

NEW YEAR'S DAY IN CITY CHURCHES

Son of the Late Judge Loombourrow
Preaches Sermon in First Methodist Church.

FROM THE "SCARLET LETTER."

Dr. Paden at First Presbyterian Church—Rev. Simpkin on the Purpose of Life.

Rev. Leon L. Loombourrow of Boston, youngest son of the late Judge Loombourrow of this city, preached last evening in the First Methodist church. Special interest was manifested in the young man from the fact that he is a graduate of the Salt Lake High School and Stanford university, and his theme was the teaching in Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter." The speaker said in part:

Peter said of Judas that he went "to his own place." He did not tell what that place was, save that it belonged peculiarly to that individual man. There is a large question that his suggestion opens to us. Does each of us make and occupy his own place?

Surely there is much of seeming futility. There is a species of tree found living upon our apple trees which resembles the bark so closely that it is difficult to find them on it. Their whole life is a false pretense—appearing to be what they are not. We have our human tree toads, men who in their true nature seem to be in hiding their true nature under a false front, and often it is profitable business.

We can recall so many instances in which men fail to stand for just what they are that we need frequently to remember that words and acts are but the imperfect expression of a condition within the man, and that condition is the really significant thing. The force of law or the necessity of business may require a man from the performance of the act, but the damage to the man himself is done in the consent he gives to low impulse. These unseen things will pay us back with compound interest. But they have their power over us only because they are our sins.

The whole genius of Hawthorne is summarized in the teaching of the "Scarlet Letter" that the most esteemed surroundings cannot continue to shield a life of duplicity, while the red badge of shame can be made the sign of a life so helpful as to be indispensable. With a certainty we often overlook, we are making the place we are to occupy in the years that are before us. If we thus shape for ourselves a place distinctly our own in this world, we will find that every day is a judgment, that the living hope of our lives as it finds daily expression in thought and deed is determining not only our own place here, but in every other part of God's universe to which we may go.

DR. PADEN'S SERMON.

Rev. Dr. P. A. Paden preached Sunday morning in the First Presbyterian church from the text: "The thing that hath been is that which shall be, and that which is done is that which shall be done; and there is no new thing under the sun. Is there anything whereof it may be said, See, this is new?" Eccl. i, 10.

"And he that sat upon the throne said: Behold I make all things new; for the former things are passed away." Rev. xxi, 5.

The speaker said in part:

"The texts we have chosen are emphatic statements of two views of life. The one insists that the thing that hath been is that which shall be, that nothing is new. The other declares that former things have passed away, that all things are new. The one insists on the certain repetition of the same old order of things, the other insists with equal emphasis that new things will be made to happen. The one suggests the uniformity of nature, the other its certain variations; the one speaks of the monotony of existence, the other of the variety of life. The one suggests a fatalism and pessimism, the other suggests a variety and optimism and optimism.

The differing spirit of the two writers is a good illustration of the storied maxim: 'Men are disturbed not by things, but by the view which they take of things.' For the author of the Ecclesiastes wrote during the troubled times which preceded the dawn of the equally troubled times which succeeded the dawn. Both were wrestling with the Prince of Darkness and the beasts of the abyss. Yet while the one writes of life as vanity and vexation of spirit, the other writes of it as if it were an embodied joy, while the one fills his book with miseries, the other keeps his book ringing with glories.

"What made the difference? Was it not this: A new thing had occurred, a new thing which had made endless new things seem possible. The world had not changed, but something had happened toward it. God and mankind had not changed, but something had happened which had changed the mind and heart of the writer. What this was he tells us in his overture to the Gospel. 'The word was made flesh and dwelt

THE STOLEN HORSE.

An Old Proverb With a New Application.

The woods are full of "so-called" remedies for Baldness. You may call anything in creation a remedy, but to use them is like locking the stable after the horse is stolen. Baldness and Dandruff are caused by a germ—if you don't kill the germ the germ will kill the hair.

Scientists have labored with the problem of a preventative for Baldness for many years.

