this people, for we of our liking and kind would be cut off and our glory curtailed and we be in danger of the judgment.

Yea, we could not run fast horses, nor drive in fine chariots, nor be on familiar terms with the beautiful women of the town.

Yea, instead of our gaining shekels from the king, we would have to use our means in order to defend ourselves, among ourselves.

Yea, ye know how this thing is, and how the meshes of the law are drawn; therefore, I appeal to your wisdom and greatness, to honor yourself, by deciding in my favor.

And many other things he brought to bear on this question; therefore, when he had ended his sayings, there was applause, and he thought he had the judge on his side, for lo and behold, nearly all they in the auditorium said to themselves, great is that speech and great is the "marriage relation."

So he grinned a grim smile, and chuckled to himself, and felt as proud as a young rooster with his first spurs.

Then the second who had chosen the "hold out phrase" began his speech, for he arose in confidence notwithstanding appearances were against him, yet he knew there was a soft spot somewhere, and he desired much to touch this spot, for impressions are easily made in soft places; therefore said he, May it please the king, or he who doth sit by and for the king, and who exerciseth power in his name, behold the subject I have chosen is extremely great.

Yea, how can ye tell if they have wives unless they hold them out? How shall ye know any relationship unless it be "held out?" How shall ye know anything whatever unless it is "held out" before you?

Behold, look abroad; the great government, the king, the houses of congress, the judges, the inquisitors, the deputies—yea, all men and things doth "hold out," else they do not exist.

Therefore, great and potent is the "hold out" phrase, for without it how could the crusade "hold out" in all its ramifications? Yea, how could the "marriage relation" exist unless it be "held out."

And many other points did he bring forth, and he did contend manfully for his chosen side, for he felt he had made a point, and though he did "hold out," he sat down.

And it came to pass that those who heard were mute with astonishment, at the learning and ability this man had, to construe things even to his own notion, for they had not heretofore seen it in this light.

Therefore, said they, great is this thing; it will favor us much in our crusade; and by laying hold of this thing, we will work wonders, insomuch that all mankind shall be astonished.

Therefore, we will not make our applause public, though we applaud in our hearts, for if we make loud words in applauding, this man may become vain, as we perceive by his manner he cannot bear much praise, save he become exceeding vain.

Then the third, who had taken the "woman question" for his subject, began his speech, and it was something in this wise.

Most honored sir, ye whose brow doth bear the stamp of mighty intelligence, whose age, standing and ability doth mark thee every inch a man, yea, a man in whom the king is well pleased, I perceive by your anxiety that the other two who have spoken think they have made good their impressions within the heart of your manly bosom.

I pray thee give heed unto the words I shall say. Behold, the "marriage relation" is good; yea, the "hold out" is good, but the "woman" is better.

Yea, I proceed to make known unto thee that this question is the greatest.

Yea, one that cannot be excelled: one that is all in all; one that shall strike down into insignificance all others that array themselves, or think they have cause to be great.

Yea, how could there be a "marriage relation" if there was no woman?

How could they be "held out" if the woman did not exist? Who hath rule or dominion over all these questions, if it be not the woman?

Yea, the woman hath borne the king, and all men; yea, if ye be not born of woman, how can ye be born? See ye not that this is the greatest? How could there be an Edmunds law, or how could we enforce it if there was no woman? When we say woman we mean wife? When we say "woman question" we mean wife question.

Yea, if there were no wife question, then are we not, neither are there any shekels, for do we not live and move and have our being, together with all the shekels we have obtained, by virtue of this greatest of all great questions?

And it came to pass when he had ended his sayings there was much applause and clapping of hands, for this saying pleased them.

Therefore, said he that represented the king, this man shall be greatest, and we will make him the chief of all the lawyers.

Nevertheless, the other two have said that which pleaseth us, therefore be these three things engraven in our programme, and it was done.

Now abideth in the platform the "marriage relation" the "hold out" principle, and the "wife question," but the greatest of these, is the wife question.

And they shall continue until the time of the end, but their end cometh.

Boils and Carbuncles.

These are the volcanoes of the human system. They proceed from impure blood and from a riotous demoralization of the digestive organs. They are annoying, painful and sometimes dangerous. They can be driven out by toning up the system, and this can best be done by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters. Messrs. Handy & Rullman, druggists, Annapolis, Md., say, "We sell lots of Brown's Iron Bitters. All who use it seem pleased. We hear not one complaint."

A QUESTION ABOUT Brown's Iron Bitters ANSWERED.

The question has probably been asked thousands of times, "How can Brown's Iron Bitters cure everything?" Well, it doesn't. But it does cure any disease for which a reputable physician would prescribe iron. Physicians recognize Iron as the best restorative agent known to the profession, and inquiry of any leading chemical firm will substantiate the assertion that there are more preparations of iron than of any other substance used in medicine. This shows conclusively that iron is acknowledged to be the most important factor in successful medical practice. It is however, a remarkable fact, that prior to the discovery of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS no perfect or satisfactory iron combination had ever been found.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS does not injure the teeth cause headache, or produce constipation—all other iron medicines do. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS cures Indigestion, Biliousness, Weakness, Dyspepsia, Malaria, Chills and Fevers, Tired Feeling, General Debility, Pain in the Side, Back or Limbs, Headache and Neuralgia—for all these ailments iron is prescribed daily. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, however does not cure instantly. Like all other thorough medicines it acts slowly. When taken by men the first symptom of benefit is renewed energy. The muscles then become firmer, the digestion improves, the bowels are active, in women the effect is usually more rapid and marked. The eyes begin at once to brighten; the skin clears up; healthy color comes to the cheeks; nervousness disappears; functional derangements become regular, and if a nursing mother, abundant nourishment is supplied for the child. Remember Brown's Iron Bitters is the ONLY iron medicine that is not injurious. Physicians and Druggists recommend it.
