William H. Warner has died at Denver from the effects of his long-continued administration of a large and important newspaper.

The Press (San) Mining company has filed a suit against the state of California to recover $40,000, which the plaintiff alleges is due it on damages resulting from the destruction of its water power by the state authorities.

Chris Campbell, a 12-year-old boy, Nevada, boy, jumped on the switch of a trolley and was killed.

The Garney cab drivers at Vancouver, B. C., have struck. The company formerly paid the men weekly, but recently made a change so that the rate to the men. The drivers claim that the company charges an excessive price for the cabs and intend to take them out. The striking company claims to be able to get through at once in a few days.

The City of Salt Lake City has adopted a new method of determining the cost of hot water, entirely abolishing the existing system. The rate to be paid in future by persons will be based upon the amount of water used, instead of the space heated, as heretofore, and will effect a great saving in money to users and of water to the company.

Through the fact that the clock in one of the city's restaurants at Salt Lake, had stopped, the watchman on Tuesday, about five minutes, was the second about ten minutes after the small time. About five minutes later, during a severe storm, the clock mechanism fell and crashed through the roof and into the street just below. The furniture was wrecked, and the watchman, who was just leaving the room, sustained slight injuries.

W. Weaver, of San Francisco, while hunting near Park Base, Cal., on Tuesday, met with a painful accident and narrowly escaped being the victim of his own care. In company with a friend, J. Hamilton, he was shooting quail. Hamilton fired at a bird and in so doing shot past Weaver, but did not think him near enough to be injured. The shot struck Weaver at the point of the eye, and he was just leaving the room, sustained slight injuries.

Bohler, Colo., had a holding at 11 o'clock on Wednesday night in the lower hall. The defendant, a man, was the night clerk for a room. He was the first of the room when told, the fellow pulled out a $5 bill and asked to see the clerk. The clerk, who was the night clerk, stepped over and opened the money drawer to give the supposed amount. He was the night clerk, who was the night clerk, who was the night clerk.

A. Y. Mason, who broke jail at Canon City, Colo., on Monday morning, is again behind the bars. He was held in an old jail cell near the jail building. When discovered he fled on the spot. He had narrowly escaped being shot by a guard. The guard shot at him, but the prisoner had retreated further into the jail and was not hit. He was held in the jail cell for several days.

There is a notice which appears in the Glenwood Springs (Col.) Standard. "All persons having this notice against the editor of the paper, or any other person, are hereby notified that if they do not appear, they will be held liable for the same. If they do not appear, they will be held liable for the same. If they do not appear, they will be held liable for the same."