Newly discovered is the product of a modern idea, and will cure Dandruff and prevent Baldness because germs cannot exist when you apply Herpicide. Herpicide is a valuable hair dressing and scalp disinfectant as well as a cure for Dandruff.

among us, and we behold the glory full of grace and truth. The coming of Christ had given St. John the vintage ground of a new view point.

"It is not necessary to deny that the less enlightened writer caught glimpses of truth from his view point. We cannot deny the pertinence of his illustration drawn from the observed uniformity of the laws of nature. 'The sun riseth and the sun goeth down and hasteneth to his place where he arose. All the rivers run to the sea; yet the sea is not full; and the place from whence the rivers come thither they return again.' So as he suggests, we may expect the recurrence of former things in the course of human life assuredly. There are many things quite as certain as sunrise and sunset. Otherwise what would experience be good for.

"As a matter of fact, much of our faith and hope is based on the uniformity of law. It is a comfort to know that there is something we can count on in nature and human nature. Not to be able to count on the fidelity of one's friends would be almost as bad as inability to count on the dependability of the sun or the seasons. It is one of our greatest human comforts that we know men and women whose honesty, truthfulness, goodness and love we can trust. As we trust and rely on the constancy of the law of gravitation.

"Yet there is a difference between the workings, the laws of nature and those of human nature. Some, I know, would have us believe that both are without variableness of shadow of turning. This is not true of either, unless you make the possibility of variableness one of the primary laws. Otherwise there would be no progress. The higher the order of life the greater the probability of variation, the greater the probability that something new will break forth.

"The blade and the faithfulness being thus, men like Solomon, sated but not satisfied, jaded with voluptuous delights and without the assurance of faith, commonly looked out on the world with haggard eyes. They see, feel it is old and worn out. They seek and do nothing new and so try to persuade themselves that there is nothing new to be seen, felt or done."

WHAT OF THE YEAR?

Rev. P. A. Simpkin preached in the Phillips Congregational church yesterday morning on "What Shall I Make of This Year?" and in the course of his remarks, the speaker said: "The most important thing for a man, the most important view for him to have in mind, is not the details, but the purpose of life. At New Year's time this subject is paramount, for it is a time when many people choose to make changes which they have been contemplating for a long while. And when we make those changes, high purpose should be our chief consideration.

"It should not be with us a question of circumstance, but of life itself. We should have in view the end of the road. Of course, it is perfectly legitimate for young men and women starting out to try and make as much of themselves as possible. It is even necessary for them to study, to make the best use of their advantages and opportunities to train their minds and bodies. But the question which they make it into is, 'What is the value of what I am doing? It is quite legitimate, as I have said, to make the best of ourselves, if that is the means to the end and not the end itself. It is well and laudable for every one to seek improvement. If the improvement militates toward a high life, Education, culture and refinement should always be sought after, for none of us can have too much of any of these things. But behind all that we should have high ideals."

Mr. Simpkin made a special point in comparing the lives of Carnegie and Rev. Dr. David Livingston, the great African explorer and missionary, saying: "The real value of a man's work shows in what he leaves to the world. A man who devotes his life, his talents and his energies, as David Livingston did, has left a monument behind him which will last forever. The gift that he left was the opening up of a new continent, large contributions to the knowledge and wisdom of the world, and giving man a field of which he never dreamed before. Such work is worth more than all the Carnegies, the Rockefellers or any others who have managed by some means or other to amass vast fortunes, even if they scatter them before them in Alaska, to Panama, and from Maine to California. The name of David Livingston will be remembered and honored when Carnegie will not even be a myth. The work which he did for the advancement of the world and his high end in view, his wealth which the man of millions can never look at."

In closing, Mr. Simpkin said: "At this season many people are seeking to put something into the life of some one else that will give them joy. Those who carry out that principle throughout the year, and do not keep it as a luxury for New Year's and Christmas time, are those who meet the demands of God. If we try to put something into the world that will lift it up higher, we work toward the true glorifying of God. The truest way to glory here is to work for the betterment of others, to make them happy, and in the elimination of selfish ends."

FORMER AGAINST BOOTH & CO.

Wood Wins Suit Against Rio Grande
—Judgment Affirmed in Star
Grocery Case.

The supreme court handed down four opinions just before the close of the clerk's office on Saturday afternoon.

In three of the cases the judgments of the lower courts were affirmed, and in one the judgment was reversed. Justice Bartch wrote the opinion of the court in the case of A. Booth & Co. vs. G. M. Weigand, appellant, in which the judgment of the lower court was reversed. The action was brought in this county to recover for certain merchandise sold to defendant. Judgment was rendered for plaintiff, but an appeal was taken in which it was contended by defendant that the plaintiff is a foreign corporation organized under the laws of Illinois and that it has not complied with the laws of Utah by filing a copy of its articles of incorporation either with the secretary of state or the county clerk, and hence it is not legally entitled to do business in this state. This point was sustained by the opinion of the supreme court and the judgment was reversed. Chief Justice Baskin concurs in the opinion and Justice McCarthy dissents.

WOOD VS. RIO GRANDE.

In the case of Paul Wood against the Rio Grande Western Railway company, appellant, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed on an opinion written by Chief Justice Baskin and concurred in by Justices Bartch and McCarthy. The case was tried in the Seventh district court before Judge Johnson, and a verdict was rendered in favor of plaintiff for $12,000 for the loss of a leg sustained in a railway accident.

JUDGMENT AFFIRMED.

Justice McCarthy rendered the opinion of the court in the case of the Promontory Ranch company vs. Joseph Argile et al., in which the judgment of the lower court was affirmed. Plaintiff's title to a certain spring on its ranch in Boxelder county was quieted by the lower court, which judgment now stands affirmed. Chief Justice Baskin and Justice Bartch concurred in the opinion of Justice McCarthy.

WILKINSON WINS.

The opinion of the court in the case of E. J. Wilkinson, trustee of the bankruptcy stock of the Star Grocery company, vs. the Anderson-Taylor company, appellant, was written by Chief Justice Baskin and concurred in by Justices Bartch and McCarthy. The action was brought in this county to recover certain money and merchandise turned over to defendant by the Star Grocery company the day before it became insolvent. Judgment was rendered in favor of plaintiff in the lower court for $451.50. This judgment was affirmed by the supreme court.

County Jailor Bell Does a Double
Turn on State Street.

County Jailor Charles Bell picked up a couple of vagrants on State street late Saturday afternoon in a very hot way, and the men are now behind the bars, where they will probably stay for several days. The jailor was walking up State street from Third to Second South on his way to the jail when one of the "vags" stopped him and asked him for the price of a meal. His request was refused and Mr. Bell started on up the street when he was accosted by "Ho!" No. 2, evidently the "pal" of the first man, who simply commanded the jailor to give him 25 cents and that pretty quick.

Mr. Bell objected to being touched in any such manner and he pulled his handcuffs from his pocket and grabbed the man. After getting him handcuffed he started after the first fellow, who commenced to ramming his revolver. Bell commanded the fellow to halt, which he did without delay. The two were handcuffed together and marched to the city jail, where they were booked on the charge of vagrancy. They gave their names as Charles A. Marlinne and Frank Wayne.

ALVA ADAMS OR PEABODY?

Which Will be Recognized by the Colorado Legislature as Governor?

SOME DIRTY WORK IS GOING ON.

Looks as Though Some State Officials
Were Actuated by Vandenberg's
View: "The People be D—d."

Denver, Colo., Jan. 1.—Announcement was made today from Republican caucuses that when the general assembly convenes in joint session to canvass the vote for state officers, as required by the constitution, two sets of returns will be presented from the Denver election commission.

The majority report will show a plurality of about 4,000 for Alva Adams, the Democratic candidate for governor; the minority report will set forth extensive election frauds, and declare that Gov. Peabody carried this county by a plurality of about 6,000 in the remainder of the state.

No particulars concerning this minority report have yet been made public.

It is confidently asserted by the Republican leaders that the minority report from Denver will be supported by the full Republican vote in the legislature, and that the certificate of election will be awarded to Gov. Peabody, and that he will be inaugurated as governor for a second term on Jan. 16, the date set by the constitution.

This line of action, according to the view of the Republicans, will make it necessary for Adams to bring a contest if he should still care to assert any claim to the governorship.

Another announcement by the Republicans today is that the senate, when called to order next Wednesday, will consist of 21 Republicans and 13 Democrats, with one vacancy. It had been generally expected that the composition of the canvass that there would be at the outset 19 Republicans and 15 Democratic senators.

The change will be effected, it is said, by dropping Senators Daniel Healy of Leadville and R. M. Born of Alamosa from the persons entitled to seats, which is prepared by the secretary of state. These two senators were seated by the Democratic majority during the contest over the election of United States senator two years ago.

Senators Jesse F. McDonald and James E. Dick, who were unseated, still claim their senatorial election, and it is said Dick, Hargrett, president of the senate, will recognize them as members, the claim being made that there is no legal record to show that Healy and Born were seated, as the act was never legalized by the president of the senate.

When the house convenes there will be 47 Republican and 18 Democratic representatives. Therefore, if McDonald and Dick shall hold the senatorial seats occupied by Healy and Born at the session of 1905, the vote on joint ballot will be: Republicans, 68; Democrats, 31.

DODGE'S CONFESSION.

Dist. Atty. Jerome Denies He Has Made One.

New York, Jan. 1.—In spite of persistent reports which have been circulated for several days to the effect that Charles F. Dodge, the former husband of Mrs. Clemence Dodge Morse, wife of Charles W. Morse, the banker and former president of the American Ice company, has made a sensational confession in connection with the Dodge-Morse divorce case, implicating many persons, including several members of the New York bar association, Dist. Atty. Jerome said today that Dodge had made no such statement.

Since Dodge's arrival here, from Texas, he has been held practically a prisoner at the Broadway Central hotel, although he had been discharged upon his own recognizance upon his appearance in court upon suggestion of the district attorney. It was believed that the stories of a confession by Dodge were practically confirmed by Dist. Atty. Jerome when he moved for the discharge of the prisoner. Dodge had been arrested on a warrant charging perjury in connection with the Dodge-Morse divorce case.

In his announcement today, Dist. Atty. Jerome said:

"As yet Dodge has made no confession and we will not take any statement from him until his physical condition warrants him in making one. He is not a state witness yet, and until he gives some valuable information he will not be taken as such. The man is a physical wreck now and is being cared for. If he shall prove of no value as a people's witness, then he will be returned to the Tombs to stand trial on the perjury charge."

BIG RELIGIOUS REVIVAL.

Chicago Evangelists Start One in Liverpool.

Liverpool, Jan. 1.—Rev. Reuben A. Torrey and Charles Alexander, the Chicago evangelists, today opened the last three weeks of their revival crusade here with stirring scenes.

A unique feature of New Year's day was the distribution broadcast in the city by personal delivery to passersby, in private letter boxes, in saloons, etc., of 250,000 white cards inscribed simply in glaring red type "Get Right With God."

Wholesale conversions have resulted from this plan and crowds made public confessions at tonight's meeting at Tournament hall.

Four thousand converts have already inscribed their names, and it is expected that 6,000 will have made confession before the evangelists go to London for a five months' crusade, which will be on a larger scale than any similar crusade undertaken.

When it came to voting on the original resolution great opposition was expected and it was only after four times that the resolution was passed.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 1.—Jeff Lipner, a shepherd today shot and killed another shepherd, Theodore Grimsd, near Wolf Creek in this county. The killing was the result of trouble over the range. It is said that Lipner has barricaded the door of the cabin at the sheep camp and defies the authorities to take him. However, a posse in guarding and if he attempts to escape it is expected there will be trouble. The sheriff will not reach the scene of the trouble until morning.
